Columbo, DeLuca sentencing set today

by DANN GIRE

Convicted murderers Patricia Columbo and Frank DeLuca will be sentenced today for the brutal murder of Miss Columbo's family, but to Michero Brooks they both already have "gotten off easy."

"They didn't have the death penalty back when they committed the murders," said Miss Brooks, 18, Sunday. She was a playmate of Miss Columbo's when they were both youngsters.

"They should have the death penalty," she went on. "They should have no mercy."

MISS BROOKS has lived three houses from the Columbo resident at 55 E. Brantwood Dr., Elk Grove Village for 10 years. It used to be a place where Miss Columbo, her brother, Michael and parents, Frank and Mary lived in happiness.

Today, the bilevel house stands out starkly from the rest of the homes on the quiet street. Thick weeds have grown around the flowers and bushes, once neatly kept by the family.

The window in the front door has been broke and shattered pieces lie about the sidewalk to the porch where new 1977 telephone directories have sat unclaimed for about three weeks.

It was inside that home on May 4, 1976 and Patricia and her lover, Frank brutally stabbed and bludgeoned to death her family. Frank Columbo was shot four times and beaten with a lamp. Michael was shot once and stabbed 97 times. Mrs. Columbo also was shot and her throat slit.

MORE THAN A YEAR after the murders, many people who knew the Columbos are still asking the question: what moved Patricia to kill her own family: Miss Brooks is one of them.

"She was always jealous of her mother," Miss Brooks remembered. "She (Mrs. Columbo) was good looking and had a good figure. She (Mrs. Columbo) had cancer a couple of years ago and Patty just didn't care. She didn't even send her mother a get well card."

Miss Brooks admitted she was "irritated" when Miss Columbo remained "very cool about the whole thing. It just bothered me. If she gets life, that would be nice."

Art DeBartoli, 500 Woodview Ave., Elk Grove Village, a close friend of Frank Columbo felt different. "I will only say that if someone is guilty, they should have to pay," he said.

FOR MARY COLUMBO'S sister, Carolyn Tygrett of Cary, Ill., the sentencing in the Cook County Criminal Courts Building is an event she said she has dreaded since July 1 when the 7½-week trial ended. "We'll see what happens," she said.

Mrs. tygrett said she has faith in the judgment of Cook County Circuit Court Judge R. Eugene Pincham, who presided at the trial and will hand down the senence today.

"I have complete confidence in him (Pincham)," Mrs. Tygrett said. "During the trial, I have comt to know him as a judge and I think he's just fantastic. I admire him. Whatever he thinks is the appropriate sentence will be all right with me."

Telephone union gets ample pact

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite an impressive new three-year contract, the nation's telephone employes still work in an economic "never-never land" — earning more than most other service industry workers, but less than those in factories.

A tentative agreement reached Saturday night under threat of a nationwide telephone strike clearly was designed to alleviate the frustration this situation creates among the Bell System's 700,000 union employes.

To illustrate their feelings, union members stole a line from the movie "Network" for its negotiating slogan: "I'm not going to take it anymore."

The new pact incorporates many innovative benefits big factory workers' unions have won recently. And Communications Workers President Glenn Watts emphasized that the promised 31 per cent economic increase was in line with settlements obtained in the auto and steel industries.

An aide said Watts wanted his union members to feel they are getting as good a deal as the automakers and steelworkers got in recent negotiations.

"They exist in a frustrating never-never land," he said. "They work in a first class industry, and earn more than most workers. But they feel they should get as much as industrial workers."

Union officials, however, obviously do not expect telephone workers will catch up to factory workers' pay. An

Employes glad to be still working

Tom Klingsport has been a telephone tester for 18 years. And the Elk Grove Village resident is glad to be at work today as usual.

"The last thing I wanted was a strike. I was out 5½ months several years ago. Never again," said Klingsport, who has a wife and two children. He said the company could pay employes "for 24-hours around the clock and you'd never make up what you lose with a strike."

Klingsport, who works out of the Arlington Heights office of Illinois Bell, said he was "glad" about a last minute contract settlement that came just hours before Saturday's midnight deadline. But he is unsure of what effect it will "really have" on his $325 a week paycheck.

"I'm glad we settled but I don't know what it is we're really getting," Klingsport said Sunday.

UNION OFFICIALS say the settlement will provide wage and benefit increases of about 31 per cent over the next three years in line with recent agreements obtained in the auto and steel industries.

The Communications Workers union represents about 500,000 telephone workers. Two other unions, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the Telecommunications International, are expected to reach similar agreements with the Bell Sys-

Police said Sunday thes are seeking a Skokie man for questioning in the fire.

Hersey's energetic effort cited

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI

Despite one of the coldest winters in Chicago's history, Hersey High School in Arlington Heights reduced its total energy consumption by 21.3 per cent and is being recognized for its achievement by the Federal Energy Administration.

The school's reduced usage of fossil fuel and electrical energy lowered its energy costs by 7 per cent and saved High School Dist. 214 $12,552 from May 1976 to April 1977, compared to the same period the year before said Tom Cosgrove, director of the physical plant.

Hersey students didn't have to resort to walking around in jackets and mittens to achieve the savings, but instead relied on Dist. 214's computerized energy conservation system.

OTHER NORTHWEST suburban school districts that do not have such a system reported increases of between 10 and 20 per cent in fuel and electric bills because of the severe winter and the skyrocketing cost of energy.

Housed in the district's central maintenance building, the IBM Systems 7 computer keeps energy consumption and costs down by turning ventilation fans on and off as necessary at Hersey, Rolling Meadows and Buffalo Grove high schools.

The fans are routinely shut down by the computer for 10 to 15 minutes per hour without anyone feeling any discomfort, Cosgrove said.

The computer also is programmed to remember which areas of each school are in use during what hours and to turn ventilation fans off completely when they are not needed. When fans are off for a prolonged period, the computer remembers to allow sufficient warmup time before the fans are needed again.

"PEOPLE TEND TO forget to conserve energy because it's easier not to," Cosgrove said. "What we're doing is offering a mechanical memory."

Dist. 214 first tried to rely on the human memory to conserve energy but found it did not work over the

Officials cautious of new welfare plan

by PAT GERLACH

President Carter's plan to revamp the welfare system was greeted with caution Sunday by area township officials, some of whom said the program costs too much and would create too many government jobs.

Schaumburg Township Supervisor Vernon Laubenstein said he agrees with the goals of Carter's sweeping reform program but questioned the need to create an estimated 1.4 million new government jobs.

"I think what he (Carter) is doing is a step in the right direction but I wonder if we wouldn't be beter off trying to assist these people to better utilize the jobs out there now, rather than creating more new jobs," Laubenstein said.

AS TOWNSHIP supervisor, Laubenstein is in charge of supervising the general assistance program, which provides temporary financial aid to needy families.

Carter's program is designed to reduce welfare fraud and encourage able-bodied workers to find new jobs in government and private industry.

The $30.7 billion proposal, up $2.8 billion from current costs, was presented to Congress Saturday. If adopted, it would not go into effect until late 1980.

Carter has called the present system irrational and unfair, predicting the new program eventually will save taxpayers' money by taking more people off the welfare rolls and into public or private jobs and eliminating fraud and error estimated at $1.3 billion annually.

Elk Grove Township Supervisor Richard Hall said the cost of Carter's proposal "looks high."

"But if it solves the problem then it may not be very high at all," Hall said.

Hall siad he does not expect the program to have significant effects on Elk Grove Township's emergency general assistance program, which currently serves less than 20 persons each month.

"It's really too early to say how the new program might work but I think Gas to cost $1 a gallon soon, Adams predicts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Transportation Sec. Brock Adams, in an interview released Sunday, said the price of gasoline could hit $1 a gallon "very soon" if proposed energy taxes take effect and imported oil costs go up.

And when pump prices get that high, he says, Americans will finally start cutting down on fuel consumption.

In an interview with U.S. News & World Report magazine, Adams continued the get-tough theme President Carter has introduced into administration assessments of energy conservation needs.

Carter said last week that "the public is not paying attention" to his calls for voluntary reductions in energy consumption and may need to be forced into it by a new "series of crises."

ADAMS SAID one effective jolt might be a stiff and sudden price hike at the gas pump.

"When (gasoline) moves into the range of $1 a gallon, you'll see a real impact," he said.

Asked how soon that might happen Adams replied, "we'll be awfully close to that very soon. The price at the pump already is around 70 cents in many places.

"The wellhead tax will add between 4 and 7 cents a gallon. The federal gasoline tax that's being proposed (but which was rejected by the House) will tack on another 4 to 6 cents. And if the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries . . . should hike prices next year — something we can't prevent — fuel prices could be

Fanfare for uncommon Copland

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — Aaron Copland is near 77, a gentle man who has dominated nearly half a century of American music and has no regrets.

Copland, after a five-year sojourn in Paris, broke with the European school of classical music to return to his native land to write pieces that are distinctly American.

Today he is the distinctive American composer.

One of the major elements of his compositions has been the introduction of American folk songs and jazz rhythms into the more traditional classical structures.

FOLK SONGS are an easy way of sounding American," he said near the close of his residency. At the recent Santa Fe Chamber Music Festival. "It is a convenient way to be American, to set the landscape."

His "fanfare for the Common Man" and "Appalachian Spring" are two of his best-known pieces. They are works intended for a great audience, reflective of individual dignity and a vibrant society.

"I am not aware of the audience as a composer except in the subconscious," he said. "You are telling the audience of something you feel profoundly. The mere fact you feel the urge to be creative in one of the arts means you want to communicate.

"You do not write merely for ego satisfaction. It is much less significant if you do not feel you are saying something to thepublic."

HIS EARLY works were considered radical by some who were shocked at the introduction of jazz rhythms in classical pieces. They were greeted with suspicion. His first symphony stunned the conductor.

" 'If a young man of 23 can write a piece like this, in five years he will be ready to commit murder'," Copland recalled the unidentified conductor's remark. "My music was quite hard to take."

Copland concentrates on conducting today and has no real desire to labor in composition. And no reason to revise his works.

"When I am finished with a piece, I am really finished," he said. "I do not regret things, I let go."

This man is a pauper; he's got it down on paper

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Robert Sparks, 39, who sleeps in a tent and refuses to own property or punch a timeclock, has issued the first "pauper's oath" the Alameda County tax collector has seen in 31 years.

Sparks, in notarized documents to the county, the FBI and Internal Revenue Service. vows to live as a pauper and relinquish all belongings to a community church.

"I will never knowingly work for, support or defend any established concern that is profit oriented, advocates or perpetuates violence, or destroys the natural environment of this planet," the oath states.

FRANK KRAUSE, county tax collector, said Sparks's pauper's oath is the first he's seen since coming on the job in 1946.

"And I hope it's the last," Krause said. "It's nice work if you can get it, but we're not impressed."

The pauper's oath "is not worth the paper it's written on," if Sparks intends it as a meaen to duck taxes, Krause said.

Sparks' wife and two sons and 10 other persons live in an old house owned by the American Baptist Seminary of the West, while he sleeps in a tent on the property. They are allowed to stay there in exchange for renovating the house.

EXPLAINING THE oath during the weekend, Sparks said, "I no longer want to be in the closet about my feelings toward the forces that move people — like government.

"It has taken me a lot of years and a lot of thinking to come to this point in life," he said. "I feel some kind of draw on myself to do something with my own life that has meaning just to me.

"I believe in reincarnation, so perhaps I returned to this lifetime to finish out goals necessary for each of us to attain before returning to a source of origin."

Sparks' tent is pitched beneath tall redwood trees in the glade-like front yard of the two-story house near the University of California.

"Before I had the tent I used to sleep under the trees," he said.

"The only problem is Saturday morning when the garbage truck comes by at 6 o'clock and bothers everybody. It's a vexation on the spirit and an abdomination that trash should be picked up when everything is so tranquil."

Asked how soon that might happen Adams replied, "we'll be awfully close to that very soon. The price at the pump already is around 70 cents in many places.

"The wellhead tax will add between 4 and 7 cents a gallon. The federal gasoline tax that's being proposed (but which was rejected by the House) will tack on another 4 to 6 cents. And if the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries . . . should hike prices next year — something we can't prevent — fuel prices could be

200,000 acres burn in West

Forest fires burned out of control over 200,000 acres Sunday in drought-stricken California and major blazes burned in Oregon, Nevada, Arizona and Colorado as firemen from throughout the nation converged on the West.

In Alaska, where nearly 1.5 million acres of forest and tundra had burned unchecked for several days despite the efforts of 2,000 firefighters, cooling temperatures and some rain brought welcome assistance. The largest fire had blackened 335,000 acres of tundra — land normally grazed by about 4,000 reindeer — 100 miles north of Nome.

But in the "Lower 48" states, the situation was critical in the West. The National Fire Information Center in Boise, Idaho, called up 1,200 additional firefighters from throughout the United States during the weekend.

THEY SENT 480 of the fresh firemen to assist exhausted crews facing California's major conflagrations near scenic Big Sur and in the extreme northern end of the state.

Others were assigned to aid in the 7,800-acre blaze in Oregon's Fremont National Forest; an 1,800-acre fire moving at 60 acres per hour through volatile pinon, brush and juniper in Nevada's Payhroc Mountains north of Las Vegas; a 6,700-acre blaze on the Hulapai Indian Reservation in northern Arizona; and a potentially dangerous fire raging in the White River National Forest of northwest Colorado.

In California, the situation was so grim that U.S. Forest Service chief John McGuire and deputy Agriculture Sec. John White flew over the fire lines to assess the situation.

Included were the huge Scarface fire, about 60 miles from the Oregon stateline in the Modoc-Lassen National Forest, which rose in size to more than 70,000 acres and sent a tower of smoke 30,000 feet into the sky. The weather service said it was generating its own weather, causing rain in nearby Oregon.

SCARFACE RAGED through vast areas of commercial lumber just four miles from the 15,000-acre Pondosa and 10,000-acre Horr's Corner fires which merged early Sunday into a 25,000-acre blaze. Firemen feared Scarface also would merge, turning the area into a 95,000-acre inferno.

Near Big Sur in central California, the Marble Cone fire burned unchecked through 71,000 acres of the Ventana-Wilderness Area despite the efforts of 3,100 firemen. Virtually two-thirds of the pristine area had been destroyed.

The dead and dry brush "just goes like crazy," a spokesman said.

Marble Cone has cost $2.23 million to battle since it broke Aug. 1, the spokesman said. Potential loss to watershed was put at $142 million.

Other major California fires included:

- Gerig fire, 17,300 acres about nine miles southeast of Bieber in Modoc County.
- Eagle Lake fire, 7,500 acres six miles northeast of Susanville.
- Babcock fire, 4,400 acres in Plumas National Forest.
- Bonita fire, 5,000 acres in Sequoia National Forest 60 miles northeast of Bakersfield.
- Humboldt fire, 500 acres south of Fortuna on the Kings Range.

Most were ignited by lightning. Authorities said 15 new lightning strikes ignited other, smaller blazes early Sunday, bringing the total to more than 1,000 fires triggered on state and federally protected land during the past two weeks.

average switchboard operator will earn nearly $6.50 an hour by 1980, compared to an average hourly wage exceeding $8 in the basic steel industry.

Communications Workers officials nonetheless recognized a new rank-and-file militancy created by this disparity and other economic pressures, including layoffs caused by automation. The contract also sought to deal with the layoffs.

Like workers in other big industries, the telephone company employes pressed hard for "job security" measures. Thus they shaved a few days off the work year, restricted compulsory overtime and won supplemental benefits for laid off workers eligible for pension.

Pensions were another big issue, and the union got larger benefits for both current and future retirees. "You'd be surprised," a spokesman said. "People in their late 20s are talking about pensions."

The women's rights movement also had a big impact on the talks. The union claims it won extra wage increases for traditional women's jobs, and the company agreed to treat pregnancy as a disability with six weeks paid time off for childbirth and additional leave without pay.

tem.

The agreement, subject to a nationwide ratification vote in about two weeks, provides for improved job protection against layoffs, larger pensions, five extra days off, voluntary overtime and inclusion of pregnancy coverage in a health insurance plan.

Betty Smith, a clerk in the telephone company's Arlington Heights office for 10 years, said she was "pleased about the settlement but I can't understand what it is."

"If it's to be 10 per cent per year, that's exactly what we got in our last contract and that's only enough to keep pace not get ahead," Mrs. Smith said. The Arlington Heights mother of three teen-agers said that percentage would raise her $227 a week paycheck "about $23."

UNION OFFICIALS say the contract will cost the telephone company an estimated $3.3 billion over the next three years.

Mernie Miller public relations for the phone company's Arlington Heights district said telephone service and installations "will be right on schedule."

In a related matter Mount Prospect police Sunday suspected arson as the reason for several fires inside vans in a telephone company garage.

The fire, which began about 3 a.m. Saturday, gutted three installation vans, blew out windows and caused extensive smoke damage.

The garage, at 301 Arthur Ave., housed 36 vehicles, including installation vans and trucks used in construction.

"This could be vandalism but we have no way of knowing at this point," Ms. Miller said. She said the garage has not been the target of vandals in the past.

Police are seeking a Skokie man for questioning in connection with the fire.

Volcano erupts in north Japan; no one injured

TOKYO (UPI) — A volcano erupted Sunday in northern Japan, sending a column of smoke nearly 40,000 feet in the air, pelting a jumbo jetliner with rocks that cracked cockpit windows and spraying ash and debris over a 24-mile area.

Police on Japan's northernmost main island of Hokkaido ordered 20,000 tourists and 5,000 area residents to take shelter at schools and other public facilities. No casualties were reported.

The Japanese Meteorological Agency said the 2,378-foot, twin-peaked Mt. Usu erupted twice within three hours Sunday, sending a column of gray smoke 39,360 feet into the air.

All Nippon Airways said smoke jetting from the raging volcano enguled one of its Lockheed Tristar airliners and that rocks cracked two cockpit windows.

The plane, carrying 317 passengers and crew members from Sapporo, capital of Hokkaido Island, to Nagoya in western Japan, was forced to return to Sapporo, the airlines said.

Aviation authorities have ordered planes flying to and from Sapporo, site of the 1972 Winter Olympics, to steer clear of the Mt. Usu area on the southwestern part of the island.

The explosions sprayed fist-sized rocks and gray ash as far away as 24 miles from the mountain, covering the roofs of houses and farmland.

Hokkaido officials estimated damage to nearby cornfields, nearly ready for harvest, at about $11.3 million.

Located by scenic Lake Toya, the Mt. Usu area attracts a large number of tourists during the summer. Most of them had come to watch an annual fireworks display at the foot of the volcano.

The meteorological agency said the eruptions followed a series of more than 1,000 minor earthquakes during a 36-hour period.

The agency said it was the first major eruption of Mt. Usu in more than three decades. It said the 1,332-foot Mt. Showa Shinzan was created near Mt. Usu in the latter's major eruptions in 1943-45.

Police question 4 youths in molesting of 2 girls

Rolling Meadows police investigators are questioning four youths ages 10 to 12 in connection with two recent child molestings at the Whispering Glen Apartment complex, Ill. Rte. 53 and Algonquin Road, Rolling Meadows.

Detectives believe the person who assaulted two children living at the 4718 and 4706 Arbor Dr. apartment buildings is a youth about 11 years old who lives in the complex and may know his victims.

Tammy Morrow, a 3-year-old resident beaten in the building's basement a month ago, has told police her assailant was "a bad boy with dark skin" and has looked at pictures of several local boys to determine who he is.

THE FOUR YOUTHS police have in mind live in the complex and will be questioned by detectives today and Tuesday, police said. One youth reportedly lives on the same floor as Tammy Morrow, who was found in the basement by her sister and a neighbor last month with a split lip, mild concussion and bruises.

Friday, a 2-year-old girl was hit in the face before her clothes were torn off and she was sexually molested in a basement storage room in the building adjacent to her parents' apartment at 4706 Arbor Dr.

Both girls were taken to Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, where they were treated and released.

Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis R. Case has issued "strict" orders that no information on the molestings is to be released while the maters are under investigation, according to a statement from Mayor Roland J. Meyer last week.

CASE WAS UNAVAILABLE for comment Sunday.

Esther Street, mother of the 2-year-old victim, Cassandra, said Friday a neighbor boy, about 10 years old, told her where to find her daughter after she apparently had been beaten.

When police arrived, they carried a picture of one of the youths, who turned out to be the same boy who told Mrs. Street where her daughter was Friday, police said.

Explosion kills 5 in Pennsylvania

ALTOONA, Pa. (UPI) — A 12-inch pipe carrying pressurized steam ex-e ploded Sunday at a Pennsylvania Electric Co. power plant in nearby Williamsburg, killing five men, critically injuring a sixth and causing extensive damage.

"The building was filled with hot steam when I got there," Williamsburg Fire Chief William Frye said. "The injured man was the only one who managed to get outside the building. The clothing was completely blown off one of the dead workers."

Frye and state police said apparently too much pressure had built up in the pipe.

STATE POLICE said the temperature of the steam was 755 degrees fahrenheit and the pressure was at 685 pounds per square inch when the explosion occurred at 6:40 a.m. Frye estimated the pressure at 720 pounds per square inch.

Blair County Coroner Charles Burkey said the five men killed in the explosion died of steam burns and asphyxiation.

Company officials said the accident occurred during a routine turbine cleaning operation. Every six months, they said, the turbines are shut down and "blown out" and the steam pipes inspected.

"We know the pressure was there, but we don't know why," a company source was quoted as saying.

THERE WAS no immediate estimate of damage to the plant, but firemen said the blast "devastated" an area 60 by 90 feet.

The dead, all Pennsylvania residents, were identified as Howard W. Kifer, 61; Howard William Port, 60; William K. Henderson, 59; Mack G. Black, 44, and Robert C. Rupert, 57. John N. Rabits, 54, was admitted to the burn center at Mercy Hospital in Pittsburgh with third-degree burns over 80 per cent of his body.

Meanwhile in Brooklyn, a four-story building collapsed early Sunday, trapping and killing an 8-year-old girl and her father and injuring six other persons.

Rescue workers said the entire right side of the building collapsed sometime before 3:30 a.m. CDT, trapping the building's six sleeping tenants under concrete, mortar and brick rubble.

A SECONDARY collapse, which occurred after rescue workers arrived, trapped two firemen, seriously injuring one of them.

A fire department rescue unit was called to the scene after a report of an explosion, but Capt. Fred Gallagher said afterward there had been no fire or blast.

Francisco Ayala, 44, and his daughter, Marisol, were declared dead at the scene. Firemen found their bodies buried beneath the rubble.

Four other residents and two firemen were taken to Long Island College Hospital.

Ada Flores, 18, was reported in serious condition and Mariana Olivera, 50, was in fair condition, hospital authorities said. Roxanne Ayala, 16, and Francisco Ayala Jr., 12, were treated and released.

Fireman William Polera, 39, was reported in serious condition with a possible spinal injury. Another fireman, Frank Hauber, 34, suffered a twisted knee and was treated and released from the hospital.

Only two floors of the building remained standing after the collapse.

around the 90 cent to $1 level."

IN RESPONSE to other questions, Adams said he believes the government would start rationing gasoline "only in an emergency, such as another embargo."

He also said the administration has started pressuring states to stick with the 55 mile per hour speed limit by threatening to cut off federal highway funds if they do not.

"Every time a bill comes up in a state legislature that would raise the speed limit from 55 to 65," he said, "I tell them, 'If you pass it, we'll cut off your federal highway funds.'" He said the threat has worked in every case — although he did not say which states had been involved — and no highway funds have been withheld.

Central Illinois ripped by tornado

SPRINGFIELD, Ill (UPI) — Clean-up operations, suspended because of early morning thundershowers, resumed Sunday in the wake of a tornado that damaged more than 30 homes in areas around the state's capital city.

Chatham Mayor John Whitney said 34 homes were severely damaged in the Glenwood Estates subdivision Saturday night. Several homes were severely damaged in eastern Sangamon County in the Rochester area.

No serious injuries were reported but property damage was estimated at at least $2 million.

SUBDIVISION ROADS were cleared Sunday morning but damaged houses were left untouched until insurance adjusters could make their settlements.

Whiteney said the National Guard has offered to assist in cleanup operations but no decision had been made on whether to accept the troops.

Early morning lightning touched off several small fires, damaging at least two houses in Springfield. A number of area residents reported difficulty in getting propane gas suppliers out to their damaged homes to shut off gas supplies.

Four persons were slightly hurt when their trailer home near Rochester overturned.

TWO SMALL planes were forced down by the storm. One plane landed and overturned behind a crowded campground south of Springfield. The other plane landed on U.S. 36 in Morgan County, and took off when the storm passed.

Authorities declared a curfew in Glenwood Estates. They said the curfew was to ease movement of vehicles in the area — not because of any looting.

MR. AND MRS. TED Derada and their children, Brian, 10, and Charlene, 9, stand near the remains of their home after a tornado swept through Chatham, Ill., located about 10 miles south of Springfield. The twister destroyed 14 homes and damaged 12 others. No serious injuries were reported.

"It was horrible," said Don McNeeley, who was trapped in his car as he watched the tornado carry boards and other debris from damaged buildings.

Lee Myer saw one neighbor's home destroyed, ducked into his basement, and returned upstairs to see another neighbor's home gone. His own home was hit by another house.

Anthony R. Martin-Trigona said Sunday he seeks to have Ill. Rte. 51 designated as part of the federal interstate system. He said he filed a petition to that effect with the U.S. Sec. of Transportation, Brock Adams. Martin-Trigona said last month he will be a democratic candidate for U.S. senator.

Holewinski charges 'redlining'

State Rep. Michael S. Holewinski, D-Chicago, said Sunday neighborhoods near minority communities have a high rate of mortgage "redlining" against them. He studied reports filed by 18 banks on Chicago's Northwest Side in reaching his conclusion. "The study statistically confirms allegations that entire neighborhoods in Chicago have been virtually sentenced to death as a result of redlining," Holewinski said. When homeowners cannot obtain conventional financing, they have to seek Federal Housing Authority financing, which serves only to "substantially depress property values," the study said.

Local officials cautious of Carter's welfare plan

it needs plenty of study before Congress or anyone goes ahead," Hall said.

The Carter program calls for federal government assistance in helping persons from low-income families to find jobs, both in government and private industry. The jobs, which would pay the minimum wage or slightly above, would range from child care and cleanup of cities to public safety work.

It also would replace aid for families with dependent children and the food stamp program with a new work benefit and income support system. Under the proposal two-parent families, singles, childless couples and single parents with children older than 14 would be expected to work full-time and be required to accept available jobs with cash income supplements up to $8,900.

INCOME support also would go to the aged, blind and disabled and single parents of children under 14, although single parents with children older than 6 would be required to accept jobs that do not interfere with child care.

Wheeling Township Supervisor Ethel Kolerus said she requested but has not received a copy of the Carter legislation.

Palatine Township Supervisor Howard Olsen said he has not become "thoroughly familiar" with the proposed plan but doubts it will have much effect on his township's general assistance program.

"I guess it will, though, have considerable effect on Cook County's welfare program," Olsen said.

The Carter plan also would provide income payments totaling $2,500 a year to aged, blind or disabled persons, with couples in this category getting $3,750, slightly higher than their current benefits.

The plan also calls for expansion of the current earned-income tax credit program to provide more tax relief to employed low-income workers. President Carter proposed continuing the current 10 per cent credit on earnings up to $4,000 a year. But it would add a 5 per cent credit on earnings between $4,000 and $9,000 for a family of four.

"Saga of the Upholstered Board"

Scene: Office of the Sales Manager of the major mattress manufacturing company.

Sales Manager: What is this terrific new idea of yours?

Product Engineer: It's a new mattress with a board in the middle. It makes the mattress harder than — I mean it makes it very hard.

Sales Manager: Sounds good. We could call it the "Board-O-Pedic." The public wants hard mattresses today. We've been spending enough money telling them this for the last ten years.

Product Engineer: We do use a little foam padding, but with the board in the middle, you hardly feel the padding.

Sales Manager: Have you tried it yourself?

Product Engineer: Sure! I used it for three nights and it almost killed me. But it's harder than any of our competitors are making so it should sell.

Sales Manager: Maybe we should call in the "Upholstered Board"?

Product Manager: I don't know — there's a little company called Schaumburg Mattress Factory that makes fun of these hard mattresses. They tell their customers they shouldn't sleep on these "Upholstered Boards."

Sales Manager: How do you know so much about the Schaumburg Mattress Factory?

Product Engineer: That's where I bought my mattress and man, is it comfortable!!!

Exit: Product Engineer.

Fanfare for uncommon Copland

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — Aaron Copland is near 77, a gentle man who has dominated nearly half a century of American music and has no regrets.

Copland, after a five-year sojourn in Paris, broke with the European school of classical music to return to his native land to write pieces that are distinctly American.

Today he is the distinctive American composer.

One of the major elements of his compositions has been the introduction of American folk songs and jazz rhythms into the more traditional classical structures.

FOLK SONGS are an easy way of sounding American," he said near the close of his residency. At the recent Santa Fe Chamber Music Festival. "It is a convenient way to be American, to set the landscape."

His "fanfare for the Common Man" and "Appalachian Spring" are two of his best-known pieces. They are works intended for a great audience, reflective of individual dignity and a vibrant society.

"I am not aware of the audience as a composer except in the subconscious," he said. "You are telling the audience of something you feel profoundly. The mere fact you feel the urge to be creative in one of the arts means you want to communicate.

"You do not write merely for ego satisfaction. It is much less significant if you do not feel you are saying something to thepublic."

HIS EARLY works were considered radical by some who were shocked at the introduction of jazz rhythms in classical pieces. They were greeted with suspicion. His first symphony stunned the conductor.

" 'If a young man of 23 can write a piece like this, in five years he will be ready to commit murder'," Copland recalled the unidentified conductor's remark. "My music was quite hard to take."

Copland concentrates on conducting today and has no real desire to labor in composition. And no reason to revise his works.

"When I am finished with a piece, I am really finished," he said. "I do not regret things, I let go."

This man is a pauper; he's got it down on paper

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Robert Sparks, 39, who sleeps in a tent and refuses to own property or punch a timeclock, has issued the first "pauper's oath" the Alameda County tax collector has seen in 31 years.

Sparks, in notarized documents to the county, the FBI and Internal Revenue Service. vows to live as a pauper and relinquish all belongings to a community church.

"I will never knowingly work for, support or defend any established concern that is profit oriented, advocates or perpetuates violence, or destroys the natural environment of this planet," the oath states.

FRANK KRAUSE, county tax collector, said Sparks's pauper's oath is the first he's seen since coming on the job in 1946.

"And I hope it's the last," Krause said. "It's nice work if you can get it, but we're not impressed."

The pauper's oath "is not worth the paper it's written on," if Sparks intends it as a meaen to duck taxes, Krause said.

Sparks' wife and two sons and 10 other persons live in an old house owned by the American Baptist Seminary of the West, while he sleeps in a tent on the property. They are allowed to stay there in exchange for renovating the house.

EXPLAINING THE oath during the weekend, Sparks said, "I no longer want to be in the closet about my feelings toward the forces that move people — like government.

"It has taken me a lot of years and a lot of thinking to come to this point in life," he said. "I feel some kind of draw on myself to do something with my own life that has meaning just to me.

"I believe in reincarnation, so perhaps I returned to this lifetime to finish out goals necessary for each of us to attain before returning to a source of origin."

Sparks' tent is pitched beneath tall redwood trees in the glade-like front yard of the two-story house near the University of California.

"Before I had the tent I used to sleep under the trees," he said.

"The only problem is Saturday morning when the garbage truck comes by at 6 o'clock and bothers everybody. It's a vexation on the spirit and an abdomination that trash should be picked up when everything is so tranquil."

Home-rule may change drink age

Arlington Heights will consider using its home-rule powers to change the legal drinking age for beer and wine from 19 to 21.

Village Trustee August Bettman said he will call for public hearings on the proposal because the Illinois General Assembly rejected similar bills this summer.

"It would be much more effective if it was changed statewide or at least regionally, but I see so much evidence of underaged kids drinking in Arlington Heights that I see no reason why we shouldn't do something," Bettman, chairman of the village board's legal committee, said.

THE MINIMUM drinking age for beer and wine was lowered to 19 by the state legislature in 1973, while the drinking age for hard liquor remained at 21.

The board's legal committee today will attempt to set a date for hearings after conferring with members of the Arlington Heights Youth Council.

Both groups meet at 8 p.m. today at the municipal building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

Bettman said the lower drinking age can be blamed for increases in traffic accidents and vandalism in Arlington Heights.

"THE TROUBLE IS that it's not just the 19 and 20-year-olds that are drinking. They pass it on to their buddies who are 16, 17 and 18," Bettman said. "It's got to be liquor or else dope that fires these kids up."

Similar plans to change the legal drinking age to 21 have been considered in Palatine, Des Plaines and Hoffman Estates but were dropped after officials decided the change would be futile if neighboring municipalities did not change.

"My theory is that if they want it badly enough, they'll go somewhere else to get it," Bettman said. "But why should we make it so readily available here? I just don't think the average 19-year-old can hold his beer and wine."

SOME LOCAL liquor retailers also have said they favor returning the legal age to 21, Bettman said.

Capt. Paul Buckholz of the Arlington Heights police said the police department favors the change because so many 16 and 17-year-old youths are able to get beer and wine through their slightly older friends.

"Statistics show drinking is involved in 90 to 95 per cent of all fatal traffic accidents and it certainly is a problem with younger drivers," Buckholz said.

Puzzle-thon winner

Jeffrey Mueller, 5, was one of the top five contestants in a recent puzzle-thon to benefit the Childhood Cancer Research Foundation.

Jeffrey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Mueller, 930 S. State Rd., Arlington Heights, assembled a 25-piece puzzle after finding sponsors to pledge a penny or more for each piece of the puzzle.

He collected $58 in pledges and won a gift certificate from the Childhood Cancer Research Foundation for his efforts. More than $3,000 was collected at the puzzle-thon at Northbrook Court, Northbrook.

Group of elderly blind enjoy history books most

by PAUL GORES

A lot of people might think that at age 92 and legally blind, Mary Kenney would have little concern for books about American history.

But like about 10 other blind residents of St. Joseph's Home for the Elderly in Palatine, American history books are among the things Mrs. Kenney enjoys most.

The group meets twice each week in the small library at St. Joseph's to listen to "talking books," a federally sponsored educational program for the blind.

Mary Kenney

"TALKING BOOKS" are records containing the text of numerous fiction and nonfiction books. The records are free to the blind and are supplied to the group at St. Joseph's by the Palatine Public Library.

The group has chosen American history as the general topic for their listening sessions, said Marion Joadwine, the coordinator of the program. Mrs. Joadwine also is legally blind.

"As we go through these things it's amazing the things they remember," Mrs. Joadwine said. "We've sampled other books but we always end up coming back to the same old thing — American history."

"I think in the records we get the truth much more than you get at school," said Mae McKinley, a member of the group. "In school they varnish the books so much."

THE GROUP'S "listening list" has included books on Watergate, Theodore Roosevelt, Benedict Arnold, John F. Kennedy, the history of Utah and Fidel Castro.

Mrs. Joadwine said that after hearing the recording of "With Fidel," a book by Frank Mankiewicz and Kirby Jones, the group wanted to hear another book on Castro.

"We're looking for another book to give a different view," she said. "That one was slanted, definitely slanted in favor of Castro."

One of the history buffs who sometimes records the sessions is Bill Woodruff, 86.

"IT'S WORTHWHILE, it's wonderful," Woodruff said. "We hear all the history events we have forgotten."

Mrs. Joadwine said that by listening to the text of one of the history books, Woodruff learned that his relatives brought the first newspaper to Arkansas.

The group, which includes persons from 61 to 92 years old, has been meeting at St Joseph's for about three years, Mrs. Joadwine said.

Mrs. Joadwine said the oldest participant, Mrs. Kenney, is responsible for much of the input into the group's discussion.

"SHE DOES A lot of the talking and gets all the things out of the books," Mrs. Joadwine said.

Mrs. Joadwine said many persons are surprised to learn there is a group of blind senior citizens who get together to listen to the "talking books."

"There's not any of us in a hurry or going anywhere," she said. "There's time to digest this and talk about it."

Calderwood listed in fair condition

L.W. Calderwood, former Arlington Heights police chief, was in fair condition Sunday in the coronary-care unit of Northwest Community Hospital.

Hospital officials say the 73-year-old Arlington Heights resident was in serious condition when he was admitted for threatment last week after fainting.

Calderwood retired last year after 18-years as village police chief.

FEA honors Hersey for energy-saving effort

long haul, he said. While school personnel reduced energy consumption during the Arab oil embargo in early 1974, "the retaining of conservatory habits became just too heavy a burden to bear" after the first enthusiastic effort, he said.

With the energy cost forecast for the district's eight schools approaching $1 million, Dist. 214 officials two years ago agreed that something more than manual control of the schools' heating and ventilating equipment was needed, Cosgrove said.

In March 1976, IBM's computerized energy conservation system was hooked up to the district's three centrally air-conditioned schools. The move has already saved the district $126,284, about $29,000 more than the district paid for the system, Cosgrove said. Allowing for increased energy costs, but not for increased fuel consumption necessitated by the severe winter, the estimate is a conservative one, he said.

"PREVIOUSLY, WE could've operated at peak level for 60 days before anyone knew it because it didn't show up until we were billed," Cosgrove said. "Now we know hour by hour and day by day how we're doing on energy usage and where improvements can be made."

While energy consumption at Rolling Meadows and Buffalo Grove high schools dropped by about 14 per cent during the computerized system's first year of operation, the savings at Hersey was much greater. Cosgrove said this is because the school is beter insulated, has less window space and has a heating system which is more conducive to conservation.

Criminals aren't libbers: report

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The government Sunday released a report challenging the theory that women's liberation is responsible for recent sharp increases in crimes committed by women.

The report, released by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, was based on a 14-state survey of 1,600 women inmates involved in crimes ranging from shoplifting to burglary, armed robber and murder.

"The media, among others . . . assert that the apparent sharp increase in the female arrest rate is 'the dark side of women's liberation,' " the 350-page report said.

BUT THE researchers said theories linking women's crimes with "rejection of the female role fail to account for the large number of women for whom this idealized (liberated) role is neither possible nor desirable."

The 1975 FBI Crime Report — the latest which breaks down crime by sex — showed the arrest rate for women was up 125.3 per cent from 1960 while the rate for men increased 22.8 per cent. Among women under 18, the rate was up 253.9 per cent, compared to an increase of 101.7 per cent for men the same ages.

Researchhers noted that trends toward liberation and the increase in women criminals occurred at the same time, but noted there was a simultaneous rise in drug use and other "major and minor social upheavals."

"It is virtually imporsible to single out the women's liberation movement as the cause of the rise in female crime," the report said.

THE SURVEY, largest of its kind, included 15 state prisons and 42 local jails in California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, New York, Massachusetts, North Carolina, Texas and Washington.

It was conducted by the California Youth Authority and financed by a $293,000 LEAA grant. The project director was Ruth Glick, now planning chief of the California Corrections Dept.

Summaries of responses to a 12-page questionnaire showed women prisoners hold mixed views on sex roles:

- 91 per cent agreed that "it's imoprtant for women to have children."
- 66 per cent disagreed with the statement, "I've worked harder than most men I've known."
- 74 per cent disagreed that, "If I had a choice I'd rather stay at home than have a job."
- 87 per cent disagreed that a job "would probably be a drag."
- 52 per cent said a man "has a right to insist that his women stay at home rather than take a job," but 50 per cent of the whie women disagreed.
- 52 per cent disagreed that a woman should "expect her man to support her," and 65 per cent of those with some college training disagreed.

Manson disciple to get 3rd trial?

A date has been set to determine if former Charles Manson "family" member Leslie Van Houten will be tried yet a third time for murder — but there also is a possibility she soon may go free. Her second trial ended Saturday in a mistrial after the jury reported it was hopelessly deadlocked. Superior Court Judge Edward Hinz Jr. set Sept. 12 as a date for a hearing to determine if she will be tried again. There is a chance that trial will never be held. A meeting is scheduled this week to discuss the possibility of a plea bargain. Should the district attorney's office accept a guilty plea to manslaughter or second-degree murder, Miss Van Houten — because of time already served — could be freed on parole within a short time. Miss Van Houten, now 27, was convicted in a 1970-71 trial of first-degree murder in the stabbing deaths of Rosemary and Leno LaBianca the night after actress Sharon Tate and four other persons were slaughtered in a Benedict Canyon estate.

Home explosion kills three

A powerful explosion ripped apart a brick home early Sunday, killing three members of a family and injuring a fourth in Evanston, Wyo. Authorities investigated the possibility the blast might have been set deliberately. Attorney Victor Vehar, 67; his wife, Beverly, and son, John, 18 were killed. Another son, Tony, a Kemmerer, Wyo., attorney, was injured and listed in fair condition at University Hospital in Salt Lake City. The Mountain Fuel Supply Co., the utility that serves the Evanston area, said the pre-dawn explosion was not caused by natural gas. It said a gas meter inside the house was still operating after the blast.

Scout injured by lightning

Cal D. Armstrong, a 16-year-old Boy Scout from Utah, was critically injured when struck by lightning while running between two troop sites at the National Scout Jamboree in Butler, Pa. About 18,500 Boy Scouts were camped at the 17,000-acre Moraine State Park for the 1977 Jamboree which ends Tuesday. A scout officials said Armstrong was running across "reasonably flat ground" where the western region troops were quartered when he was struck down during a brief but severe thunderstorm Saturday. Armstrong is a member of the Utah Peak's Council in Santaquin.

Sen. Church on Cuba trip

As part of the move toward re-establishing full diplomatic relations with Cuba, Sen. Frank Church flies to Havana today on a trip that may result in the release of several Americans held on political charges. Church, D-Idaho, will make the trip on an American military plane, the first U.S. military craft to land at Havana's airport since the two nations broke relations more than 16 years ago. He was invited by Cuban President Fidel Castro. U.S. State Dept. officials and congressional sources said Castro, in a gesture toward the Carter administration, may highlight the four-day Church visit with the release of some or all of the seven American citizens held in Cuban jails on political charges. The State Dept. did not identify them. The trip is seen as another step in what is expected to be a long and gradual process of improving relations between Cuba and America.

Legal tangle over club fire

A major legal controversy is brewing over the tangle of lawsuits, totalling some $870 million, filed on behalf of victims of the tragic Beverly Hills Supper Club fire. The dispute centers on whether the mass of litigation from the May 28 Southgate, Ky., blaze, which killed 164 persons and injured 51 others, ultimately should be considered in federal court as a class action, or a series of individual lawsuits. The problem is that the maximum amount of money available for any damages awards is only a small fraction of the total damages claimed on behalf of the dead and injured. One lawyer estimates there is only about $3 million available to divide among the scores of plaintiffs. Attorneys favoring the class action approach clashed in a pretrial conference called Friday by U.S. District Judge Carl B. Rubin as a first step toward organizing some 20 federal lawsuits stemming from the blaze.

Irish youths protest queen's visit

British troops fired plastic bullets Sunday to drive off hundreds of rock-throwing Irish Republican youths protesting Queen Elizabeth's second visit to Belfast, Northern Ireland, since her coronation 25 years ago. Dozens of helmeted soldiers charged into the mob of about 300 youths and arrested six of the demonstrators. No injuries were reported. An army spokesman said the clash broke out at the end of a march by some 2,000 militant Irish Republicans to protest the royal visit.

Japanese students attack police

Student radicals wearing red helmets and armed with hoemade fire bombs attacked police Sunday at Tokyo's new $733 million international airport, attempting to halt the first day of noise tests by a jumbo jet. Police said two of the 3,200 riot police guarding the airport were injured. One suffered burns from a fire bomb while another was seriously injured when hit by a truck driven by one of the students. The attack occurred after about 1,000 student radicals and farmers held a protest rally near the new airport at Narita, about 40 miles south of Tokyo.

Cities use imagination in spendng U.S. funds

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Brevard County, Fla., plans to train as many of its citizens as possible to perform cardio-pulmonary resuscitation so they can save the lives of people who have sudden heart attacks.

Buffalo, N.Y., hopes to teach old people how to protect themselves against crime.

New Bedford, Mass., proposes a theater arts program.

And in Bodega Bay, Calif., a young graduate student has been set to work measuring how much lobsters eat.

THOSE VARIED enterprises are among thousands of projects starting up around the country as a result of Congress' decision in May to more than double the number of federally finnaced public service jobs from 300,000 to 725,000.

The increase is part of a package of programs enacted at President Carter's urging to stimulate economic recovery and help reduce unemployment.

The public service job expansion is running about two months behind schedule, partly because it took Congress longer than expected to appropriate the money, and the U.S. Labor Dept. estimates the level of 725,000 jobs will be reached by the end of February instead of early January as originally planned.

Congress ordered that new jobs in the expanded part of the program be used for specific "projects" which a community otherwise could not afford to start. Localities can use the original part of the program to hire workers for ongoing activities, such as police and fire protection.

As a result of the expansion, communities and nonprofit organizations have been thinking up local projects for which the federal government pays employes' wages.

SYRACUSE, N.Y., proposed a career development program using city schools in the evenings for youngsters who otherwise might run afoul of the law. The government will pay the $9,250 salaries of two outreach workers for it.

Similarly, the Bodega Marine Laboratory got approval for a public service employe to study how much lobsters eat under different conditions. The lab says that will help show how they might be reared commercially.

A look through Labor Dept. reports on approved projects also turned up these proposals:

- House parents for a group home for delinquent girls in Seattle, Wash.
- Renovating antique sleighs, wagons, buggies and surries in Waukesha, Wis., for an exhibit on horse-drawn transportation.
- An information service for minority businessmen in Anchorage, Alaska.
- A modern art exhibit in Kansas City, Mo. Also a project to transport elderly, Spanish-speaking persons to and from clinics and social agencies, with a translation service thrown in.
- Rehabilitating alcoholics in Rome, Ga.
- Interviewing arrested persons in the St. Petersburg, Fla., area to gather information to speed the bail process.
- Training youngsters to be auto mechanics and nurses aides in Greeley, Colo.
- Weatherizing homes of the poor in Olympia, Wash.
- Making an index to Visalia, Calif., City Countil minutes, resolutions and ordinances.

200,000 acres burn in West

Forest fires burned out of control over 200,000 acres Sunday in drought-stricken California and major blazes burned in Oregon, Nevada, Arizona and Colorado as firemen from throughout the nation converged on the West.

In Alaska, where nearly 1.5 million acres of forest and tundra had burned unchecked for several days despite the efforts of 2,000 firefighters, cooling temperatures and some rain brought welcome assistance. The largest fire had blackened 335,000 acres of tundra — land normally grazed by about 4,000 reindeer — 100 miles north of Nome.

But in the "Lower 48" states, the situation was critical in the West. The National Fire Information Center in Boise, Idaho, called up 1,200 additional firefighters from throughout the United States during the weekend.

THEY SENT 480 of the fresh firemen to assist exhausted crews facing California's major conflagrations near scenic Big Sur and in the extreme northern end of the state.

Others were assigned to aid in the 7,800-acre blaze in Oregon's Fremont National Forest; an 1,800-acre fire moving at 60 acres per hour through volatile pinon, brush and juniper in Nevada's Payhroc Mountains north of Las Vegas; a 6,700-acre blaze on the Hulapai Indian Reservation in northern Arizona; and a potentially dangerous fire raging in the White River National Forest of northwest Colorado.

In California, the situation was so grim that U.S. Forest Service chief John McGuire and deputy Agriculture Sec. John White flew over the fire lines to assess the situation.

Included were the huge Scarface fire, about 60 miles from the Oregon stateline in the Modoc-Lassen National Forest, which rose in size to more than 70,000 acres and sent a tower of smoke 30,000 feet into the sky. The weather service said it was generating its own weather, causing rain in nearby Oregon.

SCARFACE RAGED through vast areas of commercial lumber just four miles from the 15,000-acre Pondosa and 10,000-acre Horr's Corner fires which merged early Sunday into a 25,000-acre blaze. Firemen feared Scarface also would merge, turning the area into a 95,000-acre inferno.

Near Big Sur in central California, the Marble Cone fire burned unchecked through 71,000 acres of the Ventana-Wilderness Area despite the efforts of 3,100 firemen. Virtually two-thirds of the pristine area had been destroyed.

The dead and dry brush "just goes like crazy," a spokesman said.

Marble Cone has cost $2.23 million to battle since it broke Aug. 1, the spokesman said. Potential loss to watershed was put at $142 million.

Other major California fires included:

- Gerig fire, 17,300 acres about nine miles southeast of Bieber in Modoc County.
- Eagle Lake fire, 7,500 acres six miles northeast of Susanville.
- Babcock fire, 4,400 acres in Plumas National Forest.
- Bonita fire, 5,000 acres in Sequoia National Forest 60 miles northeast of Bakersfield.
- Humboldt fire, 500 acres south of Fortuna on the Kings Range.

Most were ignited by lightning. Authorities said 15 new lightning strikes ignited other, smaller blazes early Sunday, bringing the total to more than 1,000 fires triggered on state and federally protected land during the past two weeks.

average switchboard operator will earn nearly $6.50 an hour by 1980, compared to an average hourly wage exceeding $8 in the basic steel industry.

Communications Workers officials nonetheless recognized a new rank-and-file militancy created by this disparity and other economic pressures, including layoffs caused by automation. The contract also sought to deal with the layoffs.

Like workers in other big industries, the telephone company employes pressed hard for "job security" measures. Thus they shaved a few days off the work year, restricted compulsory overtime and won supplemental benefits for laid off workers eligible for pension.

Pensions were another big issue, and the union got larger benefits for both current and future retirees. "You'd be surprised," a spokesman said. "People in their late 20s are talking about pensions."

The women's rights movement also had a big impact on the talks. The union claims it won extra wage increases for traditional women's jobs, and the company agreed to treat pregnancy as a disability with six weeks paid time off for childbirth and additional leave without pay.

tem.

The agreement, subject to a nationwide ratification vote in about two weeks, provides for improved job protection against layoffs, larger pensions, five extra days off, voluntary overtime and inclusion of pregnancy coverage in a health insurance plan.

Betty Smith, a clerk in the telephone company's Arlington Heights office for 10 years, said she was "pleased about the settlement but I can't understand what it is."

"If it's to be 10 per cent per year, that's exactly what we got in our last contract and that's only enough to keep pace not get ahead," Mrs. Smith said. The Arlington Heights mother of three teen-agers said that percentage would raise her $227 a week paycheck "about $23."

UNION OFFICIALS say the contract will cost the telephone company an estimated $3.3 billion over the next three years.

Mernie Miller public relations for the phone company's Arlington Heights district said telephone service and installations "will be right on schedule."

In a related matter Mount Prospect police Sunday suspected arson as the reason for several fires inside vans in a telephone company garage.

The fire, which began about 3 a.m. Saturday, gutted three installation vans, blew out windows and caused extensive smoke damage.

The garage, at 301 Arthur Ave., housed 36 vehicles, including installation vans and trucks used in construction.

"This could be vandalism but we have no way of knowing at this point," Ms. Miller said. She said the garage has not been the target of vandals in the past.

Police are seeking a Skokie man for questioning in connection with the fire.

Volcano erupts in north Japan; no one injured

TOKYO (UPI) — A volcano erupted Sunday in northern Japan, sending a column of smoke nearly 40,000 feet in the air, pelting a jumbo jetliner with rocks that cracked cockpit windows and spraying ash and debris over a 24-mile area.

Police on Japan's northernmost main island of Hokkaido ordered 20,000 tourists and 5,000 area residents to take shelter at schools and other public facilities. No casualties were reported.

The Japanese Meteorological Agency said the 2,378-foot, twin-peaked Mt. Usu erupted twice within three hours Sunday, sending a column of gray smoke 39,360 feet into the air.

All Nippon Airways said smoke jetting from the raging volcano enguled one of its Lockheed Tristar airliners and that rocks cracked two cockpit windows.

The plane, carrying 317 passengers and crew members from Sapporo, capital of Hokkaido Island, to Nagoya in western Japan, was forced to return to Sapporo, the airlines said.

Aviation authorities have ordered planes flying to and from Sapporo, site of the 1972 Winter Olympics, to steer clear of the Mt. Usu area on the southwestern part of the island.

The explosions sprayed fist-sized rocks and gray ash as far away as 24 miles from the mountain, covering the roofs of houses and farmland.

Hokkaido officials estimated damage to nearby cornfields, nearly ready for harvest, at about $11.3 million.

Located by scenic Lake Toya, the Mt. Usu area attracts a large number of tourists during the summer. Most of them had come to watch an annual fireworks display at the foot of the volcano.

The meteorological agency said the eruptions followed a series of more than 1,000 minor earthquakes during a 36-hour period.

The agency said it was the first major eruption of Mt. Usu in more than three decades. It said the 1,332-foot Mt. Showa Shinzan was created near Mt. Usu in the latter's major eruptions in 1943-45.

Police question 4 youths in molesting of 2 girls

Rolling Meadows police investigators are questioning four youths ages 10 to 12 in connection with two recent child molestings at the Whispering Glen Apartment complex, Ill. Rte. 53 and Algonquin Road, Rolling Meadows.

Detectives believe the person who assaulted two children living at the 4718 and 4706 Arbor Dr. apartment buildings is a youth about 11 years old who lives in the complex and may know his victims.

Tammy Morrow, a 3-year-old resident beaten in the building's basement a month ago, has told police her assailant was "a bad boy with dark skin" and has looked at pictures of several local boys to determine who he is.

THE FOUR YOUTHS police have in mind live in the complex and will be questioned by detectives today and Tuesday, police said. One youth reportedly lives on the same floor as Tammy Morrow, who was found in the basement by her sister and a neighbor last month with a split lip, mild concussion and bruises.

Friday, a 2-year-old girl was hit in the face before her clothes were torn off and she was sexually molested in a basement storage room in the building adjacent to her parents' apartment at 4706 Arbor Dr.

Both girls were taken to Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, where they were treated and released.

Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis R. Case has issued "strict" orders that no information on the molestings is to be released while the maters are under investigation, according to a statement from Mayor Roland J. Meyer last week.

CASE WAS UNAVAILABLE for comment Sunday.

Esther Street, mother of the 2-year-old victim, Cassandra, said Friday a neighbor boy, about 10 years old, told her where to find her daughter after she apparently had been beaten.

When police arrived, they carried a picture of one of the youths, who turned out to be the same boy who told Mrs. Street where her daughter was Friday, police said.

Explosion kills 5 in Pennsylvania

ALTOONA, Pa. (UPI) — A 12-inch pipe carrying pressurized steam exploded Sunday at a Pennsylvania Electric Co. power plant in nearby Williamsburg, killing five men, critically injuring a sixth and causing extensive damage.

"The building was filled with hot steam when I got there," Williamsburg Fire Chief William Frye said. "The injured man was the only one who managed to get outside the building. The clothing was completely blown off one of the dead workers."

Frye and state police said apparently too much pressure had built up in the pipe.

STATE POLICE said the temperature of the steam was 755 degrees fahrenheit and the pressure was at 685 pounds per square inch when the explosion occurred at 6:40 a.m. Frye estimated the pressure at 720 pounds per square inch.

Blair County Coroner Charles Burkey said the five men killed in the explosion died of steam burns and asphyxiation.

Company officials said the accident occurred during a routine turbine cleaning operation. Every six months, they said, the turbines are shut down and "blown out" and the steam pipes inspected.

"We know the pressure was there, but we don't know why," a company source was quoted as saying.

THERE WAS no immediate estimate of damage to the plant, but firemen said the blast "devastated" an area 60 by 90 feet.

The dead, all Pennsylvania residents, were identified as Howard W. Kifer, 61; Howard William Port, 60; William K. Henderson, 59; Mack G. Black, 44, and Robert C. Rupert, 57. John N. Rabits, 54, was admitted to the burn center at Mercy Hospital in Pittsburgh with third-degree burns over 80 per cent of his body.

Meanwhile in Brooklyn, a four-story building collapsed early Sunday, trapping and killing an 8-year-old girl and her father and injuring six other persons.

Rescue workers said the entire right side of the building collapsed sometime before 3:30 a.m. CDT, trapping the building's six sleeping tenants under concrete, mortar and brick rubble.

A SECONDARY collapse, which occurred after rescue workers arrived, trapped two firemen, seriously injuring one of them.

A fire department rescue unit was called to the scene after a report of an explosion, but Capt. Fred Gallagher said afterward there had been no fire or blast.

Francisco Ayala, 44, and his daughter, Marisol, were declared dead at the scene. Firemen found their bodies buried beneath the rubble.

Four other residents and two firemen were taken to Long Island College Hospital.

Ada Flores, 18, was reported in serious condition and Mariana Olivera, 50, was in fair condition, hospital authorities said. Roxanne Ayala, 16, and Francisco Ayala Jr., 12, were treated and released.

Fireman William Polera, 39, was reported in serious condition with a possible spinal injury. Another fireman, Frank Hauber, 34, suffered a twisted knee and was treated and released from the hospital.

Only two floors of the building remained standing after the collapse.

around the 90 cent to $1 level."

IN RESPONSE to other questions, Adams said he believes the government would start rationing gasoline "only in an emergency, such as another embargo."

He also said the administration has started pressuring states to stick with the 55 mile per hour speed limit by threatening to cut off federal highway funds if they do not.

"Every time a bill comes up in a state legislature that would raise the speed limit from 55 to 65," he said, "I tell them, 'If you pass it, we'll cut off your federal highway funds.'" He said the threat has worked in every case — although he did not say which states had been involved — and no highway funds have been withheld.

Harper College stretched to seams

by RENA WISH COHEN

First of three parts

Compare a yellowing class picture of second graders from any era with a glossy new composite of a second grade today.

The hairstyles have changed, and so have the fashions, but the children themselves will be like peas in a pod.

Little boys pulling little girls' pigtails. Wide-eyed innocence peeking out from a bit of ruffle. Tousled hair topping an impish grin.

BUT IF YOU could juxtapose a classroom at Harper College today with a roomful of Harper students from 10 years ago, when the college opened, the changes you'd see would be striking.

In its early days, Harper was a haven for the traditional post-high-school student, unsure of his career goals or unable to afford four years of a university education.

Today, there is no "typical" student. You will find business suits next to blue jeans, salt-and-pepper hair next to Farrah Fawcett-Majors locks, mothers next to daughters, grandfathers next to grandsons.

You'll notice fewer Fremd High School letter sweaters and fewer psychology textbooks, but more students toting welding goggles or manuals on vending machine repair.

And you'll discover more students, period. More than 19,000 last fall alone — nearly twice the number Harper officials forecasted 10 years ago.

THAT IS WHY the parking lot at Harper's campus in Palatine looks like Christmas at Woodfield Shopping Center every day of the year.

It is also why those who are responsible for Harper's future frequently wring their hands and tell you that Harper is "bursting at the seams."

What that means, according to John R. Birkholz, Harper's vice president of academic affairs, is that programs that should have had their own facilities years ago have remained in temporary quarters long outgrown.

It means that aspiring medical lab technicians share space with biology students, secretarial science is still stuck in four stopgap classrooms, and would-be thespians have to be content with mounting a production of "Godspell" without benefit of a stage.

It also means that classrooms at Harper are in such high demand that routine maintenance often must be done while classes are in session.

PART OF THE problem is that Harper's building program is always behind schedule — a casualty of the lag between each chunk of new enrollments and the time it takes to build a new building to accommodate them.

Another dilemma is that, as Harper expands its curriculum to keep up with the demands in the community, the college is attracting more and more students to less and less space.

Last fall, for example, 10 students were enrolled in production welding, 175 in interior design and 825 in adult basic education — three programs that nobody even dreamed would exist when the Palatine campus was designed a decade ago.

Most significant, perhaps, is that nobody dreamed that the graying of America and the trend toward lifelong learning would hit Harper so fast, and cram the campus so soon.

Even Harper Pres. Robert E. Lahti, who prides himself on being somewhat of an educational visionary, admits, "It's gone the way I predicted it would go. The only thing that's happened, it's gone twice as fast."

ALTHOUGH LAHTI will have an occasional slip of the tongue and still refer to Harper's patrons as "the kids," he is fond of lecturing about how the old "junior college" label became as passe as The Twist as career education and then adult offerings caught on.

When Harper opened its doors in 1967 in leased high school classrooms, Lahti recalls, the emphasis was liberal arts, and most people regarded Harper as a two-year prelude to "real" college.

Career education, Lahti said, was considered a path for "other people's children." But soon enrollment in vocational and technical courses began to climb, and today it accounts for about 42 per cent of Harper's traditional credit students.

But now the growth is in "nontraditional students" — primarily adults — who compose 36 per cent of Harper's total student body.

The adult student, Lahti says, is here to stay.

THESE CURRICULUM changes have played havoc with Harper's student profile and contributed greatly to the space squeeze afflicting the college. For example:

- In 1969, more than half of Harper's credit students were under 21. Last year, only 39 per cent fell into that age bracket, and the average student at Harper was slightly older than 28.
- Becaust the students are older, they are more likely to be holding down part-time or full-time jobs to support themselves. As a result, there are more part-time students: 65 per cent last year compared with 44 per cent in 1969.
- Because there are more part-time students than forecast when the Palatine campus was designed 10 years ago, the campus last fall had to squeeze about 19,000 bodies (give or take a few thousand because of off-campus facilities) into space intended for about 10,000.

Some of the crush could be alleviated if Harper completes its 20-building master plan. But because of the vagaries of state funding, only three of the eight unbuilt buildings are close to construction. Harper is not even planning to request state funds for another two until 1979, and the final three — a large lecture hall, an auditorium and a continuing education facility — may be a long time coming.

As Trustee Robert Moats puts it, "Auditoriums are a low funding priority (in the state) when other schools still need libraries."

HARPER COLLEGE ENROLLMENTS

Year	Projected full-time students	Actual full-time students	projected total students	Actual total students
1967	—	1,035	—	1,752
1968	1,070	2,355	1,610	3,735
1969	2,050	3,673	3,170	5,358
1970	2,740	4,202	4,340	6,980
1971	3,190	4,945	5,170	9,312
1972	3,840	5,247	6,350	10,803
1973	4,400	5,812	7,270	12,747
1974	5,070	6,118	8,380	14,138
1975	5,510	7,588	9,110	17,212
1976	6,460	7,666	10,780	19,575

ALL OF WHICH leaves Harper officials not only with a campus strained to the limits, but with a big question mark about how to plan for the future.

"What am I going to tell my dean of career development?" academic affairs vice president Birkholz asks. "Should he spend time developing new pgorams if we're not going to have the facilities?"

Two years ago, Birkholz noted, the Illinois Community College Board authorized Harper to offer a program in auto body repair. Harper explored the possibility of leasing the 100,000 square feet of space the program would require, but the cost was prohibitive, Birkholz said.

Even if the Palatine campus were completed tomorrow, there is no provision in the blueprints for an auto body shop. So Harper officials say only one solution seems feasible, if Harper is ever to offer the program — Offer it on a second campus.

Tomorrow: The second campus story.

For months there have been rumblings — and occasional outbursts — of discontent over Harper College's plans to build a second campus in Wheeling Township. While the administration is pushing expansion, the board of trustees election this year threw the majority to those advocating caution. In the first of a three-part series, education reporter Rena Wish Cohen examines the pressures moving the college toward expansion.

Ask Andy

Gymnastics is popular all over the world

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Tammy Steimel, 13, of Phoenix, Ariz., for her question:

HOW DID GYMNASTICS ORIGINATE?

Nadia Comaneci, a 14-year-old from Romania, won three gold medals in the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal and continued building worldwide interest in gymnastics that had started to mount when a 13-year-old Russian girl by the name of Olga Korbut thrilled large audiences in the 1972 games in Munich. Gymnastics has become a favorite spectator sport.

We don't know exactly when the first gymnastic routine was performed, but it most likely happened in ancient times. For hundreds of years, young men and women, as well as boys and girls, have been performing difficult acrobatic exercises.

A German schoolteacher by the name of Friedrich Jahn receives credit for building the first modern gymnastics equipment. He came up with his contribution in the early 1800s, and almost immediately there were people in many countries who became competitors. When the first modern Olympics were held in 1896, gymnastics was part of the program.

Men take part in six events: floor exercise, pommel horse, rings, long horse vault, parallel bars and horizontal bars. Women have four events: balance beam, side horse vault, uneven parallel bars and floor exercise.

Most women are all-around gymnastic competitors and perform both compulsory routines and optional programs in all four events. Some men elect to enter only several events and they also perform both compulsory and optional routines. Only all-around men gymnasts, however, compete in international meets where they must take part in all six routines.

A perfect gymnastic score is 10.00 with the judges taking off tenths of points for each flaw they see. Bonus points are often awarded for original or especially difficult movements.

Comaneci became the first person in Olympic Games history to earn a perfect score of 10 from the judges. She actually earned seven perfect scores during the preliminary competition and at the finals of the 1976 games in Montreal.

Balance, endurance, flexibility and strength are the attributes necessary to perform well in gymnastics. Most top women reach their peaks during the teen years while men champions have an average age of 21.

Andy sends the book 200 Illustrated Science Experiments to Susan Forrester, age 15, of Niagara Falls, Ontario, Canada, for her question:

HOW IS NITROGLYCERIN USED?

Nitroglycerin is an oily, explosive liquid that is made by treating glycerin with nitric and sulfuric acids. The wonderful thing about this mixture is that it can be used both in medicine as a heart stimulant and as the principal explosive ingredient of dynamite.

Certain types of heart disease and blood-circulation problems are treated when the doctor prescribes nitroglycerin tablets. It's a powerful but very effective medicine.

When used as an explosive, nitroglycerin expands to form gases that take up more than 3,000 times as much space as the liquid. Pow!

An Italian chemist named Ascanio Sobrero discovered the explosive in 1846. In 1864 a Swedish chemist named Alfred Nobel perfected a detonating cap for nitroglycerin and three years later he invented dynamite, a safer and more convenient explosive.

Oswald: "The flatter your distribution, the less valuable your hand. There just aren't enough prospects for your small cards."

Jim: "Thus, we recommend that with 4-3-3-3 distribution you should not raise your partner's notrump opening with eight points. If he has a minimum 16 and passes you will have put him in a contract that is likely not to make; if he has 18 or a good 17 he will bid game and while he may bring it home some of the time he will be set often enough so that he will not appreciate your raise."

Oswald: "Today's hand is a good example. South has a full 18 points and continues to three notrump after his partner's raise. He ducks one spade, wins the second one in dummy and decides to go after clubs. East ducks the first club and South takes his queen. Back to dummy with the queen of diamonds for a second club lead to the king. Central Illinois ripped by tornado

SPRINGFIELD, Ill (UPI) — Clean-up operations, suspended because of early morning thundershowers, resumed Sunday in the wake of a tornado that damaged more than 30 homes in areas around the state's capital city.

Chatham Mayor John Whitney said 34 homes were severely damaged in the Glenwood Estates subdivision Saturday night. Several homes were severely damaged in eastern Sangamon County in the Rochester area.

No serious injuries were reported but property damage was estimated at at least $2 million.

SUBDIVISION ROADS were cleared Sunday morning but damaged houses were left untouched until insurance adjusters could make their settlements.

Whiteney said the National Guard has offered to assist in cleanup operations but no decision had been made on whether to accept the troops.

Early morning lightning touched off several small fires, damaging at least two houses in Springfield. A number of area residents reported difficulty in getting propane gas suppliers out to their damaged homes to shut off gas supplies.

Four persons were slightly hurt when their trailer home near Rochester overturned.

TWO SMALL planes were forced down by the storm. One plane landed and overturned behind a crowded campground south of Springfield. The other plane landed on U.S. 36 in Morgan County, and took off when the storm passed.

Authorities declared a curfew in Glenwood Estates. They said the curfew was to ease movement of vehicles in the area — not because of any looting.

MR. AND MRS. TED Derada and their children, Brian, 10, and Charlene, 9, stand near the remains of their home after a tornado swept through Chatham, Ill., located about 10 miles south of Springfield. The twister destroyed 14 homes and damaged 12 others. No serious injuries were reported.

"It was horrible," said Don McNeeley, who was trapped in his car as he watched the tornado carry boards and other debris from damaged buildings.

Lee Myer saw one neighbor's home destroyed, ducked into his basement, and returned upstairs to see another neighbor's home gone. His own home was hit by another house.

Ill. Rte. 51 part of interstate?

Anthony R. Martin-Trigona said Sunday he seeks to have Ill. Rte. 51 designated as part of the federal interstate system. "This designation would provide for immediate construction of the badly needed north-south central Illinois corridor, and would provide access for Rockford to LaSalle-Peru, Peoria, Bloomington-Normal, Champaign-Decatur-Springfield, St. Louis and points south," Martin-Trigona said. He said he filed a petition to that effect with the U.S. Sec. of Transportation, Brock Adams. Martin-Trigona said last month he will be a democratic candidate for U.S. senator.

Holewinski charges 'redlining'

State Rep. Michael S. Holewinski, D-Chicago, said Sunday neighborhoods near minority communities have a high rate of mortgage "redlining" against them. He studied reports filed by 18 banks on Chicago's Northwest Side in reaching his conclusion. "The study statistically confirms allegations that entire neighborhoods in Chicago have been virtually sentenced to death as a result of redlining," Holewinski said. When homeowners cannot obtain conventional financing, they have to seek Federal Housing Authority financing, which serves only to "substantially depress property values," the study said.

it needs plenty of study before Congress or anyone goes ahead," Hall said.

The Carter program calls for federal government assistance in helping persons from low-income families to find jobs, both in government and private industry. The jobs, which would pay the minimum wage or slightly above, would range from child care and cleanup of cities to public safety work.

It also would replace aid for families with dependent children and the food stamp program with a new work benefit and income support system. Under the proposal two-parent families, singles, childless couples and single parents with children older than 14 would be expected to work full-time and be required to accept available jobs with cash income supplements up to $8,900.

INCOME support also would go to the aged, blind and disabled and single parents of children under 14, although single parents with children older than 6 would be required to accept jobs that do not interfere with child care.

Wheeling Township Supervisor Ethel Kolerus said she requested but has not received a copy of the Carter legislation.

Palatine Township Supervisor Howard Olsen said he has not become "thoroughly familiar" with the proposed plan but doubts it will have much effect on his township's general assistance program.

"I guess it will, though, have considerable effect on Cook County's welfare program," Olsen said.

The Carter plan also would provide income payments totaling $2,500 a year to aged, blind or disabled persons, with couples in this category getting $3,750, slightly higher than their current benefits.

The plan also calls for expansion of the current earned-income tax credit program to provide more tax relief to employed low-income workers. President Carter proposed continuing the current 10 per cent credit on earnings up to $4,000 a year. But it would add a 5 per cent credit on earnings between $4,000 and $9,000 for a family of four.

One Act Play entitled
"Saga of the Upholstered Board"

Scene: Office of the Sales Manager of the major mattress manufacturing company.
Sales Manager: What is this terrific new idea of yours?
Product Engineer: It's a new mattress with a board in the middle. It makes the mattress harder than — I mean it makes it very hard.
Sales Manager: Sounds good. We could call it the "Board-O-Pedic." The public wants hard mattresses today. We've been spending enough money telling them this for the last ten years.
Product Engineer: We do use a little foam padding, but with the board in the middle, you hardly feel the padding.
Sales Manager: Have you tried it yourself?
Product Engineer: Sure! I used it for three nights and it almost killed me. But it's harder than any of our competitors are making so it should sell.
Sales Manager: Maybe we should call in the "Upholstered Board"?
Product Manager: I don't know — there's a little company called Schaumburg Mattress Factory that makes fun of these hard mattresses. They tell their customers they shouldn't sleep on these "Upholstered Boards."
Sales Manager: How do you know so much about the Schaumburg Mattress Factory?
Product Engineer: That's where I bought my mattress and man, is it comfortable!!!
Exit: Product Engineer.

THE WEDDING MARCH had a skirl to it Saturday when Linda Curtin married Thomas Digangi at St. Raymond's Church in Mount Prospect. Following an old Irish tradition, Linda had a piper from the Shannon Rovers, Chicago, add "something special and different" to the ceremony.

GM exec frequented gay clubs

DETROIT (UPI) — A General Motors Corp. executive reportedly spent several hours at a health club frequented by homosexuals the day he was tortured and killed, even though he was supposed to give an important speech at the time.

Authorities seeking the killer of Carson McDowell, 43, of suburban West Bloomfield Township concentrated their investigation Sunday on a strip of northside bars and clubs known as hangouts for prostitutes and homosexuals.

The Detroit News reported records at one gay health club placed McDowell, the father of two teenagers, at the establishment between 9 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. the day he vanished. He reportedly spent the time in a $4 room, but he arrived and left alone.

"HE LOOKED JUST fine," an unnamed attendant told the News. "I saw him a couple of times before he left."

The newspaper also said another club for homosexuals listed McDowell as a member and that he had been there briefly the night before he was scheduled to make his speech.

McDowell, an assistant merchandising manager for Chevrolet truck sales, was reported missing Wednesday after he failed to show up for a 10:15 a.m. speech to dealers at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in suburban Dearborn.

The following day his bloodsoaked body was found in a weed field in Ferndale, another suburb.

AN AUTOPSY showed McDowell had been slashed repeatedly with a razor blade and had numerous cigaret torture burns. He bled to death from a cut on his left arm that severed an artery.

Investigators for the Detroit, West Bloomfield and Ferndale police departments said they were questioning prostitutes and others familiar with the area to learn if McDowell was seen with anyone before his death.

Pipes were calling an Irish wedding

The bride wore white, but the music made the churchgoers think of the wearin' of the green when Linda Curtin married Thomas Digangi Saturday in Mount Prospect.

Bagpipe music filled the air as the bride walked down the aisle, and piper Mark McDonnell chose traditional Gaelic tunes for the occasion.

McDonnell, 16, of Arlington Heights said it is an old Irish tradition to have a piper at weddings. Members of his group — the Shannon Rovers — often are asked to provide the wedding music, but this was McDonnell's first wedding.

Although there was only one piper at the ceremony, 14 more brought Irish spirit to the reception Saturday. night in Chicago.

For Linda, the bagpipe music was a link with her Irish heritage. "My parents came from Mayor Daley's neighborhood," she said, noting the Shannon Rovers were one of Daley's favorites. "It's something special and something different."

The Rev. John Dewes of St. Raymond's Church, Mount Prospect, said the bagpipe music made the wedding something a bit more special for everyone involved.

"Whenever people chose a custom and it is kind of a part of their whole tradition, it makes it more meaningful for everyone there," he said. "It adds a touch."

Canadian air controllers on strike

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canada's 2,200 air traffic controllers went on strike Sunday and the nation's airlines transferred operations to American border airports in an attempt to keep flying on a skeleton basis.

The general strike, the result of a nine-month wage dispute, virtually shut down air service in Canada.

The Canadian Air Traffic Control association had scheduled rotating strike action for midnight Monday but moved up the strike to 4 a.m. EDT Sunday in reaction to a government announcement that it would seek legislation to impose a contract settlement.

CATCA OFFICIALS sent a telegram Sunday to government negotiators with an offer to reopen contract talks. But chief government negotiator Peter Dawson said the telegram indicated "no change in CATCA's position and we believe no useful purpose would be served by further meetings at this time."

Air Canada said it had slashed its normal schedule of international and domestic flights from about 500 a day down to 26 Sunday.

Canada's other major airline, CP Air, said almost all domestic flights were canceled and that it will operate only limited international service.

The two major carriers said they would bus passengers to the nearest U.S. border airports.

Air Canada officials said passengers to and from Montreal will be rerouted to Bangor, Maine, and Burlington, Vt., Toronto passengers would go to Buffalo and Niagara, N.Y., and Vancouver's would go to Seattle.

CANADIAN AIRLINES earlier had estimated a national shutdown would cost them $6 million a day.

Air Canada spokeswoman Jocelyne Dumont-Jerome said it was difficult to say how many passengers had been stranded by the walkout, but "there are surely thousands."

She said the airline's problems were being compounded by a flood of phone calls from anxious travelers, their friends and relatives, which was jamming the lines.

Talks between CATCA and the government collapsed Thursday night, with six issues — including the wage package — still unresolved.

CATCA president Jim Livingston said the controllers were "incensed" by a government threat to legislate an end to a strike.

BEFORE NEGOTIATIONS were called off, the government was offering the maximum 8 per cent wage increase permitted under its current wage and price controls. CATCA wanted a 12.6 per cent increase.

Transport Minister Otto Lang said after a special cabinet meeting Saturday that the government had reconvened Parliament Tuesday to try to pass an emergency bill to prevent disruption of air service.

H.C. PADDOCK, 1852 - 1935

Use museum tax to help museum

Residents of Hoffman Estates can be pardoned if they are confused by the maneuverings surrounding the Hoffman Estates Park District's museum tax.

After all, it would seem logical that a museum tax ought to raise money to support a museum.

That was not the way previous park boards handled the special tax, however. those boards used the $16,000 raised annually to pay for heat and light for the park district administration building and to maintain a display case of historic objects. The reasoning: the administration building is a 67-year-old farmhouse and is therefore historic.

The present park board, six of whose members were elected in April, seems to be trying to put some logic back into the use of the museum tax. The board has a committee studying the possibility of using the tax to help support the restoration of the 121-year-old Sunderlage farmhouse by the Poplar Creek Historical Society.

The house, the oldest building in the township, is owned by the village. Because of that and because the historical society is a private group, there are technicalities that must be worked out before the park board can join the project. The park board, to its credit, seems willing to work out the details in an attempt to do the right thing.

Meanwhile, the discussion of the museum tax has resulted in some fanciful logic as various persons have tried to get in line for a share of the money.

A prize for originality must certainly go to David Norris, director of the Boys Club, who has suggested the club should get some of the museum tax money because its headquarters are in an old building and because the club is "a museum of creating leaders."

That interpretation probably has as much merit as justification for using the tax to maintain administrative offices.

It is time the Hoffman Estates Park District put all such flights of fantasy behind it. Museum taxes should support museums — period.

Volberding's travels

Everyone remembers his first train ride.

For a child, it's a thrill to climb on board that big train and watch it rumble down the tracks. But some have to wait till a little later in life for the experience.

Take Des Plaines Mayor Herbert H. Volberding. The 49-year-old Volberding has lived in Des Plaines all of his life. When he ran for mayor this year, he campaigned hard on the fact that he was intimately familiar with the city, its people and problems.

Yet until this week, Volberding had never climbed on board that big green and yellow Chicago and North Western train which runs right through the center of his hometown.

The event was a public relations outing sponsored by the Regional Transportation Authority. The train ran non-stop through some of the west suburbs, which Volberding said he had never seen.

It's surprising that Volberding — "Mr. Des Plaines" — has never even taken a short ride on the line which is so much a part of the everyday lives of Des Plaines residents who commute to Chicago for work.

It just goes to prove that even a life-long resident of a community might not know everything about the place.

Volberding seemed to enjoy his encounter with mass transportation, which he described as "fascinating."

The lives of dogs touch the family that keeps them

Jim Bishop

Brownie was the first. I was 10, riding a bike home from school. He ran in front, snapping and snarling at the tire. Brownie was a mutt. I suspected that he wanted to be friends. I stopped.

We became buddies. Every day he accompanied me to school. When I said, "Go home," he turned away, hung his head and tail, and kept looking for a reprieve over his shoulder. In winter, he slept under the blankets at the foot of the bed.

Momma was afraid of dogs. In summer, she sent him to the S.P.C.A. to be killed. I hitched rides on trucks to beat the gas chamber, but the man said I was five minutes late. It is shameful to lean against a wall and cry. I have not wept since.

THERE WERE other dogs. Dozens. When I had my own house, sometimes two were in residence. Training was easy. Two dissimilar sounding words, "No" and "Okay," used without shouting, worked on all. Some were serious dogs who frowned.

Others were comedians. I was doing a little fancy drinking in New York and a lady gave Sixtus to me. He was a Saint Bernard pup. He had a brown and white head the size of an office safe. He was on the back seat of the Ford and occupied the entire rear-view mirror.

He lasted a week. My wife saw him in the morning coming down the stairs with Gayle, 2. They took a look and walked backward upstairs. He loved snow. And he loved touching noses with Gayle and watching her fall backward in a snowsuit. Sixtus ate everything including corn on the cob.

Duke of Amherst was given by a trumpet player. He was a pedigreed English Springer — the dog, that is. He was also a solemn-eyed drunk. Duke would drink anything as long as it was straight. His hangout was Matt Moran's saloon. His forepaws hung nicely over the top of the bar.

THE BARFLIES thought his hung-over expression was perfect. "Gimme a Scotch and soda and see what my friend with the long ears will have." He arrived home trotting on a bias with a yard of tongue hanging out. My wife didn't like him. My sole defense was, "He can't be drunk. I don't know anybody will give us a drink much less our dog."

It didn't work. He was sent to a farm. He died three months later — dried out — and my old man blamed me for the death. "That poor dog had a weakness," he roared, "and you refused to tell the farmer about it."

Scamper was Gayle's dog. He pretended to be a boxer. She bathed him in the kitchen sink. One evening I tossed him a hunk of meat. "Stop!" she begged. I asked why. "It's Friday," she shouted. "So?" "So he's a Catholic dog, I christened him with holy water."

Suzie was grayish. An English bulldog. Busted teeth stuck from her lower jaw. She had shoe-button eyes, a corkscrew tail, and lots of years. If she could get pregnant, I figured, so could Grandma Moses.

SHE GOT PREGNANT. English bulls give birth to two or three. Suzie spent two days giving birth to 14. She had two piles of torn newspapers. The nine live ones went on one pile; the five stillborns were on the other.

She cut the umbilicals and licked their bellies to make them breathe. She didn't cry or whistle through her nose. All she asked was privacy.

Rock of Shrewesbury was the most dignified German shepherd I knew. He never bit anyone, but he could stand like a statue and stare a stranger down. He was also a good baby-sitter for Ginny and Charley's twins. Nobody got into the bedroom, including the parents.

Like everyone in the world, he had a weakness. He liked to bury bones in the back. In the morning, he needed a treasure map. He could never remember where the goodies were.

OUR PRESENT shepherd, Charlie Chan, is nine. Kelly has trained him to eat anything, including scallions and tomatoes. We tried to mate him with a lady shepherd. Her owner gave Charlie Chan a cookie.

The jerk was so polite that he carried it out back in his teeth. He dropped the cookie at the lady's feet. She bit him on the head. Four stitches and a vow of chastity.

Bob Considine knew me as well as most. I was in Israel researching a book called "The Day Christ Died." He was holding a bar up with Budd Schulberg and Irwin Shaw.

"Bishop," he said solemnly, "has a guaranteed bestseller." "How come?" they said. "His research shows," Considine said, "that Jesus had a dog." . . .

Twice a month, The Herald invites readers' views on a specific issue in the news. Responses are run on a single day. Letters of 150 words or less are preferred. All replies are subject to condensation.

Should household pets be banned?

Cats, dogs and other household pets create a nuisance for neighbors, law enforcement problems and use up food resources the world could use for other purposes. For that reason, some persons argue that, at least in urban and suburban areas, pets should be limited or banned completely. Pet owners, these people say, are irresponsible in the way they allow pets to reproduce and have little consideration for others.

Do these arguments have a point? Or are there better arguments for allowing pets? Send your views to Forum, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Letters should be signed and include street address and telephone number for verification purposes. 'Dynamic inertia' will pump you up

by DICK WEST
(The Lighter Side)

WASHINGTON (UPI) — America's body-building cult, until recently only a puny subculture in the great bulging mass of life styles, is beginning to make a ripple of its own.

All over the country men are taking up exercises not for health's sake but for cosmetic purposes. They hope to develop pretty muscles like Arnold Whatzizzname, star of the movie "Pumping Iron" and everybody's all-time "Mr. Universe."

Some sociologists dismiss the body beautiful movement as a transitory fad. I remind you they were saying the same thing about jogging a few short years ago.

ANYWAY, everybody and his dog are jogging nowadays. And if a jogger doesn't have a dog, he'll probably find himself being followed by someone else's mutt.

Although body-building has not reached that stage yet, it is catching on fast. As you'll see when you go to the beach this summer.

I spent last weekend at the beach. I was basking supinely next to a young woman who either was wearing a brown bikini or had a rather unusual suntan. Then a bully with pretty muscles came along and accidentally kicked sand in my face.

THE GIRL looked at me scornfully.

"Are you going to let him get away with that, Cyril?" she cried.

Two things should be noted: My name isn't Cyril and I had never seen this girl before in my life. So the situation is clear.

If you want to have any peace on the beach this summer, you had better take up body-building exercises. Otherwise, you're going to be pestered to death by strange girls trying to promote one-sided fights.

THE PROBLEM is that most body-building programs involve weight-lifting. And that doesn't necessarily give you pretty muscles.

Weight-lifters are likely to wind up looking more like Vasily Alexeev than Arnold Whatzizzface.

Alexeev, Russia's Olympic weight-lifting champ, is strong, sure. But that body of his is an eyesore. What we're after is beauty, not strength.

I recommend a book called "Pumping Jello." It guarantees body-building without strength through an exercise regimen known as "dynamic inertia."

AN INERT MUSCLE is more or less dead weight, as you suspect. So rather than lift weights, you lift muscles. In other words, you train half of your muscles to lift up the other half.

Then you let those muscles rest and activate the inert half.

That way you'll get a Greek God physique with only have the effort. And the girls on the beach will mind their own business.

'Swim meet a good deal'

As an 8-year resident of Schaumburg and subscriber to The Herald, I am very irritated by your front page story on July 30 "Swimmers angered by pool closing." You gave the negative comments of a few 9 and 10-year-olds and one adult. That certainly seems like biased journalism. How about some positive comments from Schaumburg children and parents who are proud to have the meet here, or perhaps comments from those who will be involved in the meet. It is an important swimming event.

Moreover, years ago when Meineke Pool was on the drawing boards, one of the purposes of building an olympic size pool was to draw swimmers from all over for meets. It was to be good public relations for Schaumburg and bring revenue into the park district.

My daughter is in synchronized swim at Meineke Pool. I had to drive her to Atcher Pool (which is farther from us) for practice. I don't feel in the least put out. I'm happy we have three pools.

There was enough advance publicity about the swim meet for the public to be informed. There were posters at each of the pools a week to two weeks advertising the meet. The meet was even publicized in your paper, The Herald.

Camille C. Pollowy
Schaumburg

I HAVE BEEN a resident of Schaumburg for 14 years. I have always had swimmers on the park district swim team. Two of them are now life guards at Meineke Pool. My youngest son has been swimming for Camp Duncan YMCA for the past year. Mr. John Eliot, the coach of Camp Duncan YMCA and our park district coach is one of the best in the state (see The Herald Leisure March 26, 1977). Camp Duncan (YMCA) is second to B. R. Ryall YMCA. (Maybe this year CDY will be No. 1).

This weekend Camp Duncan YMCA hosted an excellent swim meet. Visitors admired our facilities. The meet went well, the awards were nice. The swimmers will return and more will come next year. Many other communities are happy to hold AAU swim meets in the summer, (Franklin Park, Park Ridge, Hinsdale, North Brook, Portage Park to name a few.)

We have closed our pools many times in the past for Synchronized AAU Swimming, AAU Diving Meets, Master Swim Meets, park district swim meets and the water shows without inconveniencing anyone. The pools have the closings posted outside the pools during the season. And for a week before, it is announced over the loud speakers at the pools. The life guards tell me they had no complaints. Anyone showing up last weekend to swim must not go to the pools very often. All pool pass holderes were welcome to see the swim meet free. I'm sure many people in the community enjoyed having the AAU swim meet. Especially the many people and businessmen who supported us.

'Add parking'

On July 20, I took a Feminique trip through the Arlington Park District. As I waited for the bus to arrive at Camelot Park and take us out, I saw many women looking for a parking space. The pool was jammed with people, lots of activities were going on and there was no place to park except along the curving drives. I saw women hesitate, but what could they do but park there. They were all Feminique patrons.

My husband came to pick me up at five that evening and no parking spaces were available so he also parked there, as the bus was due in a few minutes. In about five minutes, a police car arrived and the officer promptly gave tickets to all cars parked along the drive, including my husband's. He was not in the car due to the heat. He was a few feet away standing in the shade. My husband questioned the officer and he said the cars were parked by a yellow curb line (a fire line, but no signs anywhere). He was most courteous and doing his job. We know a yellow curb line is wrong, but what can one do when no space is available.

The point is, these women had to pay a $5 fine as they had no choice, being gone all day on the trip. This will not help the Feminique program, from what I have heard from the ladies.

The park district boasted they are in the black and making money. How about spending some on signs and most important, add more parking spaces. Frontier Park has that space. The park district is always asking the citizens for money for this and that. How about the park district supporting those who support them? General opinion was "A Rip-Off."

Home-rule may change drink age

Arlington Heights will consider using its home-rule powers to change the legal drinking age for beer and wine from 19 to 21.

Village Trustee August Bettman said he will call for public hearings on the proposal because the Illinois General Assembly rejected similar bills this summer.

"It would be much more effective if it was changed statewide or at least regionally, but I see so much evidence of underaged kids drinking in Arlington Heights that I see no reason why we shouldn't do something," Bettman, chairman of the village board's legal committee, said.

THE MINIMUM drinking age for beer and wine was lowered to 19 by the state legislature in 1973, while the drinking age for hard liquor remained at 21.

The board's legal committee today will attempt to set a date for hearings after conferring with members of the Arlington Heights Youth Council.

Both groups meet at 8 p.m. today at the municipal building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

Bettman said the lower drinking age can be blamed for increases in traffic accidents and vandalism in Arlington Heights.

"THE TROUBLE IS that it's not just the 19 and 20-year-olds that are drinking. They pass it on to their buddies who are 16, 17 and 18," Bettman said. "It's got to be liquor or else dope that fires these kids up."

Similar plans to change the legal drinking age to 21 have been considered in Palatine, Des Plaines and Hoffman Estates but were dropped after officials decided the change would be futile if neighboring municipalities did not change.

"My theory is that if they want it badly enough, they'll go somewhere else to get it," Bettman said. "But why should we make it so readily available here? I just don't think the average 19-year-old can hold his beer and wine."

SOME LOCAL liquor retailers also have said they favor returning the legal age to 21, Bettman said.

Capt. Paul Buckholz of the Arlington Heights police said the police department favors the change because so many 16 and 17-year-old youths are able to get beer and wine through their slightly older friends.

"Statistics show drinking is involved in 90 to 95 per cent of all fatal traffic accidents and it certainly is a problem with younger drivers," Buckholz said.

Puzzle-thon winner

Jeffrey Mueller, 5, was one of the top five contestants in a recent puzzle-thon to benefit the Childhood Cancer Research Foundation.

Jeffrey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Mueller, 930 S. State Rd., Arlington Heights, assembled a 25-piece puzzle after finding sponsors to pledge a penny or more for each piece of the puzzle.

He collected $58 in pledges and won a gift certificate from the Childhood Cancer Research Foundation for his efforts. More than $3,000 was collected at the puzzle-thon at Northbrook Court, Northbrook.

Group of elderly blind enjoy history books most

by PAUL GORES

A lot of people might think that at age 92 and legally blind, Mary Kenney would have little concern for books about American history.

But like about 10 other blind residents of St. Joseph's Home for the Elderly in Palatine, American history books are among the things Mrs. Kenney enjoys most.

The group meets twice each week in the small library at St. Joseph's to listen to "talking books," a federally sponsored educational program for the blind.

Mary Kenney

"TALKING BOOKS" are records containing the text of numerous fiction and nonfiction books. The records are free to the blind and are supplied to the group at St. Joseph's by the Palatine Public Library.

The group has chosen American history as the general topic for their listening sessions, said Marion Joadwine, the coordinator of the program. Mrs. Joadwine also is legally blind.

"As we go through these things it's amazing the things they remember," Mrs. Joadwine said. "We've sampled other books but we always end up coming back to the same old thing — American history."

"I think in the records we get the truth much more than you get at school," said Mae McKinley, a member of the group. "In school they varnish the books so much."

THE GROUP'S "listening list" has included books on Watergate, Theodore Roosevelt, Benedict Arnold, John F. Kennedy, the history of Utah and Fidel Castro.

Mrs. Joadwine said that after hearing the recording of "With Fidel," a book by Frank Mankiewicz and Kirby Jones, the group wanted to hear another book on Castro.

"We're looking for another book to give a different view," she said. "That one was slanted, definitely slanted in favor of Castro."

One of the history buffs who sometimes records the sessions is Bill Woodruff, 86.

"IT'S WORTHWHILE, it's wonderful," Woodruff said. "We hear all the history events we have forgotten."

Mrs. Joadwine said that by listening to the text of one of the history books, Woodruff learned that his relatives brought the first newspaper to Arkansas.

The group, which includes persons from 61 to 92 years old, has been meeting at St Joseph's for about three years, Mrs. Joadwine said.

Mrs. Joadwine said the oldest participant, Mrs. Kenney, is responsible for much of the input into the group's discussion.

"SHE DOES A lot of the talking and gets all the things out of the books," Mrs. Joadwine said.

Mrs. Joadwine said many persons are surprised to learn there is a group of blind senior citizens who get together to listen to the "talking books."

"There's not any of us in a hurry or going anywhere," she said. "There's time to digest this and talk about it."

Calderwood listed in fair condition

L.W. Calderwood, former Arlington Heights police chief, was in fair condition Sunday in the coronary-care unit of Northwest Community Hospital.

Hospital officials say the 73-year-old Arlington Heights resident was in serious condition when he was admitted for threatment last week after fainting.

Calderwood retired last year after 18-years as village police chief.

long haul, he said. While school personnel reduced energy consumption during the Arab oil embargo in early 1974, "the retaining of conservatory habits became just too heavy a burden to bear" after the first enthusiastic effort, he said.

With the energy cost forecast for the district's eight schools approaching $1 million, Dist. 214 officials two years ago agreed that something more than manual control of the schools' heating and ventilating equipment was needed, Cosgrove said.

In March 1976, IBM's computerized energy conservation system was hooked up to the district's three centrally air-conditioned schools. The move has already saved the district $126,284, about $29,000 more than the district paid for the system, Cosgrove said. Allowing for increased energy costs, but not for increased fuel consumption necessitated by the severe winter, the estimate is a conservative one, he said.

"PREVIOUSLY, WE could've operated at peak level for 60 days before anyone knew it because it didn't show up until we were billed," Cosgrove said. "Now we know hour by hour and day by day how we're doing on energy usage and where improvements can be made."

While energy consumption at Rolling Meadows and Buffalo Grove high schools dropped by about 14 per cent during the computerized system's first year of operation, the savings at Hersey was much greater. Cosgrove said this is because the school is beter insulated, has less window space and has a heating system which is more conducive to conservation.

Investigative reporting not quite bright

Charles B. Seib

One by-product of the Watergate adventure was a journalistic fad — investigative reporting. The exploits of Woodward and Bernstein were hailed as a giant step beyond old-style journalism and into the active pursuit of evil. All across the land, reporters set out on the trail of malefactors, and journalish schools were besieged by youngsters eager for basic training.

But the glamor is dimming: Investigative reporting has come on parlous times. Watergates, it turns out, are hard to come by. And the public is sick of the miniscandals, semiscandals, psuedo-scandals and one-day scandals that are being served up in lieu of the real thing.

So desperate is the press to produce a rousing encore to its 1972-74 extravaganza that it has attached a label, "Koreagate," to the current most likely prospect — the acceptance of South Korean cash and favors by members of Congress. The label started as an inside gag, but now one hears it in television news reports and sees it in newspaper headlines.

DESPITE THE LABEL, and the unseemly prejudgement it implies, the Korean story is losing steam. Its problem is one that besets much of investigative reporting today, at least on the national level: a lack of official follow-through.

The Watergage story had a major ingredient that is missing today. Because the folks in trouble were Republicans, the Democrats who controlled Congress were happy to take a handoff from the press and run with it.

Today the situation is different. The partakers of Korean kindness were mostly Democrats, and Democrats not only still control Congress but they control the White House as well. The unsurprising result is official foot-dragging and confusion.

The press, meanwhile, has been spinning its wheels. And some of its efforts to keep the story alive have provided ammunition for those who accuse it of excesses ranging from character assassination to destruction of the Republic.

FOR A TIME IT looked as though the personal finances of Bert Lance, President Carter's close friend and advisor and director of the Office of Management and Budget, might enliven the summer doldrums. But that story hasn't reached the "Lancegate" stage and it probably never will.

Lance told his story on Capitol Hill and got both approval and sympathy. Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., who presided over the hearing, told the President's friend that he had been unjustly "smeared from one end of the country to the other."

For good measure, Ribicoff took a slap at investigative reporters. They are trying to 'get everybody — that's the name of the game," he said, and that undoubtedly summarizes the view of a good many members of Congress.

The Lance case, incidentally, illustrates another problem besetting today's media investigators. The press has not recovered from its traditional honeymoon with a new President. Reporters at Carter's July 28 news conference did not ask a single question about Lance's interesting financial arrangements. As columnists Jack Germond and Jules Witcover pointed out, Richard Nixon would not have been treated so daintily.

PERHAPS THE SOLUTION for the investigators is to find new ground to plow. That is what the New York Times' premier investigative reporter, Seymour Hersh, did.

Hersh, whose last big target was the CIA, turned his attention to big business — specifically to a conglomerate, Gulf & Western Industries. The resulting series may not have rattled many tea cups, but it was a nice change.

Hersh may have something. Bankers David Rockefeller and Walter Wriston and others in that league have been complaining that the press does a lousy job on news about business. I don't think the Hersh treatment is what they are looking for, but at least it's not benign neglect.

I can suggest another fertile field for the investigators: Pay some attention to the operation of the system itselef, or rather to the breakdowns in the system. By that I mean the failure of many public agencies to do the job they are supposed to do.

EXAMPLES: A CITY water department that fouls up its billings so badly that great inconvenience and even hardship are caused its customers. A federal bureaucracy that is unresponsive not only to the public but to its elected and appointed bosses. An agency where rising costs and diminishing efficiency seem to go hand in hand.

The press reports a lot of that sort of thing, but usually the stories are based on the findings of this study group or that interested party. The emphasis is on effect, not on root causes.

In other words, having milked the malfeasance and misfeasance of public officials, what about nonfeasance — the failure to perform? That can have a more direct and hurtful impact on the citizen than the off-hours behavior of a Congressman.

For investigative reporters who want to prove their grit, determination and resourcefulness, the innards of the bureaucracy, local state or federal, is a great place to do it.

Questions abound on neutron bomb

by DANA ADAMS SCHMIDT

As President Carter prepares to make a decision later this month on whether the United States should begin production of the devastating neutron warhead — these are some of the questions facing him:

Does the United State's new neutron warhead (sometimes incorrectly called the neutron bomb) represent such a vast technological advance by the United States that the Soviets will insist on closing the gap before they are willing to talk further about coming to terms on arms limitations?

And, as its critics also contend, would its availability lower the "threshold" of nuclear weapons use because it might kill invaders with its neutron rays within a radius of 1,800 yards of the warhead explosion while inflicting very little physical damage on buildings. And is there something immoral about a bomb that inflicts human casualties while sparing buildings?

(ONE POSSIBLE use might be in response to a Soviet tank invasion of West Germany when the United States and its allies might want to kill Soviet troops but not destroy West German cities, some analysts say. So concentrated would the effect be that the weapon could be used near allied front lines without danger to our side. Since Warsaw Pact forces do not at present have any defense against neutron radiation the neutron weapon, combined with conventional weapons, could thwart the enemy advance within hours.)

Or, as some Pentagon spokesmen counter, would United States use of the neutron warhead be only defensive, with lowyield warheads, and thus have no effect on arms limitation?

They insist that a deterrent that can be used because it is so accurate and precise is more effective in restraining the enemy than a tactical nuclear weapon with a blast yield 10 times greater, which would devastate vast areas.

President Carter has before him a Senate decision to finance the warhead (the amount is secret but is known to be large — in the hundreds of millions). But the Senate added the proviso that if it did not like the President's decision it might, together with the House, jointly veto his action.

The United States has not yet begun limited production of the neutron weapon although prototypes have been tested in Nevada for several years.

SPECIFIC SOVIET objections to the neutron weapon are: that it opens a new round in the arms race; that it may be called a tactical weapon but that any use of a nuclear weapon could lead to nuclear holocaust; that its use conflicts with President Carter's human rights pretensions and negates the President's stated objective of reducing nuclear armament.

The Pentagon at present has no evidence that the Soviet Union is developing a similar weapon.

What exactly is the neutron warhead and why has it become so controversial?

Developed over a period of 20 years, it is a miniaturized hydrogen warhead which is set off by a small atomic burst. The technological advance — in which, as far as known, the Soviet Union has had no share — lies in the miniaturization. Hence the anguished outcries from Moscow calling the warhead inhumane and immoral.

THE OBJECT of the neutron warhead is to destroy the enemy without damaging friendly cities.

This is how it works:

An atomic bomblet included in the warhead goes off to create enough heat to fuse the nuclei of hydrogen atoms called deuterium and tritium. The energy of the explosion causes a limited area of blast and heat and a larger area of radiation of neutron and gamma rays.

The neutron rays traveling at near the speed of light, penetrate the armor of invading enemy tanks. Measured in rads the impact of the rays depends on proximity to the explosion. Anything between immediate proximity to the explosion which counts for 8,000 rads, and 1,000 rads at a distance of 1,800 yards will result in immediate death. Beyond 1,800 there is a chance of recovery from radiation-caused illness and inability to perform complex tasks likely to discourage most attacking forces.

The gamma rays can also kill but will not penetrate armor. They would, however, be effective against infantry.

Fair marks for Carter's envoys

NICHOLAS DANILOFF

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As a presidential candidate, Jimmy Carter spoke bravely about ending the old, old practice of rewarding political supporters and cronies with ambassadorships.

As President, Carter has excelled all his postwar predecessors at appointing professional diplomats, rather than influential amateurs, to ambassadorial posts.

But, in the view of career foreign service officers, he still has a way to go.

"I WOULD give him a B when you compare him to the recent record," said one official of the American Foreign Service Association. "But when you compare his performance to what he said in the campaign, he rates only a C or a C+."

AFSA officials like to point out that, in the autobiography he published during the campaign, Carter condemned "the disgraceful and counterproductive policy of appointing unqualified persons to major diplomatic posts as political payoffs."

Carter has now made 117 of his 127 ambassadorial appointments, and only 25 — or 21 per cent — have come from outside the professional foreign service.

They include former Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield, who went to Tokyo; former United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock, who went to Peking, and former Yale president Kingman Brewster, who went to London.

The career professionals also complain that the special panel Carter created to screen prospective envoys had only one former ambassador — Averell Harriman, World War II era envoy to Moscow — among its members.

Truth of Kent State can't be hidden

by JOSEPH C. HARSCH

In the same town in the State of Maryland I have seen one memorial to the soldiers of the Confederacy and another to the soldiers of the Union. They reflect the fact that Maryland was divided intimately during the American Civil War.

The two communities who fought against each other in that struggle learned long since to be respectful of each other's memories and memorials. The battlefields of that war honor alike the fallen of Blue and Gray. No one in the North attempts to prevent the descendants of the Confederacy from putting their memorials where their ancestors fought and fell. And vice versa.

Confederate memorials dot the field at Gettysburg in Pennsylvania. Union memorials are abundant in Virginia on the fields of Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Spotsylvania, and Petersburg.

THE AUTHORITIES of Kent State University in Ohio are trying to put a gymnasium overshadowing the place where seven years ago four American students fell to the rifle fire of the Ohio National Guard. Student protesters and parents of two of the fallen have been trfing to prevent the building being put on that place. They want a memorial there to the four.

The motives on the two sides in this issue are understandable in both cases. They are also in conflict.

The authorities of the university and the higher authorities above them of the government of the State of Ohio do not enjoy the prospect of a memorial which perpetuates the memory of the day when in resentment and perhaps also in fear they sent poorly disciplined militia armed with battlefield weapons against unarmed students.

TODAY'S STUDENTS and the parents and friends of the fallen feel that the protest movement of those days was honorable and that those who fell that day at Kent State were the martyrs of a crusade which did in fact change the course of history.

The essence of the matter is that by 1970 the United States was as bitterly and as emotionally divided over the Vietnam war as it ever was by the Civil War. In the Civil War the division was geographical. It was North against South. In the issue over the Vietnam war the division was generational, ideological, and political. It split the country in every possible way, but it divided the country just as vividly as did the Civil War.

On the one side was the authority of government, the importance of law and order, the right of the government in Washington to make policy and to execute the policy which was arrived at by constitutional means. The dissenters and the protesters against the war were challenging established authority. There is no doubt that in many cases they deliberately flouted the law and did indeed undermine public order.

ON THE OTHER side was the case against the war itself, rising resistance to the unfairnesss of the selective service system, revulsion against the killing, against the length of the war and against the fact that the case for the war had never been made convincing to the generation called upon to do the fighting.

There was right and wrong on both sides in 1970.

There were honorable men on both sides in 1970 as in the Civil War — and there were some scoundrels too, and exploiters and foolish people — on both sides.

The time has gone by for attempting to assess praise and blame and to say whether there was more right or more wrong on one side or the other. There are passionate partisans of both causes today who would prefer to go on arguing the issues rather than healing the wounds. Many a veteran of the Civil War kept on fighting it to his last breath.

BUT FOR MOST Americans the time has come to be respectful to the case for both sides and to allow each to have its memorials.

The incident at Kent State on the fourth of May in 1970 was a milestone in American history. It shocked and dazed the country. Government would not again dare to use militia against students. The unpopularity of the war mounted. The protest movement had already forced the retirement of Lyndon Johnson from the presidency. By 1970 it was undermining Richard Nixon.

It seems to me that it is as insensitive for the authorities of Kent State and of Ohio to try to obscure with a gymnasium the place where the four fell on the fourth of May of 1970 as it would be for Pennsylvania to put an office building where Pickett launched his charge at Gettysburg.

Ralston, Quaker Co. drop suit on names

Ralston Purina Co. and Quaker Oats Co. Friday dropped their federal court suits challenging each others' choice of names for their pet foods. Ralston had contended Quaker should not be allowed to use "Tender Chunks" for a new dog food because it was too similar to the "Tender Vittles" name Ralston uses for its cat food. In a countersuit filed April 28, Quaker challenged Ralston's trademark use of "Dog Chow" and "Cat Chow" on its pet foods. The Quaker suit, seeking $48 million in damages, said Ralston's suit was "Designed to eliminate (Quaker) from the dog food market" and called it a "calculated, anti-competitive" move timed to injure Quaker's entrance into the pet food field. Ralston officials declined to comment on the decision to drop the suits.

Walgreen to absorb Neighbor-X

Dominick's Finer Foods, Inc., and Walgreen Co. said they have reached an agreement for Walgreens' acquisition of the assets of seven drug stores operated under the name Neighbor-X. The seven outlets, including a Hoffman Estates store, will close Aug. 13 for remodeling and conversion to Walgreen stores.

Tourists flock to Britain in Droves

The Americans are coming — and the French and the Germans. The British Tourist Authority reported Thursday that Britain may have a record 12 million tourists during Queen Elizabeth's Silver Jubilee and they probably will spend about $5.1 billion. "These are tremendous figures, tremendous even in contrast with last year's 10.1 million visitors who spend 2.1 billion pounds ($3.5 billion)," Tourist Authority Chairman Sir Alexander Glen told a news conference. "But perhaps more remarkable still may be the surplus on tourism account," he said. "Last year, overseas visitors earned for Britain 560 million pounds ($952 million) more than the British spend overseas on holidays and business. "This year, I would not be surprised if this surplus was near to one billion pounds ($1.7 billion)," Sir Alexander said.

Check on delayed tax returns

Taxpayers who filed their federal income tax returns on time and have not received their 1976 tax refunds should check with their local IRS office as soon as possible, district director Charles F. Miriani said. The most common reason for an undelivered check, according to the IRS, is that the taxpayer has moved and left no forwarding address with the U.S. Postal Service. Because refund delays also can be caused by lost or stolen checks, the IRS urges taxpayers who believe this might be the case to get in touch with their local IRS office as soon as possible so that the IRS can put tracers on the missing checks.

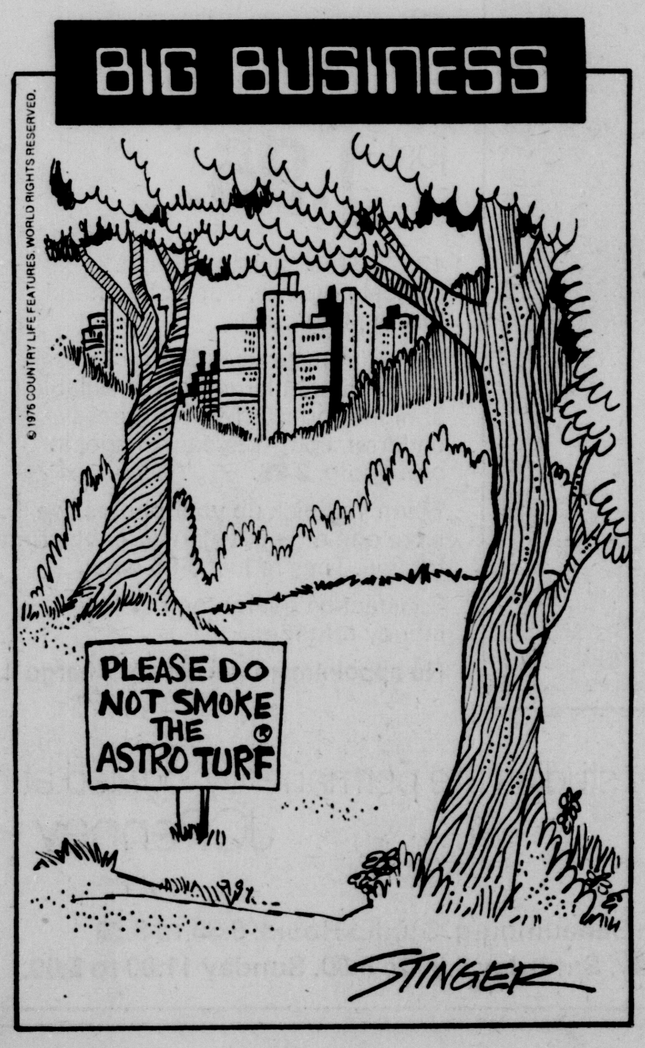
Mexican natural gas may aid U.S.

Natural gas from Mexico may help ease American shortages as early as this winter. Mexico, which already has more gas than it needs, is in the process of exploring newly discovered major reserves such as the Reforma field. A spokesman for an American Natural Gas Co. in Houston said reforma "may be more important than the north slope of Alaska and development of these reserves could make Mexico one of the world's largest exporters of oil and gas." The United States, on the other hand, has not been able to meet demand with domestic gas supplies and last winter the shortages forced factory shutdowns in the Midwest and East. Six American energy companies Thursday said a tentative deal with the Mexican Oil and Gas Agency could provide additional natural gas this winter. Lew Bullion of Tenneco, Inc., said up to 50 million cubic feet per day may be available from northeastern Mexican gas fields as early as the 1977-78 heating season. Bullion said the companies plan to buy 2 billion cubic feet of surplus Mexican gas daily when Petroleos Mexicanos completed a 750-mile pipeline from the Chiapas and Tabasco fields to the border, possibly in 1979.



Pressure is on for team to meet Oct. 1 energy department due date

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A hundred-member team, authorized to carry out the biggest government shakeup in more than a decade, is racing to put together the new Dept. of Energy by Oct. 1.

Some reorganization planners say they have no better than a 50-50 chance to meet that deadline, although Federal Energy Administrator John O'Leary says it can be done "if we can keep the pressure on ourselves."

Congress approved creation of the Energy Dept. — first new Cabinet-level agency in 11 years — on Tuesday. But it left Energy Sec. James Schlesinger and his planning team to work out the countless organizational details.

SCHLESINGER ALREADY strying to oust Defense Dept. employes from the posh new Forrestal Building so that his own department may use the space as its headquarters. He seems to be winning that battle.

The Energy Dept., however, will not even exist until enough plans have been firmed up for President Carter to sign an order, probably about Sept. 1, setting a date for it to open its doors officially.

Planners said results of a current talent search will help determine whether an Oct. 1 opening is achieved.

Some 35 top-level executives — those requiring presidential nomination — must be recruited.

SOME WILL come from existing agencies, but planners said not all incumbents will be retained and many must be brought in from outside government.

About half of the 35 are expected to be nominated when Congress returns from its recess Sept. 7. But officials said if the talent search goes more slowly than expected, or if the nominations are not approved quickly, it could delay the start of the new department.

"You don't want to activate a department with only a secretary at the top," one official said. "The poor guy would be in a desperate situation very fast."

The new department will consolidate activities of the FEA, the Energy Research and Development Administration and the Federal Power Commission and will take over energy-related duties from five other agencies.

THE ENERGY Dept. will have a staff of about 19,000 and a budget of about $10 billion.

"It's a gigantic integration operation," said one official involved in the organizing process.

Each employe being moved to the department must be assigned to a specific job.

Thousands of desks, chairs and typewriters must be tallied and moved to the new department.

Payroll records must be consolidated so no paydays are missed.

Finally, officials said, overlapping regulations from the present splintered energy bureaucracy —affecting hundreds of energy companies — must be made uniform.

New models keep calculator selling

by TERRY HERSHEY

A calculator that talks?

A calculator the size of a book of matches? Or one that is only a quarter of an inch thick?

They're all new models now on the market.

One new calculator is a clock that tells you the hour, minute, second and whether it's a.m. or p.m. Hit a button and you get the year, month, date and day of the week. Hit another button and get the time in another time zone. It also is a stopwatch, as well as a four-function calculator.

THAT IS ONE of the most popular of the new models at the Marshall Field & Co. Store in Woodfield, Schaumburg. "A lot of people travel with them," Karen Horne of Fields said. "They can do their business work and have an alarm clock, too."

Another variation of this gadget computes time calculations and can tell you what day of the week any date falls between 1901 and 2099.

"One of the biggest things now is the thinnest," Horne said. "In fact, any of them sell fast when they're new like the thinnest and the stopwatch. People like to have the newest thing."

But at the J. C. Penney Co. store in Woodfield, which sells only hand-held calculators, the most popular models feature a memory and scientific notation.

OTHERS LOOK like cigaret lighters or can be programmed much like a minicomputer.

Eight years ago, calculators were still mechanical and the lowest priced calculator cost about $695. And all it did was add, subtract, multiply and divide.

Today you can buy a small hand-held calculator, which will do more than the old $695 model, for only $12.95. Some models go as low as $4.95.

What happened to the calculator market?

Several things, according to Marty Sullivan, of Irv's Equipment Supply Co. in Schaumburg.

ONE WAS THE technology that allowed the use of electronics rather than mechanics. "The birth of electronics changed the whole image of calculators," Sullivan said.

The second factor is competition. "There were just too many people making them when they were booming two and three years ago," Sullivan said. "There were too many for the market and, in order to sell units, manufacturers began cutting the prices.

"Manufacturers kept dropping the prices until they were just about as low as they could go. That brought the price of a hand-held mini-calculator down from $79 to $4.95," Sullivan said.

But the price war convinced a lot of manufacturers, particularly American, to leave the market.

SEVERAL COMPANIES, such as Bowmar and Rockwell, have pulled out of the market, along with Panasonic.

A Commerce Department study shows that the American manufacturers have a decreasing portion of the market, down from 49 per cent in 1973 to 30 per cent by the end of 1976.

The Commerce Department predicts the decline will continue especially because of "keener competition" from Japan. Sullivan says Japan is in the forefront of the market because of its cheap labor, not its technology.

The electronic chip, a vital component of the calculator, was developed in the United States. It is half the size of a fingernail and contains the equivalent of thousands of transistors which perform intricate calculations.

The Japanese have now perfected the technology, and can do the same things the American manufacturers can do. But they do it more cheaply because of the cost of labor, Sullivan said.

BUT WILL THE interest in calculators continue? Sullivan thinks so. "The market will never get saturated," he said.

"As every kid graduates from high school — or even grammar school — he is going to need to get a calculator. That's a built-in market that will never diminish."

Horne agrees with him. "In fact," she said, "We had a 5,000 per cent gain in sales for the first week of July this year over the same period last year."

Also, because calculators have become so inexpensive, people will replace them rather than repair them, Sullivan said.

HUMAN NATURE will also guarantee a good market, Sullivan thinks.

"People travel and party more today, and they like to have something different. It's something novel to show off. And as soon as one person has a new one, everyone else at that party is going to have to have one like it."

And the new kinds just keep coming. There's now a biolator calculator which will figure your biorhythm to tell you if you are going to have a positive, negative or neutral day.

What kind of calculator will they come up with next? "Anything you can think of," Sullivan says.

Looking for house? Visit bank first

Jane Bryant Quinn

Staying ahead

NEW YORK — People looking for a new house often grossly overestimate what they can afford to pay. This is particularly true of first-time home buyers, although it happens to the more experienced as well. After weeks of searching for the house of their dreams, they're brought up sharply at the office of the bank or savings and loan, when their application for a mortgage is turned down.

There's a simple way to avoid this, which almost no one does: Visit the bank before you go househunting, to see how much you can actually borrow. But most people start with the real estate agent, and go so far as to make an offer on a house before they learn that they've overreached their incomes.

Two cases with which I'm personally familiar illustrate the situation.

THE FIRST IS a young couple making $17,000 a year. The rule of thumb is that fou can afford a house worth two and half times your annual income. Going by that standard, they looked at houses selling for around $42,500. They planned to put $5,500 down.

But they didn't know about another rule of thumb used by banks and S&Ls. It's that mortgage payments and property taxes shouldn't take more than 25 per cent of annual income. Because of their low down payment, the size mortgage they needed would have put them over the 25 per cent limit, so they were turned down when they applied.

At a mortgage rate of 8¾ per cent, and considering tax rates in their area, all they could borrow was $29,000. Together with the $5,500 they already had, the most they could pay for a house was $34,500. Fortunately, this didn't put them out of the housing market entirely, since the median price for an older house is in the area of $33,000.

The second case is an older couple that has worked for years in order to be able to afford a house. Between them they make $22,000, and can afford to put $7,000 down. They made an offer of $48,000 on a house. Since mortgage rates in their area were only 8½ per cent, the monthly mortgage and property-tax payments came in just under 25 per cent of their income. But their mortgage application was turned down anyway. Why?

THERE'S YET another bank and S&L rule of thumb; itsays that a borrower's mortgage, taxes, home insurance plus other long-term debt can't exceed 30 per cent of annual income. This couple was making payments on two cars and a piece of vacation land in New York's Catskill mountains. Those debts, when added to the mortgage they needed, pushed their total monthly payments over the 30 per cent limit.

The bank would lend them only $37,000, which limited their housing choices to a top price of $44,000.

To avoid the disappointment of hunting for a house and then finding you can't afford it, the smart homebuyer goes to the bank or S&L even before making contact with a real estate agent. Explain your situation, before making contact with a real estate agent. Explain your situation, and say that you're trying to find out approximately how much you can borrow. The bank will look at your income and debt, and give you a ballpark answer. (Make it clear that you're not looking for any guarantees, just an approximation of the size mortgage for which you qualify.)

It's worth visiting more than one lender, because not all of them use exactly the same rules of thumb.

If you learn that you can't borrow more than say $40,000 and you have $5,000 in cash, you'll know in advance that you can't afford a house costing any more than $45,000 (and perhaps less, once you consider the closing costs).

With this exception: Once the real estate agent knows your borrowing limits, he may be able to find a more expensive house where the seller is able to give a second mortgage. If the seller will lend you $5,000 payable in five years and you have $5,000 in cash, a $40,000 mortgage will let you buy a $50,000 house (provided that you can meet all the monthly payments).

The trick is knowing your borrowing limits in advance, and planning a househunting strategy with those limits in mind.

Criminals aren't libbers: report

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The government Sunday released a report challenging the theory that women's liberation is responsible for recent sharp increases in crimes committed by women.

The report, released by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, was based on a 14-state survey of 1,600 women inmates involved in crimes ranging from shoplifting to burglary, armed robber and murder.

"The media, among others . . . assert that the apparent sharp increase in the female arrest rate is 'the dark side of women's liberation,' " the 350-page report said.

BUT THE researchers said theories linking women's crimes with "rejection of the female role fail to account for the large number of women for whom this idealized (liberated) role is neither possible nor desirable."

The 1975 FBI Crime Report — the latest which breaks down crime by sex — showed the arrest rate for women was up 125.3 per cent from 1960 while the rate for men increased 22.8 per cent. Among women under 18, the rate was up 253.9 per cent, compared to an increase of 101.7 per cent for men the same ages.

Researchhers noted that trends toward liberation and the increase in women criminals occurred at the same time, but noted there was a simultaneous rise in drug use and other "major and minor social upheavals."

"It is virtually imporsible to single out the women's liberation movement as the cause of the rise in female crime," the report said.

THE SURVEY, largest of its kind, included 15 state prisons and 42 local jails in California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, New York, Massachusetts, North Carolina, Texas and Washington.

It was conducted by the California Youth Authority and financed by a $293,000 LEAA grant. The project director was Ruth Glick, now planning chief of the California Corrections Dept.

Summaries of responses to a 12-page questionnaire showed women prisoners hold mixed views on sex roles:

- 91 per cent agreed that "it's imoprtant for women to have children."
- 66 per cent disagreed with the statement, "I've worked harder than most men I've known."
- 74 per cent disagreed that, "If I had a choice I'd rather stay at home than have a job."
- 87 per cent disagreed that a job "would probably be a drag."
- 52 per cent said a man "has a right to insist that his women stay at home rather than take a job," but 50 per cent of the whie women disagreed.
- 52 per cent disagreed that a woman should "expect her man to support her," and 65 per cent of those with some college training disagreed.

Manson disciple to get 3rd trial?

A date has been set to determine if former Charles Manson "family" member Leslie Van Houten will be tried yet a third time for murder — but there also is a possibility she soon may go free. Her second trial ended Saturday in a mistrial after the jury reported it was hopelessly deadlocked. Superior Court Judge Edward Hinz Jr. set Sept. 12 as a date for a hearing to determine if she will be tried again. There is a chance that trial will never be held. A meeting is scheduled this week to discuss the possibility of a plea bargain. Should the district attorney's office accept a guilty plea to manslaughter or second-degree murder, Miss Van Houten — because of time already served — could be freed on parole within a short time. Miss Van Houten, now 27, was convicted in a 1970-71 trial of first-degree murder in the stabbing deaths of Rosemary and Leno LaBianca the night after actress Sharon Tate and four other persons were slaughtered in a Benedict Canyon estate.

Home explosion kills three

A powerful explosion ripped apart a brick home early Sunday, killing three members of a family and injuring a fourth in Evanston, Wyo. Authorities investigated the possibility the blast might have been set deliberately. Attorney Victor Vehar, 67; his wife, Beverly, and son, John, 18 were killed. Another son, Tony, a Kemmerer, Wyo., attorney, was injured and listed in fair condition at University Hospital in Salt Lake City. The Mountain Fuel Supply Co., the utility that serves the Evanston area, said the pre-dawn explosion was not caused by natural gas. It said a gas meter inside the house was still operating after the blast.

Scout injured by lightning

Cal D. Armstrong, a 16-year-old Boy Scout from Utah, was critically injured when struck by lightning while running between two troop sites at the National Scout Jamboree in Butler, Pa. About 18,500 Boy Scouts were camped at the 17,000-acre Moraine State Park for the 1977 Jamboree which ends Tuesday. A scout officials said Armstrong was running across "reasonably flat ground" where the western region troops were quartered when he was struck down during a brief but severe thunderstorm Saturday. Armstrong is a member of the Utah Peak's Council in Santaquin.

Sen. Church on Cuba trip

As part of the move toward re-establishing full diplomatic relations with Cuba, Sen. Frank Church flies to Havana today on a trip that may result in the release of several Americans held on political charges. Church, D-Idaho, will make the trip on an American military plane, the first U.S. military craft to land at Havana's airport since the two nations broke relations more than 16 years ago. He was invited by Cuban President Fidel Castro. U.S. State Dept. officials and congressional sources said Castro, in a gesture toward the Carter administration, may highlight the four-day Church visit with the release of some or all of the seven American citizens held in Cuban jails on political charges. The State Dept. did not identify them. The trip is seen as another step in what is expected to be a long and gradual process of improving relations between Cuba and America.

Legal tangle over club fire

A major legal controversy is brewing over the tangle of lawsuits, totalling some $870 million, filed on behalf of victims of the tragic Beverly Hills Supper Club fire. The dispute centers on whether the mass of litigation from the May 28 Southgate, Ky., blaze, which killed 164 persons and injured 51 others, ultimately should be considered in federal court as a class action, or a series of individual lawsuits. The problem is that the maximum amount of money available for any damages awards is only a small fraction of the total damages claimed on behalf of the dead and injured. One lawyer estimates there is only about $3 million available to divide among the scores of plaintiffs. Attorneys favoring the class action approach clashed in a pretrial conference called Friday by U.S. District Judge Carl B. Rubin as a first step toward organizing some 20 federal lawsuits stemming from the blaze.

Irish youths protest queen's visit

British troops fired plastic bullets Sunday to drive off hundreds of rock-throwing Irish Republican youths protesting Queen Elizabeth's second visit to Belfast, Northern Ireland, since her coronation 25 years ago. Dozens of helmeted soldiers charged into the mob of about 300 youths and arrested six of the demonstrators. No injuries were reported. An army spokesman said the clash broke out at the end of a march by some 2,000 militant Irish Republicans to protest the royal visit.

Japanese students attack police

Student radicals wearing red helmets and armed with hoemade fire bombs attacked police Sunday at Tokyo's new $733 million international airport, attempting to halt the first day of noise tests by a jumbo jet. Police said two of the 3,200 riot police guarding the airport were injured. One suffered burns from a fire bomb while another was seriously injured when hit by a truck driven by one of the students. The attack occurred after about 1,000 student radicals and farmers held a protest rally near the new airport at Narita, about 40 miles south of Tokyo.

Cities use imagination in spendng U.S. funds

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Brevard County, Fla., plans to train as many of its citizens as possible to perform cardio-pulmonary resuscitation so they can save the lives of people who have sudden heart attacks.

Buffalo, N.Y., hopes to teach old people how to protect themselves against crime.

New Bedford, Mass., proposes a theater arts program.

And in Bodega Bay, Calif., a young graduate student has been set to work measuring how much lobsters eat.

THOSE VARIED enterprises are among thousands of projects starting up around the country as a result of Congress' decision in May to more than double the number of federally finnaced public service jobs from 300,000 to 725,000.

The increase is part of a package of programs enacted at President Carter's urging to stimulate economic recovery and help reduce unemployment.

The public service job expansion is running about two months behind schedule, partly because it took Congress longer than expected to appropriate the money, and the U.S. Labor Dept. estimates the level of 725,000 jobs will be reached by the end of February instead of early January as originally planned.

Congress ordered that new jobs in the expanded part of the program be used for specific "projects" which a community otherwise could not afford to start. Localities can use the original part of the program to hire workers for ongoing activities, such as police and fire protection.

As a result of the expansion, communities and nonprofit organizations have been thinking up local projects for which the federal government pays employes' wages.

SYRACUSE, N.Y., proposed a career development program using city schools in the evenings for youngsters who otherwise might run afoul of the law. The government will pay the $9,250 salaries of two outreach workers for it.

Similarly, the Bodega Marine Laboratory got approval for a public service employe to study how much lobsters eat under different conditions. The lab says that will help show how they might be reared commercially.

A look through Labor Dept. reports on approved projects also turned up these proposals:

- House parents for a group home for delinquent girls in Seattle, Wash.
- Renovating antique sleighs, wagons, buggies and surries in Waukesha, Wis., for an exhibit on horse-drawn transportation.
- An information service for minority businessmen in Anchorage, Alaska.
- A modern art exhibit in Kansas City, Mo. Also a project to transport elderly, Spanish-speaking persons to and from clinics and social agencies, with a translation service thrown in.
- Rehabilitating alcoholics in Rome, Ga.
- Interviewing arrested persons in the St. Petersburg, Fla., area to gather information to speed the bail process.
- Training youngsters to be auto mechanics and nurses aides in Greeley, Colo.
- Weatherizing homes of the poor in Olympia, Wash.
- Making an index to Visalia, Calif., City Countil minutes, resolutions and ordinances.

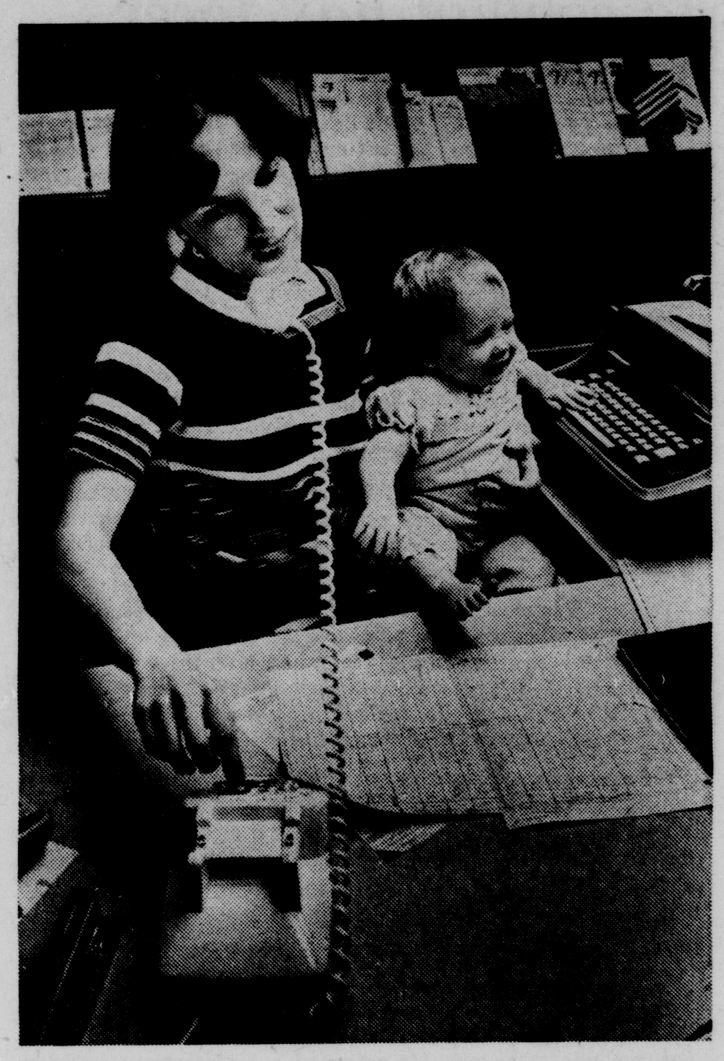
IN A CORNER of the room behind Mom's desk is Jennifer's own file cabinet. An "office" baby, she makes time pass quickly for clients when appointments have backed up.



A HAPPY BABY, 11-month-old Jennifer loves people. Only when she is tired or hungry does she demand special attention from her mother, Linda Harris, who puts aside her work.

Bringing up their baby just all in a day's work

by ELEANOR RIVES

The sign on the Boy Scout Council building on Rand Road reads: "The Harris Group — Tax Accountants."

Walk up to the small suite of offices on the second floor and sure enough — there's the "group:" the Certified Public Accountant, sandy-haired Doug Harris, doing awesome mathematical acrobatics in his office; his pretty brunette wife, Linda, tripling as receptionist, secretary and accountant; and, at floor level, 11-month-old Jennifer, their baby daughter, as accustomed to this setting as to her Arlington Heights home nearby.

Jennifer is an office baby. Her mother has been bringing her to work since she was six weeks old.

"Doug needed my help," said Linda. "And it's terribly hard to find day care for kids in diapers."

DOUG AND LINDA are a young couple on their way up. He has been in business for himself for the past three years, specializing in tax returns and private accounting, with side interests in a vending company and in The Peppermint Stick Lounge in Hoffman Estates. He also directs a business program at Kendall College, Evanston.

Linda is his partner in more ways than one. During the tax season, Feb. 1 to the extension deadline, June 15, they often work from 9 in the morning to 11 at night. With German her major at Indiana University, Bloomington, where they met, Linda has since learned accounting by enrolling in Doug's accounting course at Kendall.

"I was eight months pregnant," she said. "Doug was in Evanston; my doctor was in Evanston; I thought I better be in Evanston, too."

DOUG MOVED into the Rand Road office during Linda's maternity confinement and Linda and Jennifer joined him six weeks later.

"It's not hard to bring a baby to work if it's a small office and the baby is young." explained Linda. "We set up a portable crib in the back room and Jennifer slept much of the time. Feeding was no problem. I just went into the back room, shut the door and nursed her."

When Jennifer reached the crawling stage, her parents adjusted the office to her new activities, and boundaries. To prevent her from munching on the plants, Doug keeps the door to his office closed; to prevent her from rearranging the file system, he barricades the entrance to the file room.

"WE MAKE SURE there are no staples, paper clips or rubber bands on the floor," said Linda. Magazines to entertain clients who must wait are piled into the far inside corner of the table where Jennifer can't reach. But far more entertaining is Jennifer herself, whose office antics never fail to bring smiles to the faces of Harris patrons, and vice versa. One man sent Jennifer into gales of laughter.

"She's a very friendly baby," said Doug. "I don't know if it's from all these people around,, but she has never been afraid of people."

Jennifer has her own file corner, a carton of discarded papers to poke around in. She has discovered that the tightly closed plastic container of paper clips has a delightful rattle. The adding machine does funny things when you press a button, and rulers and empty pop cans are great toys.

THE HARRISES have a refrigerator and hot plate in the back room, so lunch is no problem. Diapers are kept in a file drawer, not necessarily under "D." And twice a day, in accordance with Harris inter-office policy, Jennifer is filed in her crib under "naptime."

"This baby has gone to college, too," said her mother. "when Doug and I attended a one-week mini-university course at Indiana U. recently, there were no facilities for children this young. So we took her to class. We let her crawl around a little and kept feeding her crackers. The school gave her a certificate too."

IT'S NAPTIME decrees Papa Harris as he tucks Jennifer into her crib in the back room of his accounting offices.

Linda works only 10 to 15 hours a week now that the tax season is over, but Next Feb. 1 she and Doug will be hard at it again. And Jennifer will be with them. "I intend to bring her at least another year," said Linda.

Office child happy, Mom uneasy

When Darlene McDonough's next door neighbor, Keith Cook of Arlington Heights, asked her to work for him in a business conducted from his home, she said, "Okay, but what do I do with my daughter?"

"Bring her along," said Cook, president of Precision Media.

So 2-year-old Shannon accompanied her mother, who put in five hours each day doing bookkeeping and other office work — and that worked fine.

But when Precision Media moved into a small office, Darlene was a little nervous. Three desks almost filled the office. Nevertheless, she brought Shannon with her a few days a week. "I couldn't afford a full-time babysitter," she said.

SHANNON ENJOYED it. A closet became her "office" where she sat drinking pop. Eating her bag lunch on a paper towel on the floor became a "picnic." "You can bet I brought plenty of paper towels," said her mother.

Filing cabinets were hung with doll outfits, and when Shannon became tired, she fell asleep on her dolls on the floor. "She was so little," said her mother. "Salesmen would have to step over her."

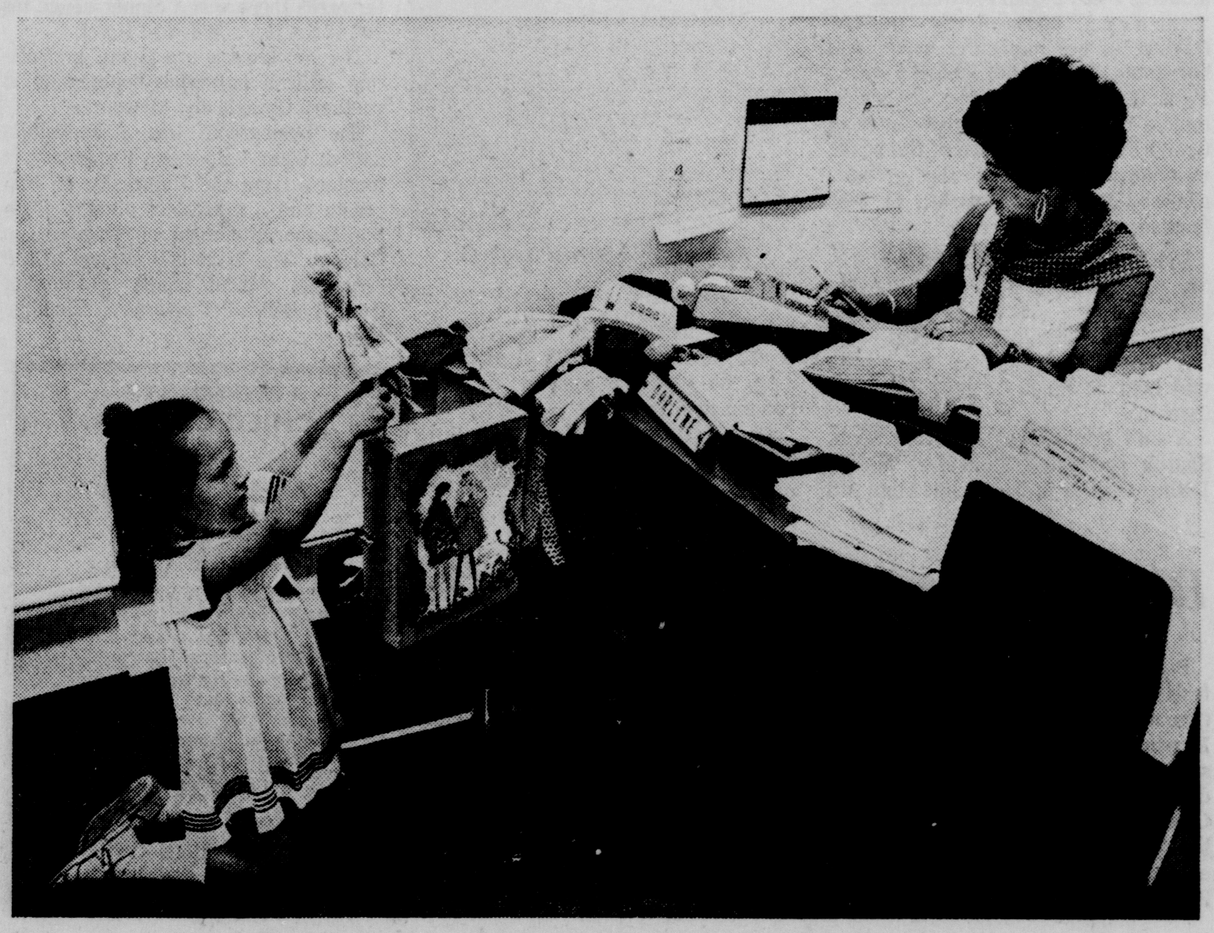
"Gee, you're really hiring them young these days!" they would say to Cook. Or to Shannon, "Are you the new file girl?"

After a year, Precision Media joined forces with Computerland at 50 E. Rand. Shannon, just turned 5, will begin kindergarten in the fall, spending half-days in the office with her mother, now secretary-treasurer of Precision Media.

"JOHN GIBBS (president of Cumputerland) and Keith were fantastic about it," she said. "I was lucky they would allow it."

But it hasn't been easy. Darlene can't forget how nervous she was wondering if Shannon was disturbing anyone, wondering if phone callers could hear her singing. She can still her her daughter's piping voice asking, "Mommy, am I being good?" as she popped goodies into her to keep her quiet.

Darlene shook her head. "I wouldn't recommend it," she said.



"GOING TO WORK" is play for Shannon McDonough, who began accompanying her mother to Precision Media when she was 2.

Many skirt patterns appropriate for fall

Eunice Farmer

Sew simple

Dear Readers: Continuing with our new look at the fashions for fall, let's discuss today the most important item in your wardrobe — the skirt.

I have searched through various pattern books and come up with some patterns that would cover all types of figures, but you must make your selection according to your own needs.

Many of you have asked for a wrap skirt pattern for bordered fabric, and since so many of the fall challis are bordered, I suggest you try Vogue pattern No. 9733. It's fairly straight with slight ease at the sides and back. It has a button-on tab at the waist and can be adjusted for size. The skirt is simple to make and is perfect for wearing with blouses or T-tops of lightweight knit.

Vogue pattern No. 9853 produces a lovely skirt that is smooth at the waist and hips and ends in a soft flare. This pattern also includes a sleeveless bolero-type jacket.

Another good pattern is Vogue's No. 9707. This is easy to make and can be done in several styles.

Naturally, there are dozens of skirt patterns in each pattern catalogue. Why not begin your fall wardrobe today with a great new skirt?

Dear Eunice Farmer: How would I go about lining a silk dress, and what type of sewing machine needle should I use? — Mrs. Harold H.

Dear Mrs. H. H.: The procedure for lining a silk dress would depend on your pattern. If it is extremely straight, you'll want to underline the entire dress.

When you baste the underlining and the dress fabric together, be sure not to pull either of them too tight, then treat them as if they were only one piece of fabric. This will greatly reinforce the seams and keep the silk from pulling away at any point of stress.

If the dress is loose fitting, you may add a separate lining. For elegance you could use China silk, but because of the cost, you might prefer to line the dress in any lightweight, woven ployester that resembles China Silk.

Since silk is a delicate woven fabric, use a regular machine needle, size nine or 11. NEVER use a ball-point needle for woven fabrics.

This week's winner of the gold blazer buttons is Destie N. Ware, 211 S. Cloudman St., Charlotte, N.C., 28208. Her tip:

"For anyone who has a hard time threading a needle and has lots of basting to do while making a garment, tape a needle threader to your sewing machine with the head wire sticking up. Simply cap the needle over it, turn and pull thread through."

(Dear Readers: Please share your little sewing tips with us. You, too, could win the blazer buttons.)

The doctor says

Antihistamines needed to combat hay fever

I have a nose drip summer and winter. My doctor calls it hay fever but I don't believe it would last like this and never let up. He put me on Ornade once and that never helped much and then on Chlor-Trimeton which isn't much help. Dristan capsules help more than anything but I don't like to take them all the time.

I am 69 and have always had good health. I would like to know what you say about this — if there is any cure or not. I have had it as long as I can remember. What causes it? I don't often catch colds. I do sneeze a lot.

It certainly sounds like an allergy and would be called allergic rhinitis — commonly called hay fever. Such problems are seldom related to hay and do not cause a fever so that old term is very misleading but commonly understood.

While much of hay fever is seasonal, the most common being in the fall with ragweed pollen exposure, some people do have hay fever all year long. In these cases the offending allergic substance is usually house dust, animal dander or fungus spore.

The best treatment is to avoid the substance that causes allergic rhinitis. That requires finding out what substance or subtances are involved. To give you more information on this I am sending you The Health Letter number 8-4 Hay Fever (Allergic Rhinitis). Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it.

I am sorry to tell you that you will need to take antihistamines continually or at least before the symptoms occur to get the best results from them. People with hay fever sometimes make a mistake by failing to take the medicines until the symptoms begin. They are far less effective when taken this way.

Incidentally, Dristan contains antihistaminics, including the same antihistaminic compound found in Chlor-Trimeton.

I had surgery for ulcers three years ago, and 85 per cent of my stomach was taken out. My wife had a hysterectomy operation over a year ago. She says that when we breathe she can smell the odor of blood on us. I keep telling her that it's not possible. Would you please give me an answer on this subject to settle this?

I doubt any answer will settle anything, but I can assure you your wife's impression that she can smell blood is not because she really does. It is more than likely fixed in her mind.

Ultimately we smell, hear and see because of various brain cells that receive signals. For some reason your wife has developed a sensation of smelling blood, but it has nothing to do physically with either operation. I think this is a psychological reaction and your wife might benefit from some professional counseling. Her reaction is really a symptom of a conversion reaction, which means that your wife may have resolved some psychological conflict or anxiety by smelling blood.

If that is the case she might feel better and do better in life in general with some professional counseling that will help her to surface and resolve her conflicts. The anxiety may be related to her surgery, to factors related to why she had surgery or from some totally unrelated aspects of her life.

Don't take chances with Tris-treated sleepwear

Confusion and controversy still surround Tris, the flame retardant used in children's nightclothing. Since the government banned it, many anxious parents want to know how to tell which garments have been Tris-treated.

They also wonder whether certain recommendations for testing fabrics at home for the presence of Tris are scientifically accurate. Here's what the Consumer Product Safety Commission says:

First, assume that sleepwear up to size 14 has been Tris-treated if made of the following fibers: acetate and acetate blends, triacetate and triacetate blends, 100 per cent polyester and many polyester blends.

Second, accept the hard advice of many scientists: Tris can't be laundered out. Next, they advise, don't believe any claim that one can determine by any quickie home method whether your child's p.j.'s contain Tris. Many stores will pay you back for returns of either new or used items possibly treated with Tris. If yours won't, throw out the garments. Where your children's life and health are involved, why take any chance at all?

Dear Roberta: Why do gourmet cooking instructors on television use wire whisks or flat wire beaters to whip egg whites on platters instead of electric beaters and mixing bowls? Lauren Groves.

Not just for art's sake. Hand beating is slower, but the whites enclose more air this way, and are therefore more fluffy.

Dear Roberta: Many of the bookcases in our house are placed in front of electric wall outlets. We used to grow red with frustration every time we had to budge these heavy pieces to unplug or plug in an appliance. Then I discovered I could use a carpet knife or other tool to carve away the piece of bookcaue backing that was blocking the outlet. Thomas J. Patterson.

How Hairdressers Keep Abreast of Latest Hair Trends

Meg Welch, owner of Hair Directors, Inc., Arlington Heights, meets this challenge by engaging nationally-known guest artists to train and teach her staff the newest hairstyles and latest hair cutting techniques.

The guest designer must be qualified every aspect of the beauty profession. Exnon, European hair designer and instructor who will conduct a class Aug. 10 for the Hair Directors' staff, has trained with Vidal Sassoon and worked throughout Europe before returning to the USA to demonstrate his concept of hair designing.

He conducts more than 50 seminars a year and is a judge for all major hair dressing awards. He also does the makeup and hair styling for many internationally-known models.

Workshop training and education is the most in depth, and beneficial programs of this type allow the instructor to show his methods and techniques as well as to observe and work with each hairdresser individually.

Learning to work as a group harmoniously is an essential part of a stylist's education. Monthly staff meetings enable both management and staff to voice opinions and share views, thus eliminating a communications gap. Group discussions are very exciting. With an enthusiastic group, a discussion usually turns into a workshop with each stylist eagerly awaiting her turn with the scissors to show and share her ideas.

It is most important for a hairdresser to be aware of the condition of the client's hair and to be able to advise her on how to take care of it. To be able to do this, the stylist must know a great deal about the hair structure and the products she recommends. Some manufacturers offer excellent "product knowledge classes." A hairdresser interested in her profession will take advantage of these programs. Illustrated magazines and other visual aids are also helpful.

The Hair Dressers Association meetings and general seminars are beneficial, but nothing is as effective, encouraging or as exciting as having a well-known hair designer — a super star, if you will, tell you, "You've got it!"

Harper College stretched to seams

by RENA WISH COHEN

First of three parts

Compare a yellowing class picture of second graders from any era with a glossy new composite of a second grade today.

The hairstyles have changed, and so have the fashions, but the children themselves will be like peas in a pod.

Little boys pulling little girls' pigtails. Wide-eyed innocence peeking out from a bit of ruffle. Tousled hair topping an impish grin.

BUT IF YOU could juxtapose a classroom at Harper College today with a roomful of Harper students from 10 years ago, when the college opened, the changes you'd see would be striking.

In its early days, Harper was a haven for the traditional post-high-school student, unsure of his career goals or unable to afford four years of a university education.

Today, there is no "typical" student. You will find business suits next to blue jeans, salt-and-pepper hair next to Farrah Fawcett-Majors locks, mothers next to daughters, grandfathers next to grandsons.

You'll notice fewer Fremd High School letter sweaters and fewer psychology textbooks, but more students toting welding goggles or manuals on vending machine repair.

And you'll discover more students, period. More than 19,000 last fall alone — nearly twice the number Harper officials forecasted 10 years ago.

THAT IS WHY the parking lot at Harper's campus in Palatine looks like Christmas at Woodfield Shopping Center every day of the year.

It is also why those who are responsible for Harper's future frequently wring their hands and tell you that Harper is "bursting at the seams."

What that means, according to John R. Birkholz, Harper's vice president of academic affairs, is that programs that should have had their own facilities years ago have remained in temporary quarters long outgrown.

It means that aspiring medical lab technicians share space with biology students, secretarial science is still stuck in four stopgap classrooms, and would-be thespians have to be content with mounting a production of "Godspell" without benefit of a stage.

It also means that classrooms at Harper are in such high demand that routine maintenance often must be done while classes are in session.

PART OF THE problem is that Harper's building program is always behind schedule — a casualty of the lag between each chunk of new enrollments and the time it takes to build a new building to accommodate them.

Another dilemma is that, as Harper expands its curriculum to keep up with the demands in the community, the college is attracting more and more students to less and less space.

Last fall, for example, 10 students were enrolled in production welding, 175 in interior design and 825 in adult basic education — three programs that nobody even dreamed would exist when the Palatine campus was designed a decade ago.

Most significant, perhaps, is that nobody dreamed that the graying of America and the trend toward lifelong learning would hit Harper so fast, and cram the campus so soon.

Even Harper Pres. Robert E. Lahti, who prides himself on being somewhat of an educational visionary, admits, "It's gone the way I predicted it would go. The only thing that's happened, it's gone twice as fast."

ALTHOUGH LAHTI will have an occasional slip of the tongue and still refer to Harper's patrons as "the kids," he is fond of lecturing about how the old "junior college" label became as passe as The Twist as career education and then adult offerings caught on.

When Harper opened its doors in 1967 in leased high school classrooms, Lahti recalls, the emphasis was liberal arts, and most people regarded Harper as a two-year prelude to "real" college.

Career education, Lahti said, was considered a path for "other people's children." But soon enrollment in vocational and technical courses began to climb, and today it accounts for about 42 per cent of Harper's traditional credit students.

But now the growth is in "nontraditional students" — primarily adults — who compose 36 per cent of Harper's total student body.

The adult student, Lahti says, is here to stay.

THESE CURRICULUM changes have played havoc with Harper's student profile and contributed greatly to the space squeeze afflicting the college. For example:

- In 1969, more than half of Harper's credit students were under 21. Last year, only 39 per cent fell into that age bracket, and the average student at Harper was slightly older than 28.
- Because the students are older, they are more likely to be holding down part-time or full-time jobs to support themselves. As a result, there are more part-time students: 65 per cent last year compared with 44 per cent in 1969.
- Because there are more part-time students than forecast when the Palatine campus was designed 10 years ago, the campus last fall had to squeeze about 19,000 bodies (give or take a few thousand because of off-campus facilities) into space intended for about 10,000.

Some of the crush could be alleviated if Harper completes its 20-building master plan. But because of the vagaries of state funding, only three of the eight unbuilt buildings are close to construction. Harper is not even planning to request state funds for another two until 1979, and the final three — a large lecture hall, an auditorium and a continuing education facility — may be a long time coming.

As Trustee Robert Moats puts it, "Auditoriums are a low funding priority (in the state) when other schools still need libraries."

Year	Projected full-time students	Actual full-time students	projected total students	Actual total students
1967	—	1,035	—	1,752
1968	1,070	2,355	1,610	3,735
1969	2,050	3,673	3,170	5,358
1970	2,740	4,202	4,340	6,980
1971	3,190	4,945	5,170	9,312
1972	3,840	5,247	6,350	10,803
1973	4,400	5,812	7,270	12,747
1974	5,070	6,118	8,380	14,138
1975	5,510	7,588	9,110	17,212
1976	6,460	7,666	10,780	19,375

ALL OF WHICH leaves Harper officials not only with a campus strained to the limits, but with a big question mark about how to plan for the future.

"What am I going to tell my dean of career development?" academic affairs vice president Birkholz asks. "Should he spend time developing new pgorams if we're not going to have the facilities?"

Two years ago, Birkholz noted, the Illinois Community College Board authorized Harper to offer a program in auto body repair. Harper explored the possibility of leasing the 100,000 square feet of space the program would require, but the cost was prohibitive, Birkholz said.

Even if the Palatine campus were completed tomorrow, there is no provision in the blueprints for an auto body shop. So Harper officials say only one solution seems feasible, if Harper is ever to offer the program — Offer it on a second campus.

Tomorrow: The second campus story.

For months there have been rumblings — and occasional outbursts — of discontent over Harper College's plans to build a second campus in Wheeling Township. While the administration is pushing expansion, the board of trustees election this year threw the majority to those advocating caution. In the first of a three-part series, education reporter Rena Wish Cohen examines the pressures moving the college toward expansion.

Survival of the Fittest

by DALE SINGER

When the light go out, or the oil runs dry, or the trucks stop rolling, or someone pushes the nuclear button, who will provide for and protect you and your family?

John Moore is a survival consultant. He sees society becoming too dependent on forces beyond its control and thinks it's time we learned to get along by ourselves.

New Yorkers caught without power were able to adapt to a short-term situation, but Moore, who also is chief investigator for the Jefferson County Missouri public defender's office, teaches how to survive a more prolonged disaster.

"The more technically advanced society becomes, the more vulnerable it becomes to a breakdown in the system," he said in an interview the day of New York's massive power failure.

"TO PUT OUT all the lights in New York 100 years ago, you would have had to steal all the kerosene in the entire city. Now all you have to do is throw a few switches."

Moore's plan for energy, food, nuclear or monetary crises is a simple one — find a strategic retreat, self-supporting and easily defensible, take your family and leave the outside world behind.

He spent two years before he found the right spot for himself, his wife and their 2-year-old daughter. It's 90 minutes from St. Louis, on high ground and at least a mile from the nearest highway.

When his permanent home is finished, complete with steel-reinforced concrete in the foundation and a steel door to the basement, Moore said, "I could live the rest of my life there without a doubt."

MOORE CHARGES a consulting fee ranging from $300 for three months of training and advice to $1,000 for year-long service. He contrasts this to a $200-an-hour fee charged by similar survival experts on the East and West coasts.

Many are eager, he said, to share the knowledge he gained in the armed forces and in five years of research into survival techniques. Some of his clients, he said, are public officials, all demand anonymity.

> "To put out all the lights in New York City 100 years ago, you would have had to steal all the kerosene in the entire city. Now all you have to do is throw a few switches."

Moore teaches them how to become self-sufficient, no longer relying on the government or other institutions.

"Virtually everything you use every day — water, heat, food — is provided by people you have absolutely no control over," he said.

TO DEVELOP their retreats, Moore's clients learn about firearms and self-defense, raising their own food using vacuum packed seeds that retain potency, and setting up a camp at the most useful site, not the prettiest.

His wife, a nurse, helps with the medical training, teaching how to stockpile drugs and receive proper inoculations. Moore also gives courses in communications, map-reading and radiation-monitoring.

The possibility of nuclear disaster, once so large in the public consciousness, has seemingly grown less, but actually is greater, Moore said.

"What I tell my clients is that the first small country with nuclear capability that is on the losing side of a brush war is going to use it. It's an inherent tendency in man — he doesn't like to lose a war."

PERSONS ANSWERING Moore's classified newspaper ad don't need much convincing that his training is needed once they hear his scenario of what can happen, he said.

"I think last winter is a good example of what dependence on a central supply source can do, in Ohio, for example," he said.

All of this may sound like a return to pioneer days, but Moore insists that life at your own family retreat can have a measure of comfort, if it is well planned. That's where his training courses and consultation come in.

How many people think their house is going to burn down?" he said. "But they still have fire insurance.

"I just ask people to look at the likelihood of a nationwide truck strike or another severe winter or another Middle East war escalating into a nuclear confrontation. Then I ask them to draw their own conclusions."

'The Kallikaks' is downhome garbage

Television is sinking to new lows.

NBC has decided to take an Appalachian family and turn their poverty and cultural deprivation into stupidity and digust, all for a few laughs.

I, for one, was not laughing at "The Kallikaks" Wednesday when it premiered as a limited, five-week half-hour series.

The show is visually and verbally a piece of garbage.

I AM AWARE the same thing was said about Norman Lear's "All in the Family" when it first premiered. Both shows certainly go against television's normal theory that viewers would prefer to see the glamor and intrigue of a fantasy world rather than settle for the hard facts of reality.

Jasper T. Kallikak, head of the church mouse-poor household, is a retired Appalachian coal miner. He has moved his family to Nowhere, Calif., and pumps no-name gasoline from two dirty, old pumps.

His wife, Venus, is an overweight woman who has an uncrontrollable appetite for vulgarity.

Their teen-age daughter, Bobbi Lou, is a blonde, empty-headed social climber. And son Junior is a child genius who bounces big words off the rest of the family and outsmarts them at every turn.

THE MOST distressing thing about this new television pilot is that David Huddleston, the talented and well-known character actor, plays a major part in it. He portrays Jasper and enjoys an influence on the writing anl acting that went into the show — a special feature of his contract, he said.

Huddleston, who has earned a place in the business by mastering the role of a Southern, red-neck sheriff, says the distasteful, unappealing reality of the program is all part of the "innovation" involved.

"This show is as different to television now as 'All in the Family' was when it first came on the air. Look, 90 per cent of America is exactly the way we are in this show. If you can let them look at something in life they are already familiar with in a comedic way, they may take to it," Huddleston said Friday during a stop-over in Chicago, barely recognizeable after losing 65 pounds in the past 72 days.

"I know we're going to be compared with 'Green Acres' and 'The Beverly Hillbillies,' but we're different because we are dealing in each episode with specific topics like big government and unscrupulous religionists. They are institutions and problems that the average person faces and, many times, in the same way the characters on this show do," said the 46-year-old Huddleston.

HE MAY BE right about the show. The overnight ratings in the top markets of the country showed "The Kallikaks" doing better than anticipated, especially in the Chicago area.

There's an importance to this sad series for Huddleston because it is his first starring role in a television show. He is a veteran actor who has made a very lucrative career playing unforgettable secondary roles and the tough guy in more than 250 television commercials. He got his start on the stage in such musical comedies as "Mame," "The Music Man" and "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum". All made successful runs through Chicago in the '60s.

"The Kallikaks" offers Huddleston a chance he's been waiting for a long time, although he says he has never felt badly about making a living in secondary roles. The stereotyping of a character, in Huddleston's case, has worked to his advantage.

"I love the character (Jasper Kallikak)", he said. "I think he's a rascal and a conman with many sides and many shades that will allow me to experiment. I took the part for that reason and because it's another plateau in my career."

IT WOULD SEEM Huddleston reached several more impressive plateaus in westerns like "Rio Lobo" and "Blazing Saddles" and in television series like "Petrocelli" and "The Waltons."

His future roles in films such as Gene Wilder's "The World's Greatest Lover" and the contemporary science flick "Capricorn One", with Elliot Gould and Karen Black, certainly hold more promise than his lead in "The Kallikaks."

It is not Huddleston's talent as an actor that I question but, rather, the values and conscience of the show. The network contends "The Kallikaks" offers a forum for people between the Alleghenies and the Rockies, but the program does nothing but disgrace those people and insult the rest.

TV NOTES:

• WMAQ station manager Lee Hanna and news director Sheldon Hoffman will be deciding within the week whether to pair weekend news anchor Don Craig with Ron Hunter on the 10 p.m. weekday newscast. Chances are they will. Craig is one of the most able and well-liked on-camera personalities the station has. It would be a mistake not to utilize him to the fullest. Meanwhile, Maury Povich is continuing his anchor duties on the daily 4:30 p.m. newscast without a formal contract. He hopes to be released in order to take an anchoring job on the West Coast. That isn't bound to happen, however, until the station has landed a suitable replacement. As management there always says, they're just looking . . .

• Mort Crim today begins co-anchoring the 6 p.m. newscast with Bill Kurtis on WBBM-TV, Channel 2. Walter Jacobson will continue his "Perspectives" and solo anchoring of the 5 p.m. news show, while co-anchoring the 10 p.m. newscast with Kurtis.

TV HIGHLIGHTS:

• Haley Mills and Hywel Bennett star as newlyweds whose marriage problems begin on their wedding night in the entertaining English film, "The Family Way," at 8 p.m. on Channel 5.

• Get ready for a third straight week of network baseball featuring a Chicago team! The Cubs face the Pirates at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 7.

• That all-American hero, Flash Gordon, challenges Ming the Merciless in "Deadly Ray from Mars," a fun thriller at 8 p.m. on Channel 9.

Cheryl says 'halo Angels' and wants Farrah chance

by VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "I wouldn't give that spot to a leopard" is a show biz saw coined in vaudeville for an act following the bell-ringing, show-stopping hit on the bill.

No matter how good the act, it can't follow a show-stopper, according to lore.

That is precisely the spot in which a beautiful young blonde will find herself this September when she replaces Farrah Fawcett-Majors in "Charlie's Angels."

FARRAH IS A fable in her time. She has adorned scores of magazine covers and sold $6 million worth of posters. She is unanimously conceded to be the All-American dream girl. And, in fact, she is a delightful and beautiful young woman.

She opted out of "Charlie's Angels," at the completion of the series' first year to seek her fortune in the more remunerative and prestigious world of movies.

The young blonde following this show-stopper is Cheryl Ladd.

Cheryl and Farrah share some things in common. They are about the same age and are endowed with tawny blonde beauty, blue-green eyes, willowly figures and both are married to actors.

FARRAH IS THE wife of Lee (Six Million Dollar Man) Majors. Cheryl's husband is David Ladd, son of the late Alan Ladd.

Both appeared in small roles in episodic television. Both made a good living making television commercials.

Farrah is from Corpus Christi, Tex. Cheryl is a native of Huron, S.D. But the big difference between them is that Farrah is a star, an international sex symbol, while Cheryl is virtually unknown.

But Cheryl is no sacrificial lamb. And she just may upset the hoary malediction about following tough spots.

Unquestionably, the heat is on Cheryl. Will she measure up to Farrah? Will the show's top ratings decline without Farrah? Will Kate Jackson and Jaclyn Smith, Charlie's other angels, accept her as an equal?

SHE PAUSED during a day off recently to say that costars Jackson and Smith had accepted her into their tight little sorority without rancor.

"It was a little rough the first week while we were testing each other out," Cheryl said. "But I make friends easily and I didn't want to feel like an interloper.

"I'm the friendly type who goes up to people and says, 'Hi!,' Unless you initiate friendships you can't expect them to come to you. If I hadn't been that way maybe it could have been a long year for me.

"When we went to Hawaii to do the two-hour show which opens the season

CHERYL LADD, Farrah Fawcett-Majors' replacement on the ABC series "Charlie's Angels" has begun filming episodes of the show with Kate Jackson and Jaclyn Smith. Ms. Ladd will portray Kris Munroe, the younger sister of Jill Munroe that was played by Farrah.

all three of us shared the same dressing room. You get to be pretty close to one another under those conditions when you're working 14 hours a day."

Cheryl says she doesn't feel pressured. She knows comparisons to Farrah will be made and she has adjusted to that inevitability.

"I FELT THE pressure before I accepted the role," she explained. "For three weeks I thought about whether to take the part. I had two other offers.

"But this is the part of the year. It's a hit series. The attention given me just for accepting the role was tremendous. I'm already getting fan mail, and even flowers, from all over the country.

"Obviously, this was the right thing to do. But I was concerned about rejection from viewers in their disappointment over Farrah not returning.

"That bothered me until we got to Hawaii where literally thousands of people stood around watching us shoot scenes. They wanted my autograph and called me by name."

THERE SEEMS TO be no artifice about Cheryl except for the obvious change in her professional name. Her maiden name is Cheryl Stoppelmoor which, while catchy, doesn't exactly exude glamor.

Cheryl is an admirer of Farrah although the two beauties have never met.

At dinner the other night one of Farrah's friends approached Cheryl to say that Farrah wished her good luck and a successful run in "Charlie's Angels."

"He said that Farrah wanted to tell me not to let all the baloney and publicity bother me," Cheryl said. "And I appreciate that.

"But I'm indebted to Farrah for something else, and so should all the other actresses in Hollywood. Farrah made a place for pretty girls in television and movies.

"Before she came along a lot of casting directors and producers told me I was too pretty for certain roles. Well Farrah opened a lot of doors.

"I don't expect to compete with Farrah. America fell in love with her and who can describe what it is except magic?"

SIDE GLANCES by Gill Fox

"We've been through richer, poorer, better and worse -- maybe we're ready to get married!"

Ask Andy

Gymnastics is popular all over the world

HOW DID GYMNASTICS ORIGINATE?

Nadia Comaneci, a 14-year-old from Romania, won three gold medals in the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal and continued building worldwide interest in gymnastics that had started to mount when a 13-year-old Russian girl by the name of Olga Korbut thrilled large audiences in the 1972 games in Munich. Gymnastics has become a favorite spectator sport.

We don't know exactly when the first gymnastic routine was performed, but it most likely happened in ancient times. For hundreds of years, young men and women, as well as boys and girls, have been performing difficult acrobatic exercises.

A German schoolteacher by the name of Friedrich Jahn receives credit for building the first modern gymnastics equipment. He came up with his contribution in the early 1800s, and almost immediately there were people in many countries who became competitors. When the first modern Olympics were held in 1896, gymnastics was part of the program.

Men take part in six events: floor exercise, pommel horse, rings, long horse vault, parallel bars and horizontal bars. Women have four events: balance beam, side horse vault, uneven parallel bars and floor exercise.

Most women are all-around gymnastic competitors and perform both compulsory routines and optional programs in all four events. Some men elect to enter only several events and they also perform both compulsory and optional routines. Only all-around men gymnasts, however, compete in international meets where they must take part in all six routines.

A perfect gymnastic score is 10.00 with the judges taking off tenths of points for each flaw they see. Bonus points are often awarded for original or especially difficult movements.

Comaneci became the first person in Olympic Games history to earn a perfect score of 10 from the judges. She actually earned seven perfect scores during the preliminary competition and at the finals of the 1976 games in Montreal.

Balance, endurance, flexibility and strength are the attributes necessary to perform well in gymnastics. Most top women reach their peaks during the teen years while men champions have an average age of 21.

Andy sends the book 200 Illustrated Science Experiments to Susan Forrester, age 15, of Niagara Falls, Ontario, Canada, for her question:

HOW IS NITROGLYCERIN USED?

Nitroglycerin is an oily, explosive liquid that is made by treating glycerin with nitric and sulfuric acids. The wonderful thing about this mixture is that it can be used both in medicine as a heart stimulant and as the principal explosive ingredient of dynamite.

Certain types of heart disease and blood-circulation problems are treated when the doctor prescribes nitroglycerin tablets. It's a powerful but very effective medicine.

When used as an explosive, nitroglycerin expands to form gases that take up more than 3,000 times as much space as the liquid. Pow!

An Italian chemist named Ascanio Sobrero discovered the explosive in 1846. In 1864 a Swedish chemist named Alfred Nobel perfected a detonating cap for nitroglycerin and three years later he invented dynamite, a safer and more convenient explosive.

Do you have a question to Ask Andy? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to Ask Andy in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Saturday's Cryptoquote: IT IS MAN THAT MAKES TRUTH GREAT, NOT TRUTH THAT MAKES MAN GREAT. — CONFUCIUS

Oswald and James Jacoby

Win at bridge

Square hand worth less

Oswald: "The flatter your distribution, the less valuable your hand. There just aren't enough prospects for your small cards."

Jim: "Thus, we recommend that with 4-3-3-3 distribution you should not raise your partner's notrump opening with eight points. If he has a minimum 16 and passes you will have put him in a contract that is likely not to make; if he has 18 or a good 17 he will bid game and while he may bring it home some of the time he will be set often enough so that he will not appreciate your raise."

Oswald: "Today's hand is a good example. South has a full 18 points and continues to three notrump after his partner's raise. He ducks one spade, wins the second one in dummy and decides to go after clubs. East ducks the first club and South takes his queen. Back to dummy with the queen of diamonds for a second club lead to the king. Next comes the lead of a third club, East cashes the ace and jack and eventually the defense collects one more spade and the ace of hearts for down one."

THE WEDDING MARCH had a skirl to it Saturday when Linda Curtin married Thomas Digangi at St. Raymond's Church in Mount Prospect. Following an old Irish tradition, Linda had a piper from the Shannon Rovers, Chicago, add "something special and different" to the ceremony.

Pipes were calling an Irish wedding

The bride wore white, but the music made the churchgoers think of the wearin' of the green when Linda Curtin married Thomas Digangi Saturday in Mount Prospect.

Bagpipe music filled the air as the bride walked down the aisle, and piper Mark McDonnell chose traditional Gaelic tunes for the occasion.

McDonnell, 16, of Arlington Heights said it is an old Irish tradition to have a piper at weddings. Members of his group — the Shannon Rovers — often are asked to provide the wedding music, but this was McDonnell's first wedding.

Although there was only one piper at the ceremony, 14 more brought Irish spirit to the reception Saturday. night in Chicago.

For Linda, the bagpipe music was a link with her Irish heritage. "My parents came from Mayor Daley's neighborhood," she said, noting the Shannon Rovers were one of Daley's favorites. "It's something special and something different."

The Rev. John Dewes of St. Raymond's Church, Mount Prospect, said the bagpipe music made the wedding something a bit more special for everyone involved.

"Whenever people chose a custom and it is kind of a part of their whole tradition, it makes it more meaningful for everyone there," he said. "It adds a touch."

Canadian air controllers on strike

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canada's 2,200 air traffic controllers went on strike Sunday and the nation's airlines transferred operations to American border airports in an attempt to keep flying on a skeleton basis.

The general strike, the result of a nine-month wage dispute, virtually shut down air service in Canada.

The Canadian Air Traffic Control association had scheduled rotating strike action for midnight Monday but moved up the strike to 4 a.m. EDT Sunday in reaction to a government announcement that it would seek legislation to impose a contract settlement.

CATCA OFFICIALS sent a telegram Sunday to government negotiators with an offer to reopen contract talks. But chief government negotiator Peter Dawson said the telegram indicated "no change in CATCA's position and we believe no useful purpose would be served by further meetings at this time."

Air Canada said it had slashed its normal schedule of international and domestic flights from about 500 a day down to 26 Sunday.

Canada's other major airline, CP Air, said almost all domestic flights were canceled and that it will operate only limited international service.

The two major carriers said they would bus passengers to the nearest U.S. border airports.

Air Canada officials said passengers to and from Montreal will be rerouted to Bangor, Maine, and Burlington, Vt., Toronto passengers would go to Buffalo and Niagara, N.Y., and Vancouver's would go to Seattle.

CANADIAN AIRLINES earlier had estimated a national shutdown would cost them $6 million a day.

Air Canada spokeswoman Jocelyne Dumont-Jerome said it was difficult to say how many passengers had been stranded by the walkout, but "there are surely thousands."

She said the airline's problems were being compounded by a flood of phone calls from anxious travelers, their friends and relatives, which was jamming the lines.

Talks between CATCA and the government collapsed Thursday night, with six issues — including the wage package — still unresolved.

CATCA president Jim Livingston said the controllers were "incensed" by a government threat to legislate an end to a strike.

BEFORE NEGOTIATIONS were called off, the government was offering the maximum 8 per cent wage increase permitted under its current wage and price controls. CATCA wanted a 12.6 per cent increase.

Transport Minister Otto Lang said after a special cabinet meeting Saturday that the government had reconvened Parliament Tuesday to try to pass an emergency bill to prevent disruption of air service.

GM exec frequented gay clubs

DETROIT (UPI) — A General Motors Corp. executive reportedly spent several hours at a health club frequented by homosexuals the day he was tortured and killed, even though he was supposed to give an important speech at the time.

Authorities seeking the killer of Carson McDowell, 43, of suburban West Bloomfield Township concentrated their investigation Sunday on a strip of northside bars and clubs known as hangouts for prostitutes and homosexuals.

The Detroit News reported records at one gay health club placed McDowell, the father of two teenagers, at the establishment between 9 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. the day he vanished. He reportedly spent the time in a $4 room, but he arrived and left alone.

"HE LOOKED JUST fine," an unnamed attendant told the News. "I saw him a couple of times before he left."

The newspaper also said another club for homosexuals listed McDowell as a member and that he had been there briefly the night before he was scheduled to make his speech.

McDowell, an assistant merchandising manager for Chevrolet truck sales, was reported missing Wednesday after he failed to show up for a 10:15 a.m. speech to dealers at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in suburban Dearborn.

The following day his bloodsoaked body was found in a weed field in Ferndale, another suburb.

AN AUTOPSY showed McDowell had been slashed repeatedly with a razor blade and had numerous cigaret torture burns. He bled to death from a cut on his left arm that severed an artery.

Investigators for the Detroit, West Bloomfield and Ferndale police departments said they were questioning prostitutes and others familiar with the area to learn if McDowell was seen with anyone before his death.

"Our aim: To fear God, tell the truth and make money"
H.C. PADDOCK, 1852 - 1935

Use museum tax to help museum

Residents of Hoffman Estates can be pardoned if they are confused by the maneuverings surrounding the Hoffman Estates Park District's museum tax.

After all, it would seem logical that a museum tax ought to raise money to support a museum.

That was not the way previous park boards handled the special tax, however. those boards used the $16,000 raised annually to pay for heat and light for the park district administration building and to maintain a display case of historic objects. The reasoning: the administration building is a 67-year-old farmhouse and is therefore historic.

The present park board, six of whose members were elected in April, seems to be trying to put some logic back into the use of the museum tax. The board has a committee studying the possibility of using the tax to help support the restoration of the 121-year-old Sunderlage farmhouse by the Poplar Creek Historical Society.

The house, the oldest building in the township, is owned by the village. Because of that and because the historical society is a private group, there are technicalities that must be worked out before the park board can join the project. The park board, to its credit, seems willing to work out the details in an attempt to do the right thing.

Meanwhile, the discussion of the museum tax has resulted in some fanciful logic as various persons have tried to get in line for a share of the money.

A prize for originality must certainly go to David Norris, director of the Boys Club, who has suggested the club should get some of the museum tax money because its headquarters are in an old building and because the club is "a museum of creating leaders."

That interpretation probably has as much merit as justification for using the tax to maintain administrative offices.

It is time the Hoffman Estates Park District put all such flights of fantasy behind it. Museum taxes should support museums — period.

Quit shoving! I've got as much right to the museum tax funds as you have!

Volberding's travels

Everyone remembers his first train ride.

For a child, it's a thrill to climb on board that big train and watch it rumble down the tracks. But some have to wait till a little later in life for the experience.

Take Des Plaines Mayor Herbert H. Volberding. The 49-year-old Volberding has lived in Des Plaines all of his life. When he ran for mayor this year, he campaigned hard on the fact that he was intimately familiar with the city, its people and problems.

Yet until this week, Volberding had never climbed on board that big green and yellow Chicago and North Western train which runs right through the center of his hometown.

The event was a public relations outing sponsored by the Regional Transportation Authority. The train ran non-stop through some of the west suburbs, which Volberding said he had never seen.

It's surprising that Volberding — "Mr. Des Plaines" — has never even taken a short ride on the line which is so much a part of the everyday lives of Des Plaines residents who commute to Chicago for work.

It just goes to prove that even a life-long resident of a community might not know everything about the place.

Volberding seemed to enjoy his encounter with mass transportation, which he described as "fascinating."

Berry's world

"Sorry. I just couldn't resist!"

Jim Bishop

Brownie was the first. I was 10, riding a bike home from school. He ran in front, snapping and snarling at the tire. Brownie was a mutt. I suspected that he wanted to be friends. I stopped.

We became buddies. Every day he accompanied me to school. When I said, "Go home," he turned away, hung his head and tail, and kept looking for a reprieve over his shoulder. In winter, he slept under the blankets at the foot of the bed.

Momma was afraid of dogs. In summer, she sent him to the S.P.C.A. to be killed. I hitched rides on trucks to beat the gas chamber, but the man said I was five minutes late. It is shameful to lean against a wall and cry. I have not wept since.

THERE WERE other dogs. Dozens. When I had my own house, sometimes two were in residence. Training was easy. Two dissimilar sounding words, "No" and "Okay," used without shouting, worked on all. Some were serious dogs who frowned.

Others were comedians. I was doing a little fancy drinking in New York and a lady gave Sixtus to me. He was a Saint Bernard pup. He had a brown-and white head the size of an office safe. He was on the back seat of the Ford and occupied the entire rear-view mirror.

He lasted a week. My wife saw him in the morning coming down the stairs with Gayle, 2. They took a look and walked backward upstairs. He loved snow. And he loved touching noses with Gayle and watching her fall backward in a snowsuit. Sixtus ate everything including corn on the cob.

Duke of Amherst was given by a trumpet player. He was a pedigreed English Springer — the dog, that is. He was also a solemn-eyed drunk. Duke would drink anything as long as it was straight. His hangout was Matt Moran's saloon. His forepaws hung nicely over the top of the bar.

THE BARFLIES thought his hung-over expression was perfect. "Gimme a Scotch and soda and see what my friend with the long ears will have." He arrived home trotting on a bias with a yard of tongue hanging out. My wife didn't like him. My sole defense was, "He can't be drunk. I don't know anybody will give us a drink much less our dog."

It didn't work. He was sent to a farm. He died three months later — dried out — and my old man blamed me for the death. "That poor dog had a weakness," he roared, "and you refused to tell the farmer about it."

Scamper was Gayle's dog. He pretended to be a boxer. She bathed him in the kitchen sink. One evening I tossed him a hunk of meat. "Stop!" she begged. I asked why. "It's Friday," she shouted. "So?" "So he's a Catholic dog, I christened him with holy water."

Suzie was grayish. An English bulldog. Busted teeth stuck from her lower jaw. She had shoe-button eyes, a corkscrew tail, and lots of years. If she could get pregnant, I figured, so could Grandma Moses.

SHE GOT PREGNANT. English bulls give birth to two or three. Suzie spent two days giving birth to 14. She had two piles of torn newspapers. The nine live ones went on one pile; the five stillborns were on the other.

She cut the umbilicals and licked their bellies to make them breathe. She didn't cry or whistle through her nose. All she asked was privacy.

Rock of Shrewesbury was the most dignified German shepherd I knew. He never bit anyone, but he could stand like a statue and stare a stranger down. He was also a good baby-sitter for Ginny and Charley's twins. Nobody got into the bedroom, including the parents.

Like everyone in the world, he had a weakness. He liked to bury bones in the back. In the morning, he needed a treasure map. He could never remember where the goodies were.

OUR PRESENT shepherd, Charlie Chan, is nine. Kelly has trained him to eat anything, including scallions and tomatoes. We tried to mate him with a lady shepherd. Her owner gave Charlie Chan a cookie.

The jerk was so polite that he carried it out back in his teeth. He dropped the cookie at the lady's feet. She bit him on the head. Four stitches and a vow of chastity.

Bob Considine knew me as well as most. I was in Israel researching a book called "The Day Christ Died." He was holding a bar up with Budd Schulberg and Irwin Shaw.

"Bishop," he said solemnly, "has a guaranteed bestseller." "How come?" they said. "His research shows," Considine said, "that Jesus had a dog." . . .

Should household pets be banned?

Cats, dogs and other household pets create a nuisance for neighbors, law enforcement problems and use up food resources the world could use for other purposes. For that reason, some persons argue that, at least in urban and suburban areas, pets should be limited or banned completely. Pet owners, these people say, are irresponsible in the way they allow pets to reproduce and have little consideration for others.

Do these arguments have a point? Or are there better arguments for allowing pets? Send your views to Forum, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Letters should be signed and include street address and telephone number for verification purposes. Responses should be received by The Herald by Saturday, Aug. 13 and will be run on Thursday, Aug. 18.

'Dynamic inertia' will pump you up

by DICK WEST
(The Lighter Side)

WASHINGTON (UPI) — America's body-building cult, until recently only a puny subculture in the great bulging mass of life styles, is beginning to make a ripple of its own.

All over the country men are taking up exercises not for health's sake but for cosmetic purposes. They hope to develop pretty muscles like Arnold Whatzizzname, star of the movie "Pumping Iron" and everybody's all-time "Mr. Universe."

Some sociologists dismiss the body beautiful movement as a transitory fad. I remind you they were saying the same thing about jogging a few short years ago.

ANYWAY, everybody and his dog are jogging nowadays. And if a jogger doesn't have a dog, he'll probably find himself being followed by someone else's mutt.

Although body-building has not reached that stage yet, it is catching on fast. As you'll see when you go to the beach this summer.

I spent last weekend at the beach. I was basking supinely next to a young woman who either was wearing a brown bikini or had a rather unusual suntan. Then a bully with pretty muscles came along and accidentally kicked sand in my face.

THE GIRL looked at me scornfully.

"Are you going to let him get away with that, Cyril?" she cried.

Two things should be noted: My name isn't Cyril and I had never seen this girl before in my life. So the situation is clear.

If you want to have any peace on the beach this summer, you had better take up body-building exercises. Otherwise, you're going to be pestered to death by strange girls trying to promote one-sided fights.

THE PROBLEM is that most body-building programs involve weight-lifting. And that doesn't necessarily give you pretty muscles.

Weight-lifters are likely to wind up looking more like Vasily Alexeev than Arnold Whatzizzface.

Alexeev, Russia's Olympic weight-lifting champ, is strong, sure. But that body of his is an eyesore. What we're after is beauty, not strength.

I recommend a book called "Pumping Jello." It guarantees body-building without strength through an exercise regimen known as "dynamic inertia."

AN INERT MUSCLE is more or less dead weight, as you suspect. So rather than lift weights, you lift muscles. In other words, you train half of your muscles to lift up the other half.

Then you let those muscles rest and activate the inert half.

That way you'll get a Greek God physique with only have the effort. And the girls on the beach will mind their own business.

'Swim meet a good deal'

As an 8-year resident of Schaumburg and subscriber to The Herald, I am very irritated by your front page story on July 30 "Swimmers angered by pool closing." You gave the negative comments of a few 9 and 10-year-olds and one adult. That certainly seems like biased journalism. How about some positive comments from Schaumburg children and parents who are proud to have the meet here, or perhaps comments from those who will be involved in the meet. It is an important swimming event.

Moreover, years ago when Meineke Pool was on the drawing boards, one of the purposes of building an olympic size pool was to draw swimmers from all over for meets. It was to be good public relations for Schaumburg and bring revenue into the park district.

My daughter is in synchronized swim at Meineke Pool. I had to drive her to Atcher Pool (which is farther from us) for practice. I don't feel in the least put out. I'm happy we have three pools.

There was enough advance publicity about the swim meet for the public to be informed. There were posters at each of the pools a week to two weeks advertising the meet. The meet was even publicized in your paper, The Herald.

Camille C. Pollowy
Schaumburg

I HAVE BEEN a resident of Schaumburg for 14 years. I have always had swimmers on the park district swim team. Two of them are now life guards at Meineke Pool. My youngest son has been swimming for Camp Duncan YMCA for the past year. Mr. John Eliot, the coach of Camp Duncan YMCA and our park district coach is one of the best in the state (see The Herald Leisure March 26, 1977). Camp Duncan (YMCA) is second to B. R. Ryall YMCA. (Maybe this year CDY will be No. 1).

This weekend Camp Duncan YMCA hosted an excellent swim meet. Visitors admired our facilities. The meet went well, the awards were nice. The swimmers will return and more will come next year. Many other communities are happy to hold AAU swim meets in the summer, (Franklin Park, Park Ridge, Hinsdale, North Brook, Portage Park to name a few.)

We have closed our pools many times in the past for Synchronized AAU Swimming, AAU Diving Meets, Master Swim Meets, park district swim meets and the water shows without inconveniencing anyone. The pools have the closings posted outside the pools during the season. And for a week before, it is announced over the loud speakers at the pools. The life guards tell me they had no complaints. Anyone showing up last weekend to swim must not go to the pools very often. All pool pass holderes were welcome to see the swim meet free. I'm sure many people in the community enjoyed having the AAU swim meet. Especially the many people and businessmen who supported us.

'Add parking'

On July 20, I took a Feminique trip through the Arlington Park District. As I waited for the bus to arrive at Camelot Park and take us out, I saw many women looking for a parking space. The pool was jammed with people, lots of activities were going on and there was no place to park except along the curving drives. I saw women hesitate, but what could they do but park there. They were all Feminique patrons.

My husband came to pick me up at five that evening and no parking spaces were available so he also parked there, as the bus was due in a few minutes. In about five minutes, a police car arrived and the officer promptly gave tickets to all cars parked along the drive, including my husband's. He was not in the car due to the heat. He was a few feet away standing in the shade. My husband questioned the officer and he said the cars were parked by a yellow curb line (a fire line, but no signs anywhere). He was most courteous and doing his job. We know a yellow curb line is wrong, but what can one do when no space is available.

The point is, these women had to pay a $5 fine as they had no choice, being gone all day on the trip. This will not help the Feminique program, from what I have heard from the ladies.

The park district boasted they are in the black and making money. How about spending some on signs and most important, add more parking spaces. Frontier Park has that space. The park district is always asking the citizens for money for this and that. How about the park district supporting those who support them? General opinion was "A Rip-Off."

Investigative reporting not quite bright

Charles B. Seib

One by-product of the Watergate adventure was a journalistic fad — investigative reporting. The exploits of Woodward and Bernstein were hailed as a giant step beyond old-style journalism and into the active pursuit of evil. All across the land, reporters set out on the trail of malefactors, and journalish schools were besieged by youngsters eager for basic training.

But the glamor is dimming: Investigative reporting has come on parlous times. Watergates, it turns out, are hard to come by. And the public is sick of the miniscandals, semiscandals, psuedo-scandals and one-day scandals that are being served up in lieu of the real thing.

So desperate is the press to produce a rousing encore to its 1972-74 extravaganza that it has attached a label, "Koreagate," to the current most likely prospect — the acceptance of South Korean cash and favors by members of Congress. The label started as an inside gag, but now one hears it in television news reports and sees it in newspaper headlines.

DESPITE THE LABEL, and the unseemly prejudgement it implies, the Korean story is losing steam. Its problem is one that besets much of investigative reporting today, at least on the national level: a lack of official follow-through.

The Watergage story had a major ingredient that is missing today. Because the folks in trouble were Republicans, the Democrats who controlled Congress were happy to take a handoff from the press and run with it.

Today the situation is different. The partakers of Korean kindness were mostly Democrats, and Democrats not only still control Congress but they control the White House as well. The unsurprising result is official foot-dragging and confusion.

The press, meanwhile, has been spinning its wheels. And some of its efforts to keep the story alive have provided ammunition for those who accuse it of excesses ranging from character assassination to destruction of the Republic.

FOR A TIME IT looked as though the personal finances of Bert Lance, President Carter's close friend and advisor and director of the Office of Management and Budget, might enliven the summer doldrums. But that story hasn't reached the "Lancegate" stage and it probably never will.

Lance told his story on Capitol Hill and got both approval and sympathy. Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., who presided over the hearing, told the President's friend that he had been unjustly "smeared from one end of the country to the other."

For good measure, Ribicoff took a slap at investigative reporters. They are trying to 'get everybody — that's the name of the game," he said, and that undoubtedly summarizes the view of a good many members of Congress.

The Lance case, incidentally, illustrates another problem besetting today's media investigators. The press has not recovered from its traditional honeymoon with a new President. Reporters at Carter's July 28 news conference did not ask a single question about Lance's interesting financial arrangements. As columnists Jack Germond and Jules Witcover pointed out, Richard Nixon would not have been treated so daintily.

PERHAPS THE SOLUTION for the investigators is to find new ground to plow. That is what the New York Times' premier investigative reporter, Seymour Hersh, did.

Hersh, whose last big target was the CIA, turned his attention to big business — specifically to a conglomerate, Gulf & Western Industries. The resulting series may not have rattled many tea cups, but it was a nice change.

Hersh may have something. Bankers David Rockefeller and Walter Wriston and others in that league have been complaining that the press does a lousy job on news about business. I don't think the Hersh treatment is what they are looking for, but at least it's not benign neglect.

I can suggest another fertile field for the investigators: Pay some attention to the operation of the system itselef, or rather to the breakdowns in the system. By that I mean the failure of many public agencies to do the job they are supposed to do.

EXAMPLES: A CITY water department that fouls up its billings so badly that great inconvenience and even hardship are caused its customers. A federal bureaucracy that is unresponsive not only to the public but to its elected and appointed bosses. An agency where rising costs and diminishing efficiency seem to go hand in hand.

The press reports a lot of that sort of thing, but usually the stories are based on the findings of this study group or that interested party. The emphasis is on effect, not on root causes.

In other words, having milked the malfeasance and misfeasance of public officials, what about nonfeasance — the failure to perform? That can have a more direct and hurtful impact on the citizen than the off-hours behavior of a Congressman.

For investigative reporters who want to prove their grit, determination and resourcefulness, the innards of the bureaucracy, local state or federal, is a great place to do it.

Questions abound on neutron bomb

by DANA ADAMS SCHMIDT

As President Carter prepares to make a decision later this month on whether the United States should begin production of the devastating neutron warhead — these are some of the questions facing him:

Does the United State's new neutron warhead (sometimes incorrectly called the neutron bomb) represent such a vast technological advance by the United States that the Soviets will insist on closing the gap before they are willing to talk further about coming to terms on arms limitations?

And, as its critics also contend, would its availability lower the "threshold" of nuclear weapons use because it might kill invaders with its neutron rays within a radius of 1,800 yards of the warhead explosion while inflicting very little physical damage on buildings. And is there something immoral about a bomb that inflicts human casualties while sparing buildings?

(ONE POSSIBLE use might be in response to a Soviet tank invasion of West Germany when the United States and its allies might want to kill Soviet troops but not destroy West German cities, some analysts say. So concentrated would the effect be that the weapon could be used near allied front lines without danger to our side. Since Warsaw Pact forces do not at present have any defense against neutron radiation the neutron weapon, combined with conventional weapons, could thwart the enemy advance within hours.)

Or, as some Pentagon spokesmen counter, would United States use of the neutron warhead be only defensive, with lowyield warheads, and thus have no effect on arms limitation?

They insist that a deterrent that can be used because it is so accurate and precise is more effective in restraining the enemy than a tactical nuclear weapon with a blast yield 10 times greater, which would devastate vast areas.

President Carter has before him a Senate decision to finance the warhead (the amount is secret but is known to be large — in the hundreds of millions). But the Senate added the proviso that if it did not like the President's decision it might, together with the House, jointly veto his action.

The United States has not yet begun limited production of the neutron weapon although prototypes have been tested in Nevada for several years.

SPECIFIC SOVIET objections to the neutron weapon are: that it opens a new round in the arms race; that it may be called a tactical weapon but that any use of a nuclear weapon could lead to nuclear holocaust; that its use conflicts with President Carter's human rights pretensions and negates the President's stated objective of reducing nuclear armament.

The Pentagon at present has no evidence that the Soviet Union is developing a similar weapon.

What exactly is the neutron warhead and why has it become so controversial?

Developed over a period of 20 years, it is a miniaturized hydrogen warhead which is set off by a small atomic burst. The technological advance — in which, as far as known, the Soviet Union has had no share — lies in the miniaturization. Hence the anguished outcries from Moscow calling the warhead inhumane and immoral.

THE OBJECT of the neutron warhead is to destroy the enemy without damaging friendly cities.

This is how it works:

An atomic bomblet included in the warhead goes off to create enough heat to fuse the nuclei of hydrogen atoms called deuterium and tritium. The energy of the explosion causes a limited area of blast and heat and a larger area of radiation of neutron and gamma rays.

The neutron rays traveling at near the speed of light, penetrate the armor of invading enemy tanks. Measured in rads the impact of the rays depends on proximity to the explosion. Anything between immediate proximity to the explosion which counts for 8,000 rads, and 1,000 rads at a distance of 1,800 yards will result in immediate death. Beyond 1,800 there is a chance of recovery from radiation-caused illness and inability to perform complex tasks likely to discourage most attacking forces.

The gamma rays can also kill but will not penetrate armor. They would, however, be effective against infantry.

NICHOLAS DANILOFF

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As a presidential candidate, Jimmy Carter spoke bravely about ending the old, old practice of rewarding political supporters and cronies with ambassadorships.

As President, Carter has excelled all his postwar predecessors at appointing professional diplomats, rather than influential amateurs, to ambassadorial posts.

But, in the view of career foreign service officers, he still has a way to go.

"I WOULD give him a B when you compare him to the recent record," said one official of the American Foreign Service Association. "But when you compare his performance to what he said in the campaign, he rates only a C or a C+."

AFSA officials like to point out that, in the autobiography he published during the campaign, Carter condemned "the disgraceful and counterproductive policy of appointing unqualified persons to major diplomatic posts as political payoffs."

Carter has now made 117 of his 127 ambassadorial appointments, and only 25 — or 21 per cent — have come from outside the professional foreign service.

They include former Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield, who went to Tokyo; former United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock, who went to Peking, and former Yale president Kingman Brewster, who went to London.

The career professionals also complain that the special panel Carter created to screen prospective envoys had only one former ambassador — Averell Harriman, World War II era envoy to Moscow — among its members.

Truth of Kent State can't be hidden

by JOSEPH C. HARSCH

In the same town in the State of Maryland I have seen one memorial to the soldiers of the Confederacy and another to the soldiers of the Union. They reflect the fact that Maryland was divided intimately during the American Civil War.

The two communities who fought against each other in that struggle learned long since to be respectful of each other's memories and memorials. The battlefields of that war honor alike the fallen of Blue and Gray. No one in the North attempts to prevent the descendants of the Confederacy from putting their memorials where their ancestors fought and fell. And vice versa.

Confederate memorials dot the field at Gettysburg in Pennsylvania. Union memorials are abundant in Virginia on the fields of Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Spotsylvania, and Petersburg.

THE AUTHORITIES of Kent State University in Ohio are trying to put a gymnasium overshadowing the place where seven years ago four American students fell to the rifle fire of the Ohio National Guard. Student protesters and parents of two of the fallen have been trfing to prevent the building being put on that place. They want a memorial there to the four.

The motives on the two sides in this issue are understandable in both cases. They are also in conflict.

The authorities of the university and the higher authorities above them of the government of the State of Ohio do not enjoy the prospect of a memorial which perpetuates the memory of the day when in resentment and perhaps also in fear they sent poorly disciplined militia armed with battlefield weapons against unarmed students.

TODAY'S STUDENTS and the parents and friends of the fallen feel that the protest movement of those days was honorable and that those who fell that day at Kent State were the martyrs of a crusade which did in fact change the course of history.

The essence of the matter is that by 1970 the United States was as bitterly and as emotionally divided over the Vietnam war as it ever was by the Civil War. In the Civil War the division was geographical. It was North against South. In the issue over the Vietnam war the division was generational, ideological, and political. It split the country in every possible way, but it divided the country just as vividly as did the Civil War.

On the one side was the authority of government, the importance of law and order, the right of the government in Washington to make policy and to execute the policy which was arrived at by constitutional means. The dissenters and the protesters against the war were challenging established authority. There is no doubt that in many cases they deliberately flouted the law and did indeed undermine public order.

ON THE OTHER side was the case against the war itself, rising resistance to the unfairnesss of the selective service system, revulsion against the killing, against the length of the war and against the fact that the case for the war had never been made convincing to the generation called upon to do the fighting.

There was right and wrong on both sides in 1970.

There were honorable men on both sides in 1970 as in the Civil War — and there were some scoundrels too, and exploiters and foolish people — on both sides.

The time has gone by for attempting to assess praise and blame and to say whether there was more right or more wrong on one side or the other. There are passionate partisans of both causes today who would prefer to go on arguing the issues rather than healing the wounds. Many a veteran of the Civil War kept on fighting it to his last breath.

BUT FOR MOST Americans the time has come to be respectful to the case for both sides and to allow each to have its memorials.

The incident at Kent State on the fourth of May in 1970 was a milestone in American history. It shocked and dazed the country. Government would not again dare to use militia against students. The unpopularity of the war mounted. The protest movement had already forced the retirement of Lyndon Johnson from the presidency. By 1970 it was undermining Richard Nixon.

It seems to me that it is as insensitive for the authorities of Kent State and of Ohio to try to obscure with a gymnasium the place where the four fell on the fourth of May of 1970 as it would be for Pennsylvania to put an office building where Pickett launched his charge at Gettysburg.

Business briefs

Ralston, Quaker Co. drop suit on names

Ralston Purina Co. and Quaker Oats Co. Friday dropped their federal court suits challenging each others' choice of names for their pet foods. Ralston had contended Quaker should not be allowed to use "Tender Chunks" for a new dog food because it was too similar to the "Tender Vittles" name Ralston uses for its cat food. In a countersuit filed April 28, Quaker challenged Ralston's trademark use of "Dog Chow" and "Cat Chow" on its pet foods. The Quaker suit, seeking $48 million in damages, said Ralston's suit was "Designed to eliminate (Quaker) from the dog food market" and called it a "calculated, anti-competitive" move timed to injure Quaker's entrance into the pet food field. Ralston officials declined to comment on the decision to drop the suits.

The seven outlets, including a Hoffman Estates store, will close Aug. 13 for remodeling and conversion to Walgreen stores.

Tourists flock to Britain in Droves

The Americans are coming — and the French and the Germans. The British Tourist Authority reported Thursday that Britain may have a record 12 million tourists during Queen Elizabeth's Silver Jubilee and they probably will spend about $5.1 billion. "These are tremendous figures, tremendous even in contrast with last year's 10.1 million visitors who spend 2.1 billion pounds ($3.5 billion)," Tourist Authority Chairman Sir Alexander Glen told a news conference. "But perhaps more remarkable still may be the surplus on tourism account," he said. "Last year, overseas visitors earned for Britain 560 million pounds ($952 million) more than the British spend overseas on holidays and business. "This year, I would not be surprised if this surplus was near to one billion pounds ($1.7 billion)," Sir Alexander said.

Check on delayed tax returns

Taxpayers who filed their federal income tax returns on time and have not received their 1976 tax refunds should check with their local IRS office as soon as possible, district director Charles F. Miriani said. The most common reason for an undelivered check, according to the IRS, is that the taxpayer has moved and left no forwarding address with the U.S. Postal Service. Because refund delays also can be caused by lost or stolen checks, the IRS urges taxpayers who believe this might be the case to get in touch with their local IRS office as soon as possible so that the IRS can put tracers on the missing checks.

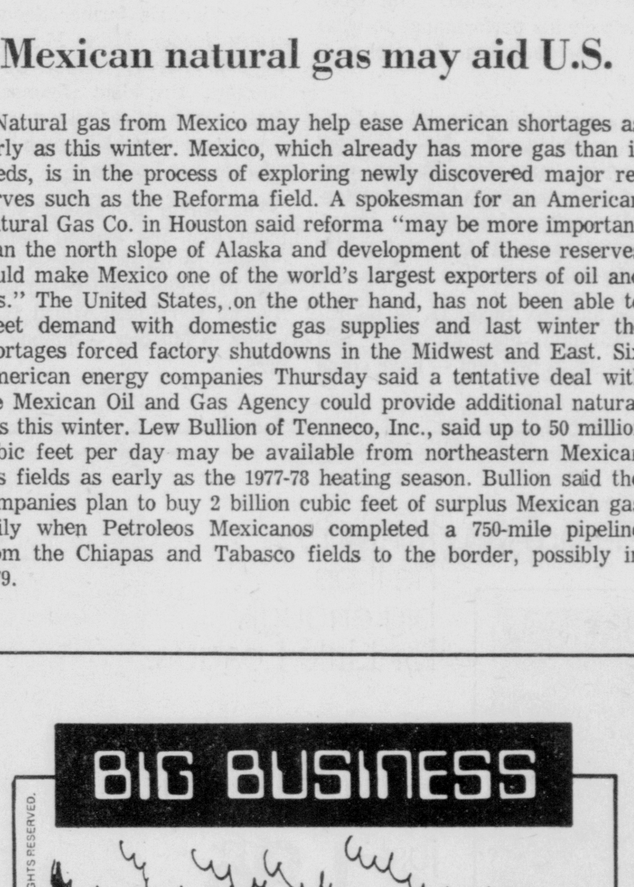
Mexican natural gas may aid U.S.

Natural gas from Mexico may help ease American shortages as early as this winter. Mexico, which already has more gas than it needs, is in the process of exploring newly discovered major reserves such as the Reforma field. A spokesman for an American Natural Gas Co. in Houston said reforma "may be more important than the north slope of Alaska and development of these reserves could make Mexico one of the world's largest exporters of oil and gas." The United States, on the other hand, has not been able to meet demand with domestic gas supplies and last winter the shortages forced factory shutdowns in the Midwest and East. Six American energy companies Thursday said a tentative deal with the Mexican Oil and Gas Agency could provide additional natural gas this winter. Lew Bullion of Tenneco, Inc., said up to 50 million cubic feet per day may be available from northeastern Mexican gas fields as early as the 1977-78 heating season. Bullion said the companies plan to buy 2 billion cubic feet of surplus Mexican gas daily when Petroleos Mexicanos completed a 750-mile pipeline from the Chiapas and Tabasco fields to the border, possibly in 1979.



Pressure is on for team to meet Oct. 1 energy department due date

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A hundred-member team, authorized to carry out the biggest government shakeup in more than a decade, is racing to put together the new Dept. of Energy by Oct. 1.

Some reorganization planners say they have no better than a 50-50 chance to meet that deadline, although Federal Energy Administrator John O'Leary says it can be done "if we can keep the pressure on ourselves."

Congress approved creation of the Energy Dept. — first new Cabinet-level agency in 11 years — on Tuesday. But it left Energy Sec. James Schlesinger and his planning team to work out the countless organizational details.

SCHLESINGER ALREADY strying to oust Defense Dept. employes from the posh new Forrestal Building so that his own department may use the space as its headquarters. He seems to be winning that battle.

The Energy Dept., however, will not even exist until enough plans have been firmed up for President Carter to sign an order, probably about Sept. 1, setting a date for it to open its doors officially.

Planners said results of a current talent search will help determine whether an Oct. 1 opening is achieved.

Some 35 top-level executives — those requiring presidential nomination — must be recruited.

SOME WILL come from existing agencies, but planners said not all incumbents will be retained and many must be brought in from outside government.

About half of the 35 are expected to be nominated when Congress returns from its recess Sept. 7. But officials said if the talent search goes more slowly than expected, or if the nominations are not approved quickly, it could delay the start of the new department.

"You don't want to activate a department with only a secretary at the top," one official said. "The poor guy would be in a desperate situation very fast."

The new department will consolidate activities of the FEA, the Energy Research and Development Administration and the Federal Power Commission and will take over energy-related duties from five other agencies.

THE ENERGY Dept. will have a staff of about 19,000 and a budget of about $10 billion.

"It's a gigantic integration operation," said one official involved in the organizing process.

Each employe being moved to the department must be assigned to a specific job.

Thousands of desks, chairs and typewriters must be tallied and moved to the new department.

Payroll records must be consolidated so no paydays are missed.

Finally, officials said, overlapping regulations from the present splintered energy bureaucracy —affecting hundreds of energy companies — must be made uniform.

New models keep calculator selling

by TERRY HERSHEY

A calculator that talks?

A calculator the size of a book of matches? Or one that is only a quarter of an inch thick?

They're all new models now on the market.

One new calculator is a clock that tells you the hour, minute, second and whether it's a.m. or p.m. Hit a button and you get the year, month, date and day of the week. Hit another button and get the time in another time zone. It also is a stopwatch, as well as a four-function calculator.

THAT IS ONE of the most popular of the new models at the Marshall Field & Co. Store in Woodfield, Schaumburg. "A lot of people travel with them," Karen Horne of Fields said. "They can do their business work and have an alarm clock, too."

Another variation of this gadget computes time calculations and can tell you what day of the week any date falls between 1901 and 2099.

"One of the biggest things now is the thinnest," Horne said. "In fact, any of them sell fast when they're new like the thinnest and the stopwatch. People like to have the newest thing."

But at the J. C. Penney Co. store in Woodfield, which sells only hand-held calculators, the most popular models feature a memory and scientific notation.

OTHERS LOOK like cigaret lighters or can be programmed much like a minicomputer.

Eight years ago, calculators were still mechanical and the lowest priced calculator cost about $695. And all it did was add, subtract, multiply and divide.

Today you can buy a small hand-held calculator, which will do more than the old $695 model, for only $12.95. Some models go as low as $4.95.

What happened to the calculator market?

Several things, according to Marty Sullivan, of Irv's Equipment Supply Co. in Schaumburg.

ONE WAS THE technology that allowed the use of electronics rather than mechanics. "The birth of electronics changed the whole image of calculators," Sullivan said.

The second factor is competition. "There were just too many people making them when they were booming two and three years ago," Sullivan said. "There were too many for the market and, in order to sell units, manufacturers began cutting the prices.

"Manufacturers kept dropping the prices until they were just about as low as they could go. That brought the price of a hand-held mini-calculator down from $79 to $4.95," Sullivan said.

But the price war convinced a lot of manufacturers, particularly American, to leave the market.

SEVERAL COMPANIES, such as Bowmar and Rockwell, have pulled out of the market, along with Panasonic.

A Commerce Department study shows that the American manufacturers have a decreasing portion of the market, down from 49 per cent in 1973 to 30 per cent by the end of 1976.

The Commerce Department predicts the decline will continue especially because of "keener competition" from Japan. Sullivan says Japan is in the forefront of the market because of its cheap labor, not its technology.

The electronic chip, a vital component of the calculator, was developed in the United States. It is half the size of a fingernail and contains the equivalent of thousands of transistors which perform intricate calculations.

The Japanese have now perfected the technology, and can do the same things the American manufacturers can do. But they do it more cheaply because of the cost of labor, Sullivan said.

BUT WILL THE interest in calculators continue? Sullivan thinks so. "The market will never get saturated," he said.

"As every kid graduates from high school — or even grammar school — he is going to need to get a calculator. That's a built-in market that will never diminish."

Horne agrees with him. "In fact," she said, "We had a 5,000 per cent gain in sales for the first week of July this year over the same period last year."

Also, because calculators have become so inexpensive, people will replace them rather than repair them, Sullivan said.

HUMAN NATURE will also guarantee a good market, Sullivan thinks.

"People travel and party more today, and they like to have something different. It's something novel to show off. And as soon as one person has a new one, everyone else at that party is going to have to have one like it."

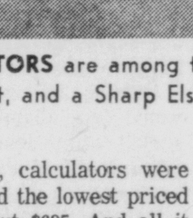
And the new kinds just keep coming. There's now a biolator calculator which will figure your biorhythm to tell you if you are going to have a positive, negative or neutral day.

What kind of calculator will they come up with next? "Anything you can think of," Sullivan says.

Looking for house? Visit bank first

Jane Bryant Quinn

Staying ahead



NEW YORK — People looking for a new house often grossly overestimate what they can afford to pay. This is particularly true of first-time home buyers, although it happens to the more experienced as well. After weeks of searching for the house of their dreams, they're brought up sharply at the office of the bank or savings and loan, when their application for a mortgage is turned down.

There's a simple way to avoid this, which almost no one does: Visit the bank before you go househunting, to see how much you can actually borrow. But most people start with the real estate agent, and go so far as to make an offer on a house before they learn that they've overreached their incomes.

Two cases with which I'm personally familiar illustrate the situation.

THE FIRST IS a young couple making $17,000 a year. The rule of thumb is that fou can afford a house worth two and half times your annual income. Going by that standard, they looked at houses selling for around $42,500. They planned to put $5,500 down.

But they didn't know about another rule of thumb used by banks and S&Ls. It's that mortgage payments and property taxes shouldn't take more than 25 per cent of annual income. Because of their low down payment, the size mortgage they needed would have put them over the 25 per cent limit, so they were turned down when they applied.

At a mortgage rate of 8¾ per cent, and considering tax rates in their area, all they could borrow was $29,000. Together with the $5,500 they already had, the most they could pay for a house was $34,500. Fortunately, this didn't put them out of the housing market entirely, since the median price for an older house is in the area of $33,000.

The second case is an older couple that has worked for years in order to be able to afford a house. Between them they make $22,000, and can afford to put $7,000 down. They made an offer of $48,000 on a house. Since mortgage rates in their area were only 8½ per cent, the monthly mortgage and property-tax payments came in just under 25 per cent of their income. But their mortgage application was turned down anyway. Why?

THERE'S YET another bank and S&L rule of thumb; itsays that a borrower's mortgage, taxes, home insurance plus other long-term debt can't exceed 30 per cent of annual income. This couple was making payments on two cars and a piece of vacation land in New York's Catskill mountains. Those debts, when added to the mortgage they needed, pushed their total monthly payments over the 30 per cent limit.

The bank would lend them only $37,000, which limited their housing choices to a top price of $44,000.

To avoid the disappointment of hunting for a house and then finding you can't afford it, the smart homebuyer goes to the bank or S&L even before making contact with a real estate agent. Explain your situation, before making contact with a real estate agent. Explain your situation, and say that you're trying to find out approximately how much you can borrow. The bank will look at your income and debt, and give you a ballpark answer. (Make it clear that you're not looking for any guarantees, just an approximation of the size mortgage for which you qualify.)

It's worth visiting more than one lender, because not all of them use exactly the same rules of thumb.

If you learn that you can't borrow more than say $40,000 and you have $5,000 in cash, you'll know in advance that you can't afford a house costing any more than $45,000 (and perhaps less, once you consider the closing costs).

With this exception: Once the real estate agent knows your borrowing limits, he may be able to find a more expensive house where the seller is able to give a second mortgage. If the seller will lend you $5,000 payable in five years and you have $5,000 in cash, a $40,000 mortgage will let you buy a $50,000 house (provided that you can meet all the monthly payments).

The trick is knowing your borrowing limits in advance, and planning a househunting strategy with those limits in mind.

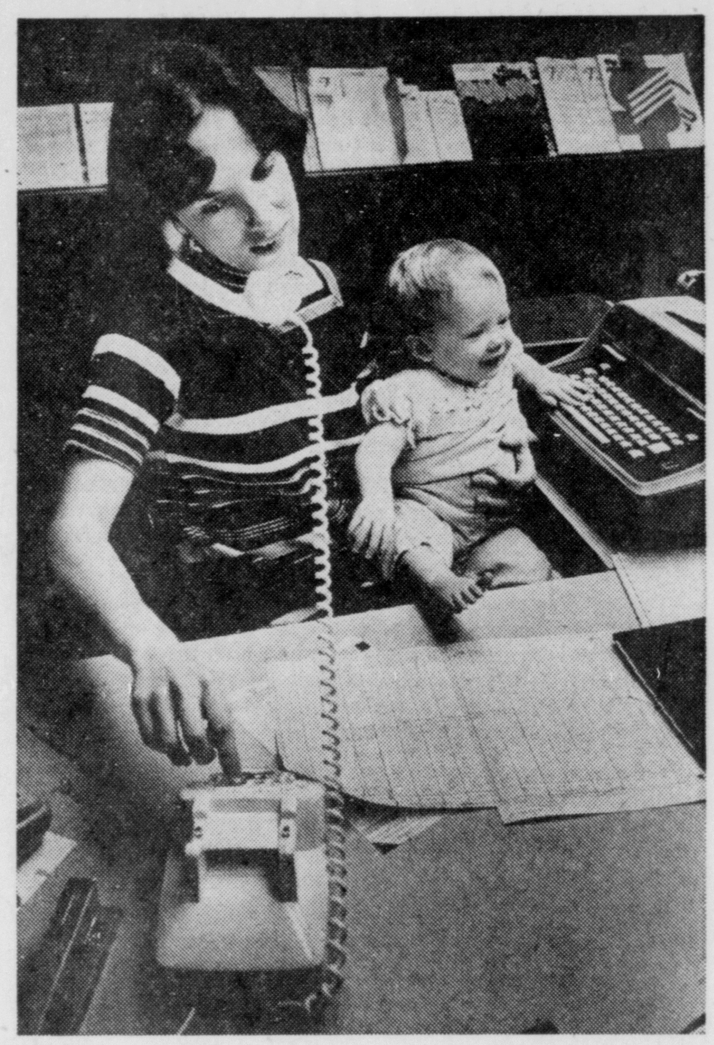
IN A CORNER of the room behind Mom's desk is Jennifer's own file cabinet. An "office" baby, she makes time pass quickly for clients when appointments have backed up.



A HAPPY BABY, 11-month-old Jennifer loves people. Only when she is tired or hungry does she demand special attention from her mother, Linda Harris, who puts aside her work.

Bringing up their baby just all in a day's work

by ELEANOR RIVES

The sign on the Boy Scout Council building on Rand Road reads: "The Harris Group — Tax Accountants."

Walk up to the small suite of offices on the second floor and sure enough — there's the "group:" the Certified Public Accountant, sandy-haired Doug Harris, doing awesome mathematical acrobatics in his office; his pretty brunette wife, Linda, tripling as receptionist, secretary and accountant; and, at floor level, 11-month-old Jennifer, their baby daughter, as accustomed to this setting as to her Arlington Heights home nearby.

Jennifer is an office baby. Her mother has been bringing her to work since she was six weeks old.

"Doug needed my help," said Linda. "And it's terribly hard to find day care for kids in diapers."

DOUG AND LINDA are a young couple on their way up. He has been in business for himself for the past three years, specializing in tax returns and private accounting, with side interests in a vending company and in The Peppermint Stick Lounge in Hoffman Estates. He also directs a business program at Kendall College, Evanston.

Linda is his partner in more ways than one. During the tax season, Feb. 1 to the extension deadline, June 15, they often work from 9 in the morning to 11 at night. With German her major at Indiana University, Bloomington, where they met, Linda has since learned accounting by enrolling in Doug's accounting course at Kendall.

"I was eight months pregnant," she said. "Doug was in Evanston; my doctor was in Evanston; I thought I better be in Evanston, too."

DOUG MOVED into the Rand Road office during Linda's maternity confinement and Linda and Jennifer joined him six weeks later.

"It's not hard to bring a baby to work if it's a small office and the baby is young." explained Linda. "We set up a portable crib in the back room and Jennifer slept much of the time. Feeding was no problem. I just went into the back room, shut the door and nursed her."

When Jennifer reached the crawling stage, her parents adjusted the office to her new activities, and boundaries. To prevent her from munching on the plants, Doug keeps the door to his office closed; to prevent her from rearranging the file system, he barricades the entrance to the file room.

"WE MAKE SURE there are no staples, paper clips or rubber bands on the floor," said Linda. Magazines to entertain clients who must wait are piled into the far inside corner of the table where Jennifer can't reach. But far more entertaining is Jennifer herself, whose office antics never fail to bring smiles to the faces of Harris patrons, and vice versa. One man sent Jennifer into gales of laughter.

"She's a very friendly baby," said Doug. "I don't know if it's from all these people around,, but she has never been afraid of people."

Jennifer has her own file corner, a carton of discarded papers to poke around in. She has discovered that the tightly closed plastic container of paper clips has a delightful rattle. The adding machine does funny things when you press a button, and rulers and empty pop cans are great toys.

THE HARRISES have a refrigerator and hot plate in the back room, so lunch is no problem. Diapers are kept in a file drawer, not necessarily under "D." And twice a day, in accordance with Harris inter-office policy, Jennifer is filed in her crib under "naptime."

"This baby has gone to college, too," said her mother. "when Doug and I attended a one-week mini-university course at Indiana U. recently, there were no facilities for children this young. So we took her to class. We let her crawl around a little and kept feeding her crackers. The school gave her a certificate too."

IT'S NAPTIME decrees Papa Harris as he tucks Jennifer into her crib in the back room of his accounting offices.

Linda works only 10 to 15 hours a week now that the tax season is over, but Next Feb. 1 she and Doug will be hard at it again. And Jennifer will be with them. "I intend to bring her at least another year," said Linda.

Office child happy, Mom uneasy

When Darlene McDonough's next door neighbor, Keith Cook of Arlington Heights, asked her to work for him in a business conducted from his home, she said, "Okay, but what do I do with my daughter?"

"Bring her along," said Cook, president of Precision Media.

So 2-year-old Shannon accompanied her mother, who put in five hours each day doing bookkeeping and other office work — and that worked fine.

But when Precision Media moved into a small office, Darlene was a little nervous. Three desks almost filled the office. Nevertheless, she brought Shannon with her a few days a week. "I couldn't afford a full-time babysitter," she said.

SHANNON ENJOYED it. A closet became her "office" where she sat drinking pop. Eating her bag lunch on a paper towel on the floor became a "picnic." "You can bet I brought plenty of paper towels," said her mother.

Filing cabinets were hung with doll outfits, and when Shannon became tired, she fell asleep on her dolls on the floor. "She was so little," said her mother. "Salesmen would have to step over her."

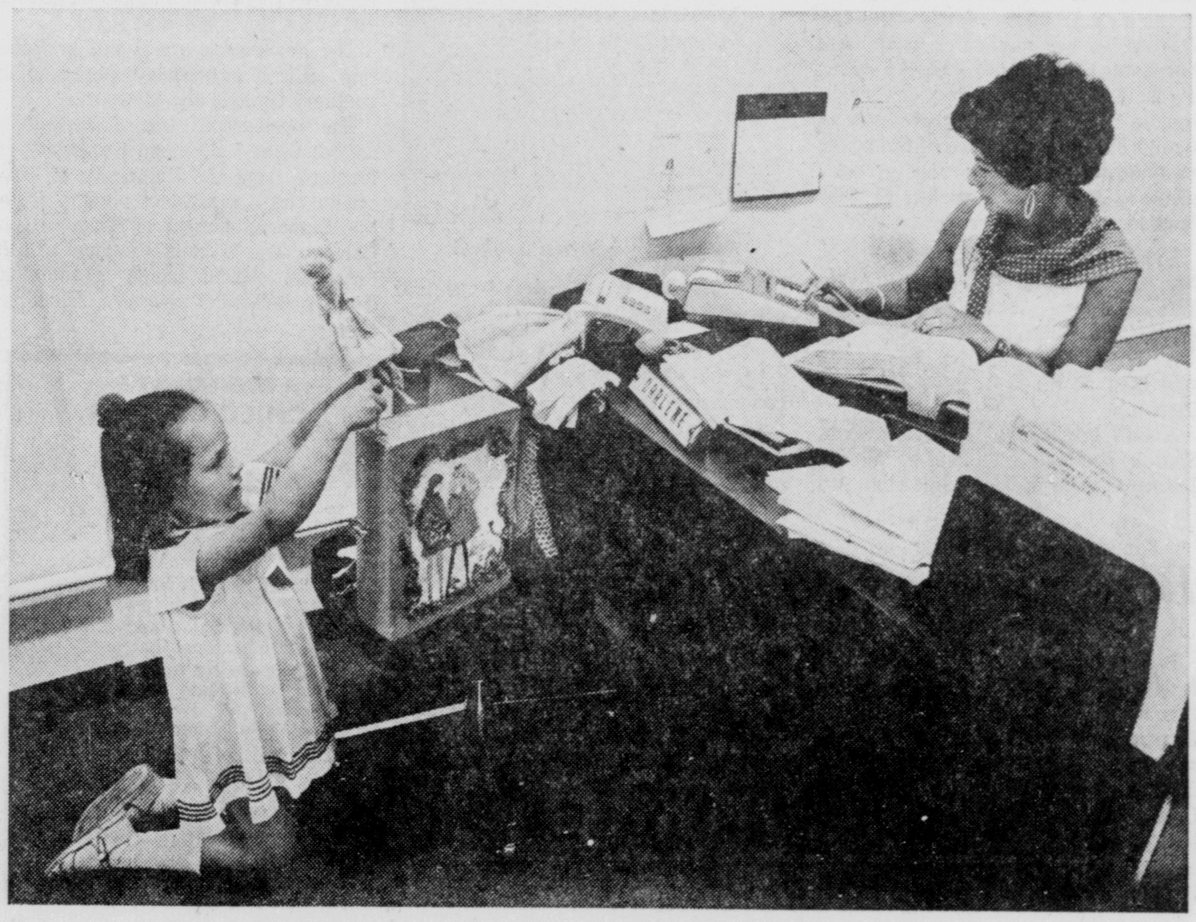
"Gee, you're really hiring them young these days!" they would say to Cook. Or to Shannon, "Are you the new file girl?"

After a year, Precision Media joined forces with Computerland at 50 E. Rand. Shannon, just turned 5, will begin kindergarten in the fall, spending half-days in the office with her mother, now secretary-treasurer of Precision Media.

"JOHN GIBBS (president of Cumputerland) and Keith were fantastic about it," she said. "I was lucky they would allow it."

But it hasn't been easy. Darlene can't forget how nervous she was wondering if Shannon was disturbing anyone, wondering if phone callers could hear her singing. She can still her her daughter's piping voice asking, "Mommy, am I being good?" as she popped goodies into her to keep her quiet.

Darlene shook her head. "I wouldn't recommend it," she said.

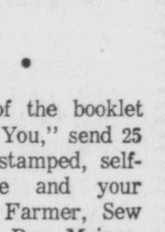


"GOING TO WORK" is play for Shannon McDonough, who began accompanying her mother to Precision Media when she was 2.

Many skirt patterns appropriate for fall

Eunice Farmer

Sew simple



Dear Readers: Continuing with our new look at the fashions for fall, let's discuss today the most important item in your wardrobe — the skirt.

I have searched through various pattern books and come up with some patterns that would cover all types of figures, but you must make your selection according to your own needs.

Many of you have asked for a wrap skirt pattern for bordered fabric, and since so many of the fall challis are bordered, I suggest you try Vogue pattern No. 9733. It's fairly straight with slight ease at the sides and back. It has a button-on tab at the waist and can be adjusted for size. The skirt is simple to make and is perfect for wearing with blouses or T-tops of lightweight knit.

Vogue pattern No. 9853 produces a lovely skirt that is smooth at the waist and hips and ends in a soft flare. This pattern also includes a sleeveless bolero-type jacket.

Another good pattern is Vogue's No. 9707. This is easy to make and can be done in several styles.

Naturally, there are dozens of skirt patterns in each pattern catalogue. Why not begin your fall wardrobe today with a great new skirt?

Dear Eunice Farmer: How would I go about lining a silk dress, and what type of sewing machine needle should I use? — Mrs. Harold H.

Dear Mrs. H. H.: The procedure for lining a silk dress would depend on your pattern. If it is extremely straight, you'll want to underline the entire dress.

When you baste the underlining and the dress fabric together, be sure not to pull either of them too tight, then treat them as if they were only one piece of fabric. This will greatly reinforce the seams and keep the silk from pulling away at any point of stress.

If the dress is loose fitting, you may add a separate lining. For elegance you could use China silk, but because of the cost, you might prefer to line the dress in any lightweight, woven ployester that resembles China Silk.

Since silk is a delicate woven fabric, use a regular machine needle, size nine or 11. NEVER use a ball-point needle for woven fabrics.

This week's winner of the gold blazer buttons is Destie N. Ware, 211 S. Cloudman St., Charlotte, N.C., 28208. Her tip:

"For anyone who has a hard time threading a needle and has lots of basting to do while making a garment, tape a needle threader to your sewing machine with the head wire sticking up. Simply cap the needle over it, turn and pull thread through."

(Dear Readers: Please share your little sewing tips with us. You, too, could win the blazer buttons.)

The doctor says

Antihistamines needed to combat hay fever

I have a nose drip summer and winter. My doctor calls it hay fever but I don't believe it would last like this and never let up. He put me on Ornade once and that never helped much and then on Chlor-Trimeton which isn't much help. Dristan capsules help more than anything but I don't like to take them all the time.

I am 69 and have always had good health. I would like to know what you say about this — if there is any cure or not. I have had it as long as I can remember. What causes it? I don't often catch colds. I do sneeze a lot.

It certainly sounds like an allergy and would be called allergic rhinitis — commonly called hay fever. Such problems are seldom related to hay and do not cause a fever so that old term is very misleading but commonly understood.

While much of hay fever is seasonal, the most common being in the fall with ragweed pollen exposure, some people do have hay fever all year long. In these cases the offending allergic substance is usually house dust, animal dander or fungus spore.

The best treatment is to avoid the substance that causes allergic rhinitis. That requires finding out what substance or subtances are involved. To give you more information on this I am sending you The Health Letter number 8-4 Hay Fever (Allergic Rhinitis). Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it.

I am sorry to tell you that you will need to take antihistamines continually or at least before the symptoms occur to get the best results from them. People with hay fever sometimes make a mistake by failing to take the medicines until the symptoms begin. They are far less effective when taken this way.

Incidentally, Dristan contains antihistaminics, including the same antihistaminic compound found in Chlor-Trimeton.

I had surgery for ulcers three years ago, and 85 per cent of my stomach was taken out. My wife had a hysterectomy operation over a year ago. She says that when we breathe she can smell the odor of blood on us. I keep telling her that it's not possible. Would you please give me an answer on this subject to settle this?

I doubt any answer will settle anything, but I can assure you your wife's impression that she can smell blood is not because she really does. It is more than likely fixed in her mind.

Ultimately we smell, hear and see because of various brain cells that receive signals. For some reason your wife has developed a sensation of smelling blood, but it has nothing to do physically with either operation. I think this is a psychological reaction and your wife might benefit from some professional counseling. Her reaction is really a symptom of a conversion reaction, which means that your wife may have resolved some psychological conflict or anxiety by smelling blood.

If that is the case she might feel better and do better in life in general with some professional counseling that will help her to surface and resolve her conflicts. The anxiety may be related to her surgery, to factors related to why she had surgery or from some totally unrelated aspects of her life.

Dr. Lamb answers representative letters of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Don't take chances with Tris-treated sleepwear

Confusion and controversy still surround Tris, the flame retardant used in children's nightclothing. Since the government banned it, many anxious parents want to know how to tell which garments have been Tris-treated.

They also wonder whether certain recommendations for testing fabrics at home for the presence of Tris are scientifically accurate. Here's what the Consumer Product Safety Commission says:

First, assume that sleepwear up to size 14 has been Tris-treated if made of the following fibers: acetate and acetate blends, triacetate and triacetate blends, 100 per cent polyester and many polyester blends.

Second, accept the hard advice of many scientists: Tris can't be laundered out. Next, they advise, don't believe any claim that one can determine by any quickie home method whether your child's p.j.'s contain Tris. Many stores will pay you back for returns of either new or used items possibly treated with Tris. If yours won't, throw out the garments. Where your children's life and health are involved, why take any chance at all?

Dear Roberta: Why do gourmet cooking instructors on television use wire whisks or flat wire beaters to whip egg whites on platters instead of electric beaters and mixing bowls? Lauren Groves.

Not just for art's sake. Hand beating is slower, but the whites enclose more air this way, and are therefore more fluffy.

Dear Roberta: Many of the bookcases in our house are placed in front of electric wall outlets. We used to grow red with frustration every time we had to budge these heavy pieces to unplug or plug in an appliance. Then I discovered I could use a carpet knife or other tool to carve away the piece of bookcaue backing that was blocking the outlet. Thomas J. Patterson.

How Hairdressers Keep Abreast of Latest Hair Trends

Meg Welch, owner of Hair Directors, Inc., Arlington Heights, meets this challenge by engaging nationally-known guest artists to train and teach her staff the newest hairstyles and latest hair cutting techniques.

The guest designer must be qualified every aspect of the beauty profession. Exnon, European hair designer and instructor who will conduct a class Aug. 10 for the Hair Directors' staff, has trained with Vidal Sassoon and worked throughout Europe before returning to the USA to demonstrate his concept of hair designing.

He conducts more than 50 seminars a year and is a judge for all major hair dressing awards. He also does the make-up and hair styling for many internationally-known models.

Workshop training and education is the most in depth, and beneficial programs of this type allow the instructor to show his methods and techniques as well as to observe and work with each hairdresser individually.

Learning to work as a group harmoniously is an essential part of a stylist's education. Monthly staff meetings enable both management and staff to voice opinions and share views, thus eliminating a communications gap. Group discussions are very exciting. With an enthusiastic group, a discussion usually turns into a workshop with each stylist eagerly awaiting her turn with the scissors to show and share her ideas.

It is most important for a hairdresser to be aware of the condition of the client's hair and to be able to advise her on how to take care of it. To be able to do this, the stylist must know a great deal about the hair structure and the products she recommends. Some manufacturers offer excellent "product knowledge classes." A hairdresser interested in her profession will take advantage of these programs. Illustrated magazines and other visual aids are also helpful.

The Hair Dressers Association meetings and general seminars are beneficial, but nothing is as effective, encouraging or as exciting as having a well-known hair designer — a super star, if you will, tell you, "You've got it!"

Cubs kong Kingman in split

by JEFF NORDLUND

As far as the Cubs were concerned, San Diego's Dave Kingman was crusin' for a bruisin by the time the second game of Sunday's doubleheader split at Wrigley Field rolled around.

After all, the way he was manhandling the Cubs pitching with three home runs and 11 rbi's in the first three games of the series, something had to give.

And it did.

Kingman was hit by a pitch in the second inning of the nightcap and moments later his body-roll into second baseman Mike Kelleher while breaking up a doubleplay ignited a benches-empying brawl.

BUT EVEN THIS time the moody slugger had the upperhand. Though he was ejected unhurt, three Cubs eventually left the game because of the fracas; Kelleher with sore ribs and a sprained neck; Jose Cardenal with a sprained right shoulder; and Steve Ontiveros with a stiff back.

The rhubarb had nothing to do with the game's outcome, the Cubs went on to win 9-4 after dropping the day's first game 8-6.

Kingman, who clubbed a decisive two-run homer in the first game, pleaded innocence on all charges after the game.

"I really didn't do anything," he said. "They hit me with a pitch and then Kelleher jumped on me at second base. I was just trying to break up a doubleplay. I didn't even throw a punch.

"IF I KNEW I was going to be thrown out of the game, I'd have gone right out after Renko," he said.

Kingman's hard, belt-high body-tackle of Kelleher was similar to a play on Opening Day this season when Kingman bowled over Steve Swisher at home plate.

Swisher happened to be behind the plate again in Sunday's nightcap, and he was one of the first Cubs' to give the undersized Kelleher a hand with Kingman.

"The big SOB went in to kill Kelleher," Cub manager Herman Franks said of the incident. "I don't mind a guy going in hard to break up a doubleplay, but that was something else.

"THE LITTLE GUY (Kelleher) did the right thing. Heck, they throw at us all series and we don't do anything. We hit them, and we get an automatic fine. That rule is bull."

The extent of the injuries to Kelleher, Cardenal and Ontiveros were not known immediately after the game, although they were sent for X-rays.

Luckily for the Cubs, Renko steered clear of the ruckus. He went on to post the nearest thing to a strong performance by a Cub pitcher in the series.

Now 2-1, Renko threw seven-strong innings before yielding a pair of homers in the eighth, as the score tightened to 8-4. Dave Guisti, in a Cub uniform for the first time since being purchased from the Oakland A's, came in to put the Padres down in the last two innings.

HOME RUNS by Cardenal and Swisher helped the Cubs to an early 5-0 lead after two innings in the nightcap, and a three-run seventh led by Jerry Morales' triple, Gene Clines' single and Ontiveros' double iced it.

In the first game, the Padres' spotted the Cubs a first-inning, three-run lead on Bobby Murcer's homer before coming back to win its Cubs' starter Mike Krukow, 7-9, was shelled for five runs in his five innings.

Padres' starter Bob Owchinko, 5-7, went seven innings, for the victory. Dan Spillner picked up a save for San Diego by throwing the last three innings and yielding only a ninth inning homer to Bill Buckner.

It was Kingman's two-run homer, his 18th, in the fifth inning which put the Padres ahead for good at 5-4. It also marked the end of Krukow's stint on the mound.

"KINGMAN HAS HIT three homers off me this season," Krukow said afterwards. "Even though the wind was blowing out today that one would have been gone anyway.

"I only made two mistakes out there. I threw a high fastball to Kingman and a hanging curve ball to (Gene) Tenance, and they hit them out of the park.

"I guess I haven't found a way to throw to Kingman yet," Krukow said.

The fight in the second game was not what the Cubs needed since it only added to their growing list of walking wounded. In addition to Kelleher, Cardenal and Ontiveros hurting, the Cubs placed outfielder Joe Wallis on the 15-day disabled list after he broke his finger in a motorcycle accident Saturday.

The concluded series was a disappointment to the Cubs, hoping to gain some ground on the Phillies, who played Los Angeles over the weekend. Instead, Philadelphia swept the Dodgers to push Chicago one game behind and just two ahead of third place Pittsburgh.

WELCOME TO WRIGLEY FIELD. Dave Guisti, acquired Friday by the Cubs, was pressed into action in both games of Sunday's doubleheader against San Diego. The Cubs split with the Padres, dropping the opener, 8-6, but rebounding for a 9-4 triumph in the nightcap.

FOLLOWING THE instructions of on-deck hitter Gene Clines (18), Cub hurler Mike Krukow hits the dirt and slides home with a run in the first game against San Diego Sunday in Wrigley Field. The Padres recovered, though, 8-6. (Photo by Craig Camp)

Percentages fail Sox; lead now ½

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—White Sox manager Bob Lemon opted to play the percentages, rather than go with experience, and ended up paying the price as the Sox lost 3-2 to the Royals here Sunday and saw their division-leading margin shrink to a mere one-half game.

The Royals scored a run in the bottom of the ninth that broke a 2-2 tie and enabled them to sweep the three-game series.

The Sox had tied the game in the top of the ninth on Oscar Gamble's home run off starter and winner Marty Pattin, who dueled young Ken Kravec into the final inning. Kravec opened the Royals' ninth by issuing a walk that brought on reliever Lerrin LaGrow.

LaGROW GOT THE first out of the inning as Al Cowen's sacrificed the runner, Amos Otis, to second. The righthander LaGrow then intentionally walked lefthander John Mayberry, another percentage move that set up a double play possibility.

But Lemon called in rookie lefthander Randy Wiles, just up from Iowa, when the Royals summoned pinch hitter Joe Lahoud, who never got a chance to hit. Kansas City manager Whitey Herzog, who also knows about percentage plays, called in righthanded-hitting John Wathen.

Wiles, replaced an angry Chris Knapp on the roster and hadn't even had time to get his name sewn on the back of his uniform, arriving just before game time Sunday. Knapp, who had won nine games, was sent down after being bombed in the first inning of Friday's loss to the Royals and the promise that he'd be called up by Sept. 1 at the latest didn't appease Knapp at all.

WILES WORKED the count to one and two against Wathen who then ripped a sharp single to Ralph Garr in left as Otis headed for the plate. Whether Garr could have nailed Otis at home became a moot point when Garr bobbled the ball, the winning run coming home unchallenged.

The young lefthander opened the game by giving up a triple to George Brett, then retired the next 11 straight before Cowens blooper one into left field.

THE BALL DROPPED between a seemingly complacent Garr and shortstop Tim Nordbrook, who had the ball blown away from him and towards Garr. The error was charged to Nordbrook, who has committed five errors in the club's last three games. Mayberry followed with a single that gave Kansas City a 1-0 lead.

The Sox tied it in the sixth on Jorge Orta's RBI double that scored Garr all the way from first but then went on to load the bases without scoring another run.

A double by Cowens and single by Joe Zdeb made it 2-1 in the seventh, but Oscar Gamble led off the Sox ninth with his 20th home run of the year to tie it at 2-2.

KRAVEC, WHO TOOK the loss and is 7-3, faced the minimum in five of the eight innings he worked, walking only two and striking out five. But Pattin, now 4-2, was equally impressive, facing the minimum in six of the nine frames he worked, walking two and scattering six hits. The Royals got only four hits off Kravec.

The Sox have now lost six of their last seven since winning an extra-inning thriller against the Royals in the first game of Comiskey Park doubleheader eight days ago. They open a four-game homestand against Seattle and Cleveland tonight.

Lions win, 4-3 in 16th inning

Rico Heredia's two-out double down the right-field line in the bottom of the 16th inning gave the Logan Square Lions a thrilling 4-3 victory over arch-rival Arlington Heights Post 208 in the Cook County American Legion Baseball Tournament at Recreation Park in Arlington Heights Sunday. The victory qualified Logan Square to meet Oak Lawn late Sunday night.

Jim Eaton's rightfield single started the winning Logan Square rally. Mike Ledna then sacrificed him to second base. After Jim Passolt grounded out to Arlington's third pitcher of the day, Dennis Drolet, Heredia hit the first pitch for his game-winning hit, scoring Eaton.

The game, a 4½ hour marathon, started two hours late, because the umpires had to come from Wilmette where they officiated the Oak Lawn-Wilmette contest won by Oak Lawn, 6-2.

Early scoring by both teams created the mistaken impression that the contest might become a slugfest. Except for Logan Square's winning rally, all scoring stopped after the top of the fifth when the Lions tied the score at 3-3.

Arlington, the defending 1976 American Legion national runnerup, jumped on the scoreboard first. In the first inning, Mike Jennings singled, Frank DeSimone sacrificed him to second and Mike Mayerek delivered a fun-scoring single.

Arlington Heights increased their lead to 3-0 in the second. A bases loaded walk to John Mertins produced the second run and Jennings' sacrifice fly created the third.

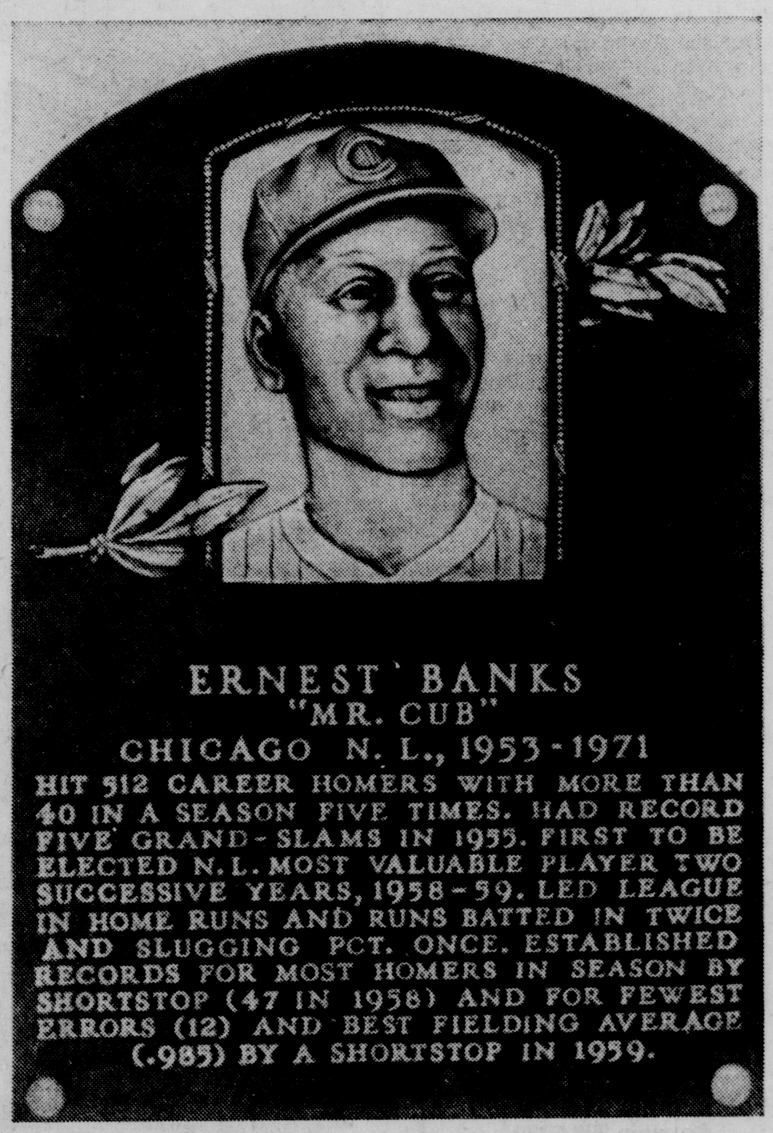
Logan Square fought back, however. The Lions tallied in the second when Tim Prokof's single drove in Mike Marshall.

Poor Arlington fielding then aided Logan Square's second and third runs each.

In the fourth inning, Marshall tripled to rightfield and scored when Arlington second baseman Jennings bobbled Dave Martin's ground ball. The error was Arlington's first of five this day.

Logan Square's tying run in the fifth inning resulted from an Arlington mental, rather than physical error. With two outs and men on first and third, Arlington first baseman Doug Harth fielded Heredia's ground ball. Harth, who could have either thrown home or fired to Jennings covering first, could not make up his mind and just held the ball while Mike Ledna scored from third base.

Arlington now plays Wilmette tomorrow night at Recreation Park. Gametime has not been determined.



Hall of Fame doors open to Banks, Lopez

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — Though it may be blasphemy, it seems only fair to point out that even Hall of Famers have sometimes failed in the pinch.

Even Ernie Banks. (Blasphemy of blasphemies!)

But Banks welcomes the suggestion.

"I've had a lot of bad days," said Mr. Cub. "Bad days tend to get you awfully discouraged. When you strike out with the bases loaded in the last half of the ninth, you really feel down.

"BUT THE PEOPLE at Wrigley Field never allow you to stay down too long," said the eternally smiling Banks. "Cub fans look at the players not only by the way you perform on the field, but they also take an interest in your personal life. They know you are a human being.

"Our fans here are fantastic — they are loyal," Banks added. "Do you know what loyalty is? Do you know what that means to a ballplayer?"

Byline report

Art Mugalian

"When you start to get down on yourself, a fan will say 'stay with them, hang in there, we'll get 'em tomorrow. That's loyalty."

Banks will enter the Hall of Fame today, along with five others including former White Sox manager Al Lopez, in ceremonies here. Banks' baseball credentials are formidable: 512 home runs, 1636 RBIs, 1305 runs scored.

Even more impressive was his total of 19 years with one ball club, 19 years of total dedication to a team that only once made faint designs on first place. Banks

Soto stops Pirates

From Herald Wire Services

Steve Carlton drove in the tie-breaking run with a sacrifice fly Sunday and became the major league's first 16-game winner with a seven-hitter in Helping the Philadelphia Phillies complete a three-game sweep of the Los Angeles Dodgers with a 3-1 triumph.

Carlton, who struck out eight, added two hits to the attack as the Phillies knocked out loser Don Sutton, 10-6, to extend their winning streak to five. The game attracted 40,268 fans to establish a three-game club record of 138,313.

Los Angeles used a walk to Ron Cey, an infield grounder and Glenn Burke's single to take a 1-0 lead in the second, but Garry Maddox got the Phillies even when he lined his 10th home run of the season over the left field wall in the bottom of the inning.

NL baseball

ROOKIE MARIO SOTO hurled a seven-hit shutout and the Cincinnati Reds erupted for five unearned runs in the seventh inning to score a 6-0 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Soto and the Pirates' Jim Rooker were locked in a scoreless duel through the first 6½ innings before the Reds broke the game open with the aid of three costly Pittsburgh errors.

George Foster led off the Reds' seventh with a double and took third on a single by Johnny Bench. Dave Concepcion grounded to Rooker, who threw wildly into center field with Foster and Bench both scoring on the play and Concepcion going all the way to third. Dan Driessen forced Concepcion at the plate and then stole second. Cesar Geronimo walked and both runners advanced on a wild pitch by Rooker.

IN HOUSTON, Ken Reitz had four hits, including a two-run homer, and Ted Simmons also knocked in two runs to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to a 5-2 triumph over the Houston Astros.

Rookie John Urrea struck out four and allowed six hits in seven innings to gain his fourth victory in seven decisions. Reliever Birch Metzger earned his fifth save with two innings of relief.

Gary Alexander drove in four runs with a triple, double, bases-filled walk and a sacrifice fly to lead the San Francisco Giants to a 7-4 victory over the New York Mets. John Montefusco pitched 6 2/3 innings in the rain-interrupted game, winning his fifth game against nine losses and Gary Lavelle pitched hitless relief to earn his 15th save. Montefusco scattered six hits and the only earned run he allowed came on Len Randle's leadoff homer in the first inning.

Dick Ruthven tossed a five-hitter to earn his first victory since April 19 and Rod Gilbreath hit a two-run homer to lead the Atlanta Braves to a 6-2 triumph over the Montreal Expos.

Ruthven, 4-8, had missed two months of the season after suffering a tendon injury in his foot in St. Louis on May 1. Ruthven walked four and struck out three but lost his shut out bid in the seventh inning when Jose Morales hit his first homer of the year.

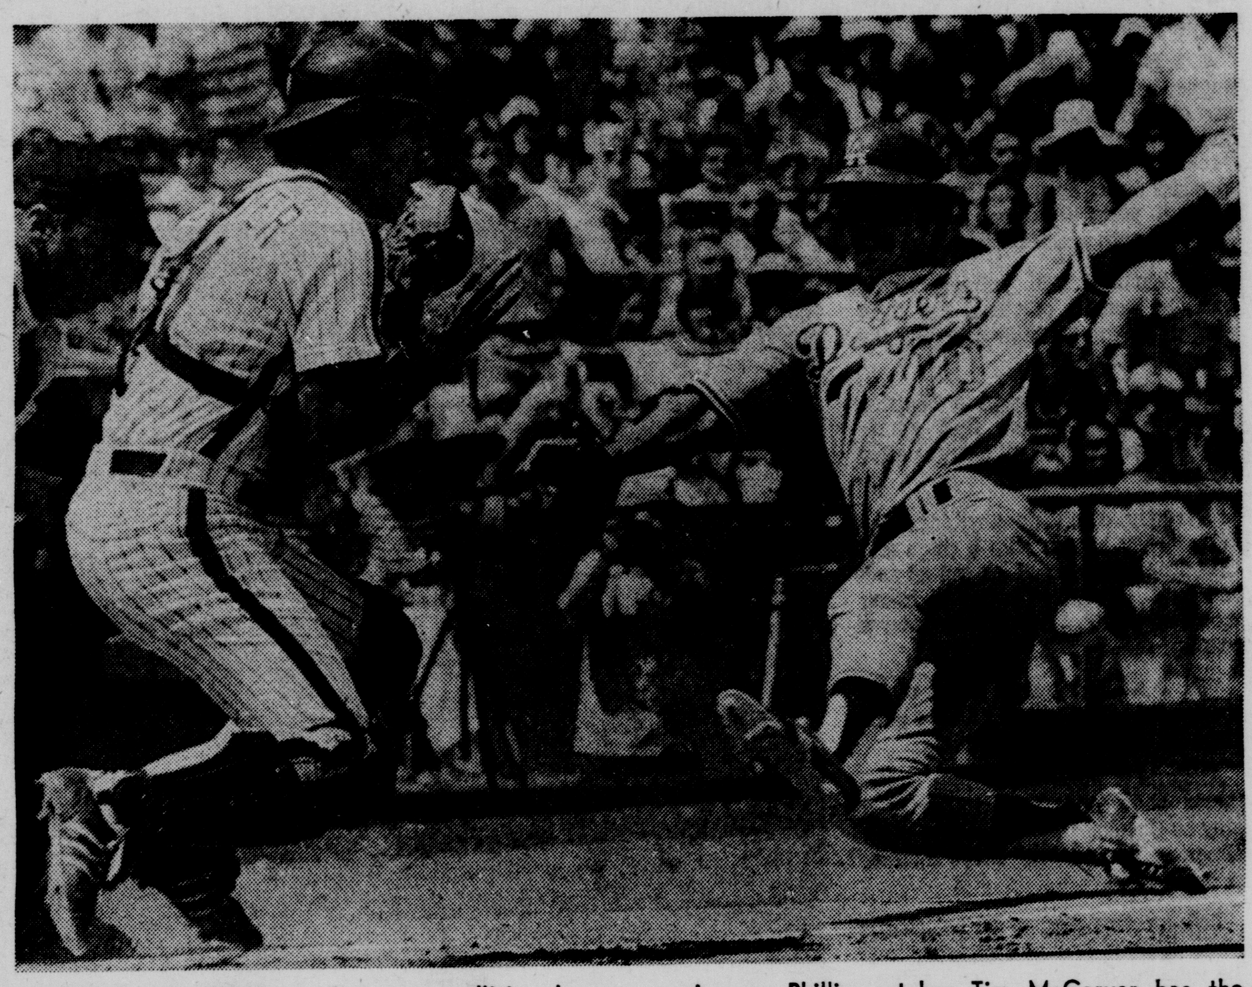
Woodfield splits in regionals

DETROIT — The Woodfield Babe Ruth Cubs are still alive in regional action here after splitting the first two games of the tournament. The Cubs were defeated in the opener, 2-1 by Michigan's state champion, but rebounded against Berkley, Michigan, 4-0 Sunday.

Woodfield, which captured the Illinois state title, will face the Ohio champ in further eliminations tonight at 8:30 p.m. A team must win five regional games to advance to the nationals.

In the opener, Michigan jumped on Woodfield starter Jay Saladino for a single, double and triple for all the runs it needed. Michigan hurler Bill Choks limited Woodfield to just two hits — by Bill Hajek and Pat Griffin — to notch the verdict.

Woodfield's bats came to life in the second game in support of hurler Pat Griffin. Dave Manning, Griffin and Hajek all singled for a pair of runs in the third inning while an error, singles by Tony Stompanato and Dave Grant and Cass Peterson's sacrifice fly produced another pair in the fifth.



MEETING AT HOME. A three-way collision looms at the plate as Dodger Ron Cey appears to have the ball in his hip pocket, but is still not assured of scoring as Phillie catcher Tim McCarver has the base well guarded. Cey did score, but the red hot Phillies triumphed, 3-1.

Minnesota, Texas register victories

From Herald Wire Services

Dave Goltz pitched a five-hitter for his 14th victory while Mike Cubbage stroked a two-run homer and drove in five runs Sunday to pace the Minnesota Twins to an 11-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Goltz, 14-6, struck out seven and hurled his seventh complete game in reaching a career one-season high for victories. His shutout was ruined in the eighth inning on a single by Fred Kendall and Duane Kuiper's run-producing double to left field.

Cubbage's homer, his sixth, came off Cleveland starter and loser Dennis Eckersley to give the Twins a 2-0 lead in the second inning. He added a bases-loaded double in the seventh to increase Minnesota's lead to 9-1.

Rod Carew extended his hitting streak to 10 games, collecting four hits, including three doubles, to boost his league-leading batting average to .387.

DOCK ELLIS survived a bases-loaded jam in the first inning and went on to pitch an eight-hitter in leading the Texas Rangers to a 4-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

The Tigers got their only run in the first inning on a triple by Tito Fuentes and an error by Mike Hargrove. Steve Kemp then singled and Jason Thompson walked to load the bases but Ellis got Ben Oglivie on a pop out and Milt May on a grounder to first.

Back-to-back doubles by Tom Grieve and Jim Sundberg, following an error by Fuentes on Bump Wills' grounder to second, got Texas two runs in the third. Texas scored twice in the eighth on run-scoring singles by Bert Campaneris and Willie Horton.

The victory raised Ellis' record to 6-9 but he is 4-3 since joining Texas on June 15.

AL baseball

BERNIE Carbo hit a ninth inning leadoff homer and Fred Lynn added a three-run insurance shot to give the Boston Red Sox their 10th straight victory, a 5-2 decision over the Oakland A's.

Rick Wise, 8-4, went 8 1/3 innings before Bill Campbell came on to register his 19th save for the Red Sox, who swept their entire nine-game west coast road trip and opened up a 3½-game lead over second place Baltimore in the American League West.

Paul Blair's two-run homer capped a six-run third inning that carried the New York Yankees to a 7-1 victory over the Seattle Mariners behind the six-hit pitching of Mike Torrez.

The Yankees, who lost the first two games of the series to the expansion Mariners, batted around in the third against John Montague and reliever Bill Laxton.

Willie Randolph started the uprising with a double and Roy White, Thurman Munson and Chris Chambliss hit successive singles for the first two runs. After a sacrifice bunt by Lou Piniella, Laxton relieved and gave up a sacrifice fly to Reggie Jackson and a two-run double to Craig Nettles before Blair homered.

BOBBY BONDS slugged a two-run homer, his fifth in as many games, and rookie Rance Milliniks had three singles and drove in two runs to spark the California Angels to a 6-3 triumph over the Baltimore Orioles.

Bonds' 26th homer following a single by Jerry Remy in the seventh came an inning after California had erased a 3-0 Baltimore lead with a four-run rally. Milliniks' third single drove in two runs to cap the sixth inning uprising after Don Baylor had singled home one run and Dave Chalk had doubled in another.

Consecutive doubles by Steve Brye, Jim Wohlford and Lenn Sakata snapped a 2-2 tie in the fifth inning and sent the Milwaukee Brewers to a 7-5 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays and a sweep of their doubleheader.

The Brewers won the opener 6-2 behind the six-hit pitching of Lary Sorensen and Bob McClure.

Survival of the Fittest

by DALE SINGER

When the light go out, or the oil runs dry, or the trucks stop rolling, or someone pushes the nuclear button, who will provide for and protect you and your family?

John Moore is a survival consultant. He sees society becoming too dependent on forces beyond its control and thinks it's time we learned to get along by ourselves.

New Yorkers caught without power were able to adapt to a short-term situation, but Moore, who also is chief investigator for the Jefferson County Missouri public defender's office, teaches how to survive a more prolonged disaster.

"The more technically advanced society becomes, the more vulnerable it becomes to a breakdown in the system," he said in an interview the day of New York's massive power failure.

"TO PUT OUT all the lights in New York 100 years ago, you would have had to steal all the kerosene in the entire city. Now all you have to do is throw a few switches."

Moore's plan for energy, food, nuclear or monetary crises is a simple one — find a strategic retreat, self-supporting and easily defensible, take your family and leave the outside world behind.

He spent two years before he found the right spot for himself, his wife and their 2-year-old daughter. It's 90 minutes from St. Louis, on high ground and at least a mile from the nearest highway.

When his permanent home is finished, complete with steel-reinforced concrete in the foundation and a steel door to the basement, Moore said, "I could live the rest of my life there without a doubt."

MOORE CHARGES a consulting fee ranging from $300 for three months of training and advice to $1,000 for year-long service. He contrasts this to a $200-an-hour fee charged by similar survival experts on the East and West coasts.

Many are eager, he said, to share the knowledge he gained in the armed forces and in five years of research into survival techniques. Some of his clients, he said, are public officials, all demand anonymity.

> "To put out all the lights in New York City 100 years ago, you would have had to steal all the kerosene in the entire city. Now all you have to do is throw a few switches."

Moore teaches them how to become self-sufficient, no longer relying on the government or other institutions.

"Virtually everything you use every day — water, heat, food — is provided by people you have absolutely no control over," he said.

TO DEVELOP their retreats, Moore's clients learn about firearms and self-defense, raising their own food using vacuum packed seeds that retain potency, and setting up a camp at the most useful site, not the prettiest.

His wife, a nurse, helps with the medical training, teaching how to stockpile drugs and receive proper inoculations. Moore also gives courses in communications, map-reading and radiation-monitoring.

The possibility of nuclear disaster, once so large in the public consciousness, has seemingly grown less, but actually is greater, Moore said.

"What I tell my clients is that the first small country with nuclear capability that is on the losing side of a brush war is going to use it. It's an inherent tendency in man — he doesn't like to lose a war."

PERSONS ANSWERING Moore's classified newspaper ad don't need much convincing that his training is needed once they hear his scenario of what can happen, he said.

"I think last winter is a good example of what dependence on a central supply source can do, in Ohio, for example," he said.

All of this may sound like a return to pioneer days, but Moore insists that life at your own family retreat can have a measure of comfort, if it is well planned. That's where his training courses and consultation come in.

How many people think their house is going to burn down?" he said. "But they still have fire insurance.

"I just ask people to look at the likelihood of a nationwide truck strike or another severe winter or another Middle East war escalating into a nuclear confrontation. Then I ask them to draw their own conclusions."

Bears' loss raises even more questions

by BOB GALLAS

The quarterback derby is more undecided than ever, three cornerbacks are not injured and to top it all off, the Bears lost their preseason home opener to the New Orleans Saints, but still managed to find some good in the whole mess.

Disgusted as they were with dropping a 20-14 decision Saturday to a team that posted only a 4-10 record last season, a beating may have been just what the doctor ordered for a team that may have been reading too many of its own press releases.

"I hate to lose but everybody's been talking about how great we are," observed middlelinebacker Don Rives. "Maybe we just needed someone to knock us off our pedestal."

"WE ALL HAD the attitude we could beat anybody," Rives continued. "But when you know you're good, you have to play that way."

For the second week in a row, the Bears fell victim to a poor start, then came roaring back in the second half, But this week, it just wasn't enough.

Down 20-14, the Bears were on the march in the closing minute before a Bob Avellini pass intended for James Scott was intercepted at the Saints' goal line, sending the fans scurrying for home.

"The Saints played exactly the way I want us to play," said Pardee. "Their line comes off the ball both ways and their backs head up the middle."

PARDEE SAID he was disappointed in his team's performance, but offered no excuses. "We have a long way to go. We've put in a lot of plays. But we're not playing physical, aggressive football."

Saturday's affair did nothing to resolve the battle for quarterback as Avellini and Mike Phipps again split duties, with Phipps opening the first half and Avellini coming in to mop up in the second half.

In the opener against the Jets, Avellini was shut out while the Bears put up 20 points during Phipps' tenure. Saturday, the tale was the same but the cast members were switched. Phipps was blanked in the first half and Avellini was the recipient of 14 points. Neither, however, looked impressive.

Phipps completed four of 11 aerials for 50 yards and was intercepted once. Avellini's performance was somewhat better, nine-for-21 for 93 yards and a touchdown, a 13-yard toss to Steve Schubert in the third quarter.

"I PREFER playing the second half," said Avellini, who prefaced his remarks by saying he'd rather play the whole game. "You can see what's going on out there in the first half and get the jitters out. Avellini, however, is the schuduled starter in Pardee's rotation as the Bears travel to Oakland to meet the Raiders Saturday.

Pardee saw no change in the neck and neck battle for the signalcaller's berth.

"You can't really evaluate things yet," offered Pardee. "Mike (Phipps) was under a lot of duress the first half and had three dropped balls."

There were a few Bears' bright spots Saturday, such as Tommy Reamon's 92-yard runback of a kickoff in the fourth quarter. Reamon showed some of the speed he's noted for on the run, but said it's too early to tell how well he's progressed after off-season knee surgery.

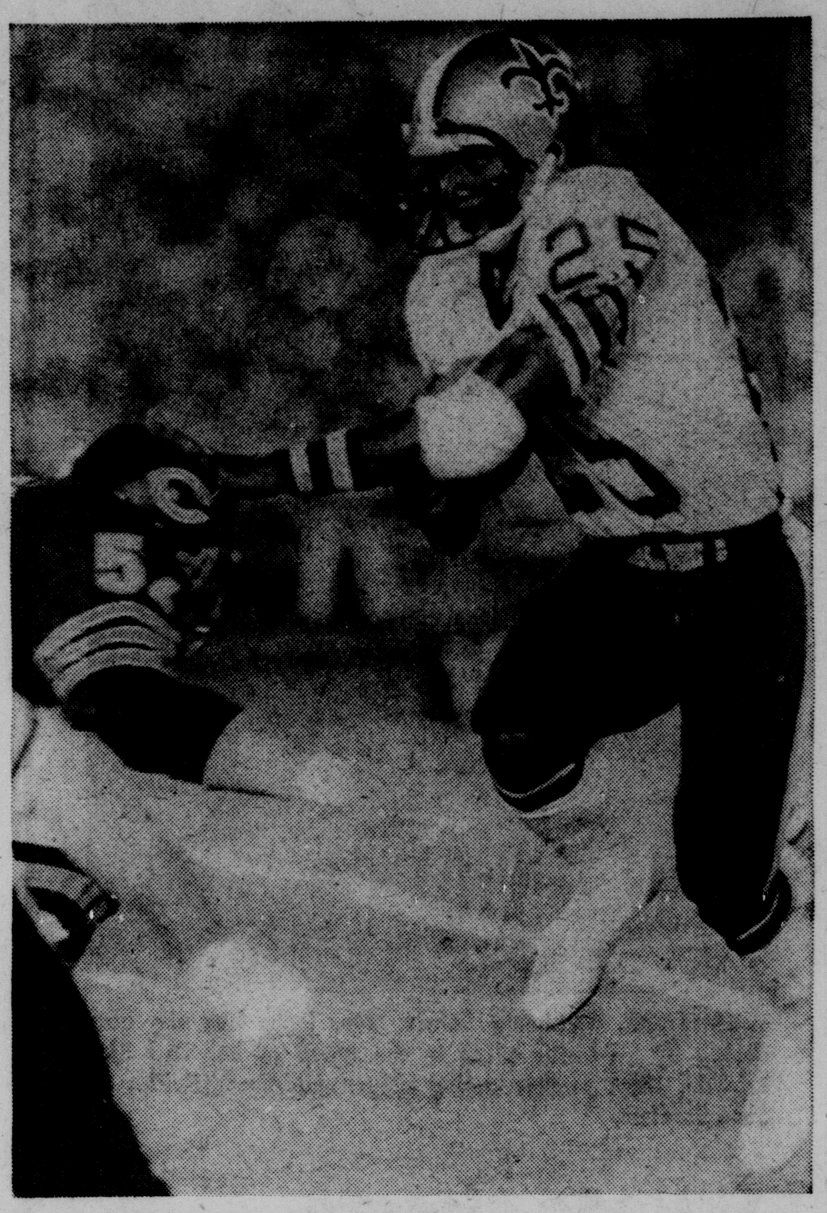
"I ONLY CARRIED the ball three times," Reamon said. "Who can say what kind of a ballplayer I am until I carry the ball more."

Walter Payton saw more action than many expected, carrying 12 times for 45 yards.

But the biggest bright spot, as far as the revitalized Saints of coach Hank Stram are concerned, was the return of quarterback Archie Manning, felled by an arm and shoulder injury late in the 1975 season.

Manning riddled the Bears' secondary, completing nine of 14 attempts during his first half workout for 170 yards, including a 54-yard bomb to Larry Burton.

The Bears suffered some minor injuries in the contest. Cornerbacks Mike Spivey and Terry Irvin came up with minor leg injuries and join Virgil Livers on the injured cornerback squad. Running back Larry Schreiber suffered a pulled hamstring.



SAINT SHUFFLE. New Orleans' Leon McQuay jitterbugs around Bear linebacker Tom Hicks during end-around surprise that caught the Bears napping for a long gain. The Saints defeated the Bears, 20-14 in Soldier Field Saturday night.

Hall of Fame doors to open

LOYALTY IS A two-way street as far as Mr. Cub is concerned.

Banks joined the Cubs as a scared, 22-year-old rookie shortstop in 1953, his contract having been purchased from the Kansas City Monarchs, the famous Monarchs of the dying Negro leagues.

In 1971, his knees painfully arthritic and his batting eye all but gone, Banks retired to the ranks of first base coach, hitting instructor and finally, manager of groups sales.

His position in group sales allows him to be at Wrigley Field every day, to be with the fans who revere him. He, in turn, draws a sense of joy from them.

For 19 years, Ernie gave the Cubs and their persistent fans the very best of himself. Still, he must have fueled their disappointment more often than anyone would care to remember. He must have struck out with the bases loaded dozens of times, but the fans never booed and Banks never showed a dark side either.

"IF REPORTERS EVER wrote anything bad about me, I didn't say anything," Banks noted. "I figure that if I made a mistake, they were simply pointing it out. They have a right. The way I look at it, everybody has a job to do."

Banks' job has never seemed like a job to him, though.

"Isn't this a great life?" he asked, not expecting more than one possible answer. "Life is beautiful at Wrigley Field. Oh, how I wish I could still play. I really miss it."

Still lean and sinewy, Banks looks like he could put on the uniform and play two today. But at 46, he has no illusions.

"You know you can't play anymore," he lamented. "But you still have that good, youthful feeling that you can. . . . "

BANKS REMEMBERS when his appreciable talents began to fade. "My legs went first," he said. "Then I found that I couldn't concentrate for long periods at a time.

"But, you know, I never thought about making it to the Hall of Fame," he continued. "Now that I'm going in, it's great, really thrilling. I'm excited about it, I really am. And I'm thankful to all the people who helped me get there.

"But all along I kept thinking that I hadn't done enough."

Ernie, you did plenty.

Kratzert withstands charge for golf win

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. — Billy Kratzert, who once quit golf in disgust, overcame a strong challenge from rookie playing partner Curtis Strange Sunday to finish with a final round 3-under-par 69 and a 19-under total 265 to win the Greater Hartford Open by three strokes.

Kratzert earned the $42,000 top prize after a hard fight over the par-71 Wethersfield Country Club course that saw him tied with Strange at 16-under at the turn. Kratzert, the third-round leader, was behind one sroke when he scored a birdie on the par-five 14th hole to tie him with Strange at 18-under.

Strange, a 22-year-old Virginian who has been on the tour only six weeks, missed a shot that cost him $15,000 and sole possession of second place when he double bogied the final hole to put him 15-under. He finished third. Grier Jones and Larry Nelson, who were already in the clubhouse after each had scored 65 to give them 16-under 268 totals, wound up in second place.

Hydroplane driver killed during race

SEATTLE—Unlimited hydroplane driver Jerry Bangs was killed Sunday when he was tossed from his speeding boat during the first heat of the $30,000 Seafair Trophy Race.

Race officials said it was not clear whether Bang's boat, The Squire, flipped over completely and landed upright or whether it went through a flat ground roll.

Bangs was rushed by helicopter to Harborview Medical Center but a nurse at the hospital said he never made it to the emergency room.

The accident happened shortly after the third lap of the race with The Squire running in third place. After the mishap, the boat continued to run in slow circles on the course until someone was able to get on board and turn off the engine.

Alexander serves aces for victory

NORTH CONWAY, N.H.—Australian John Alexander won his first tournament in more than two years Sunday with a 2-6, 6-4, 6-4, victory over Manuel Orantes of Spain in the finals of the $125,000 Volvo International tennis tournament.

The 12th-seeded Alexander, whose last win was in Tucson, Ariz., in 1975, earned the victory on the basis of his rocket serve — six aces — which became stronger as the two-hour match wore on.

Alexander earned $20,000, a new car and a moped for is win. Orantes, still seeking his first 1977 tournament win, earned $10,000.

Waltrip drives to win at Talledega

TALLADEGA, Ala. — Darrell Waltrip, driving relief for an exhausted Donnie Allison, cruised to an easy victory Sunday in the $205,000 Talladega 500 stock car race at Alabama International Motor Speedway.

Waltrip crossed the finish line in a Chevrolet under a caution flag after challenger Skip Nanning, last year's rookie of the year, blew an engine in his Chevrolet with six laps to go after a head-to-head duel.

Cale Yarborough finished second in a Chevy that was plagued by gear problems and Manning was third. Ricky Rudd drove his Chevrolet to a fourth place finish, followed by Chevy driver Lennie Pond.

'The Kallikaks' is downhome garbage

Television is sinking to new lows.

NBC has decided to take an Appalachian family and turn their poverty and cultural deprivation into stupidity and digust, all for a few laughs.

I, for one, was not laughing at "The Kallikaks" Wednesday when it premiered as a limited, five-week half-hour series.

The show is visually and verbally a piece of garbage.

I AM AWARE the same thing was said about Norman Lear's "All in the Family" when it first premiered. Both shows certainly go against television's normal theory that viewers would prefer to see the glamor and intrigue of a fantasy world rather than settle for the hard facts of reality.

Jasper T. Kallikak, head of the church mouse-poor household, is a retired Appalachian coal miner. He has moved his family to Nowhere, Calif., and pumps no-name gasoline from two dirty, old pumps.

His wife, Venus, is an overweight woman who has an uncrontrollable appetite for vulgarity.

Their teen-age daughter, Bobbi Lou, is a blonde, empty-headed social climber. And son Junior is a child genius who bounces big words off the rest of the family and outsmarts them at every turn.

THE MOST distressing thing about this new television pilot is that David Huddleston, the talented and well-known character actor, plays a major part in it. He portrays Jasper and enjoys an influence on the writing anl acting that went into the show — a special feature of his contract, he said.

Huddleston, who has earned a place in the business by mastering the role of a Southern, red-neck sheriff, says the distasteful, unappealing reality of the program is all part of the "innovation" involved.

"This show is as different to television now as 'All in the Family' was when it first came on the air. Look, 90 per cent of America is exactly the way we are in this show. If you can let them look at something in life they are already familiar with in a comedic way, they may take to it," Huddleston said Friday during a stop-over in Chicago, barely recognizeable after losing 65 pounds in the past 72 days.

"I know we're going to be compared with 'Green Acres' and 'The Beverly Hillbillies,' but we're different because we are dealing in each episode with specific topics like big government and unscrupulous religionists. They are institutions and problems that the average person faces and, many times, in the same way the characters on this show do," said the 46-year-old Huddleston.

HE MAY BE right about the show. The overnight ratings in the top markets of the country showed "The Kallikaks" doing better than anticipated, especially in the Chicago area.

There's an importance to this sad series for Huddleston because it is his first starring role in a television show. He is a veteran actor who has made a very lucrative career playing unforgettable secondary roles and the tough guy in more than 250 television commercials. He got his start on the stage in such musical comedies as "Mame," "The Music Man" and "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum". All made successful runs through Chicago in the '60s.

"The Kallikaks" offers Huddleston a chance he's been waiting for a long time, although he says he has never felt badly about making a living in secondary roles. The stereotyping of a character, in Huddleston's case, has worked to his advantage.

"I love the character (Jasper Kallikak)", he said. "I think he's a rascal and a conman with many sides and many shades that will allow me to experiment. I took the part for that reason and because it's another plateau in my career."

IT WOULD SEEM Huddleston reached several more impressive plateaus in westerns like "Rio Lobo" and "Blazing Saddles" and in television series like "Petrocelli" and "The Waltons."

His future roles in films such as Gene Wilder's "The World's Greatest Lover" and the contemporary science flick "Capricorn One", with Elliot Gould and Karen Black, certainly hold more promise than his lead in "The Kallikaks."

It is not Huddleston's talent as an actor that I question but, rather, the values and conscience of the show. The network contends "The Kallikaks" offers a forum for people between the Alleghenies and the Rockies, but the program does nothing but disgrace those people and insult the rest.

TV NOTES:

- WMAQ station manager Lee Hanna and news director Sheldon Hoffman will be deciding within the week whether to pair weekend news anchor Don Craig with Ron Hunter on the 10 p.m. weekday newscast. Chances are they will. Craig is one of the most able and well-liked on-camera personalities the station has. It would be a mistake not to utilize him to the fullest. Meanwhile, Maury Povich is continuing his anchor duties on the daily 4:30 p.m. newscast without a formal contract. He hopes to be released in order to take an anchoring job on the West Coast. That isn't bound to happen, however, until the station has landed a suitable replacement. As management there always says, they're just looking . . .
- Mort Crim today begins co-anchoring the 6 p.m. newscast with Bill Kurtis on WBBM-TV, Channel 2. Walter Jacobson will continue his "Perspectives" and solo anchoring of the 5 p.m. news show, while co-anchoring the 10 p.m. newscast with Kurtis.

TV HIGHLIGHTS:

- Haley Mills and Hywel Bennett star as newlyweds whose marriage problems begin on their wedding night in the entertaining English film, "The Family Way," at 8 p.m. on Channel 5.
- Get ready for a third straight week of network baseball featuring a Chicago team! The Cubs face the Pirates at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 7.
- That all-American hero, Flash Gordon, challenges Ming the Merciless in "Deadly Ray from Mars," a fun thriller at 8 p.m. on Channel 9.

Cheryl says 'halo Angels' and wants Farrah chance

by VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "I wouldn't give that spot to a leopard" is a show biz saw coined in vaudeville for an act following the bell-ringing, show-stopping hit on the bill.

No matter how good the act, it can't follow a show-stopper, according to lore.

That is precisely the spot in which a beautiful young blonde will find herself this September when she replaces Farrah Fawcett-Majors in "Charlie's Angels."

FARRAH IS A fable in her time. She has adorned scores of magazine covers and sold $6 million worth of posters. She is unanimously conceded to be the All-American dream girl. And, in fact, she is a delightful and beautiful young woman.

She opted out of "Charlie's Angels," at the completion of the series' first year to seek her fortune in the more remunerative and prestigious world of movies.

The young blonde following this show-stopper is Cheryl Ladd.

Cheryl and Farrah share some things in common. They are about the same age and are endowed with tawny blonde beauty, blue-green eyes, willowly figures and both are married to actors.

FARRAH IS THE wife of Lee (Six Million Dollar Man) Majors. Cheryl's husband is David Ladd, son of the late Alan Ladd.

Both appeared in small roles in episodic television. Both made a good living making television commercials.

Farrah is from Corpus Christi, Tex. Cheryl is a native of Huron, S.D. But the big difference between them is that Farrah is a star, an international sex symbol, while Cheryl is virtually unknown.

But Cheryl is no sacrificial lamb. And she just may upset the hoary malediction about following tough spots.

Unquestionably, the heat is on Cheryl. Will she measure up to Farrah? Will the show's top ratings decline without Farrah? Will Kate Jackson and Jaclyn Smith, Charlie's other angels, accept her as an equal?

SHE PAUSED during a day off recently to say that costars Jackson and Smith had accepted her into their tight little sorority without rancor.

"It was a little rough the first week while we were testing each other out," Cheryl said. "But I make friends easily and I didn't want to feel like an interloper.

"I'm the friendly type who goes up to people and says, 'Hi!,' Unless you initiate friendships you can't expect them to come to you. If I hadn't been that way maybe it could have been a long year for me.

"When we went to Hawaii to do the two-hour show which opens the season all three of us shared the same dressing room. You get to be pretty close to one another under those conditions when you're working 14 hours a day."

CHERYL LADD, Farrah Fawcett-Majors' replacement on the ABC series "Charlie's Angels" has begun filming episodes of the show with Kate Jackson and Jaclyn Smith. Ms. Ladd will portray Kris Munroe, the younger sister of Jill Munroe that was played by Farrah.

Cheryl says she doesn't feel pressured. She knows comparisons to Farrah will be made and she has adjusted to that inevitability.

"I FELT THE pressure before I accepted the role," she explained. "For three weeks I thought about whether to take the part. I had two other offers.

"But this is the part of the year. It's a hit series. The attention given me just for accepting the role was tremendous. I'm already getting fan mail, and even flowers, from all over the country.

"Obviously, this was the right thing to do. But I was concerned about rejection from viewers in their disappointment over Farrah not returning.

"That bothered me until we got to Hawaii where literally thousands of people stood around watching us shoot scenes. They wanted my autograph and called me by name."

THERE SEEMS TO be no artifice about Cheryl except for the obvious change in her professional name. Her maiden name is Cheryl Stoppelmoor which, while catchy, doesn't exactly exude glamor.

Cheryl is an admirer of Farrah although the two beauties have never met.

At dinner the other night one of Farrah's friends approached Cheryl to say that Farrah wished her good luck and a successful run in "Charlie's Angels."

"He said that Farrah wanted to tell me not to let all the baloney and publicity bother me," Cheryl said. "And I appreciate that.

"But I'm indebted to Farrah for something else, and so should all the other actresses in Hollywood. Farrah made a place for pretty girls in television and movies.

"Before she came along a lot of casting directors and producers told me I was too pretty for certain roles. Well Farrah opened a lot of doors.

"I don't expect to compete with Farrah. America fell in love with her and who can describe what it is except magic?"

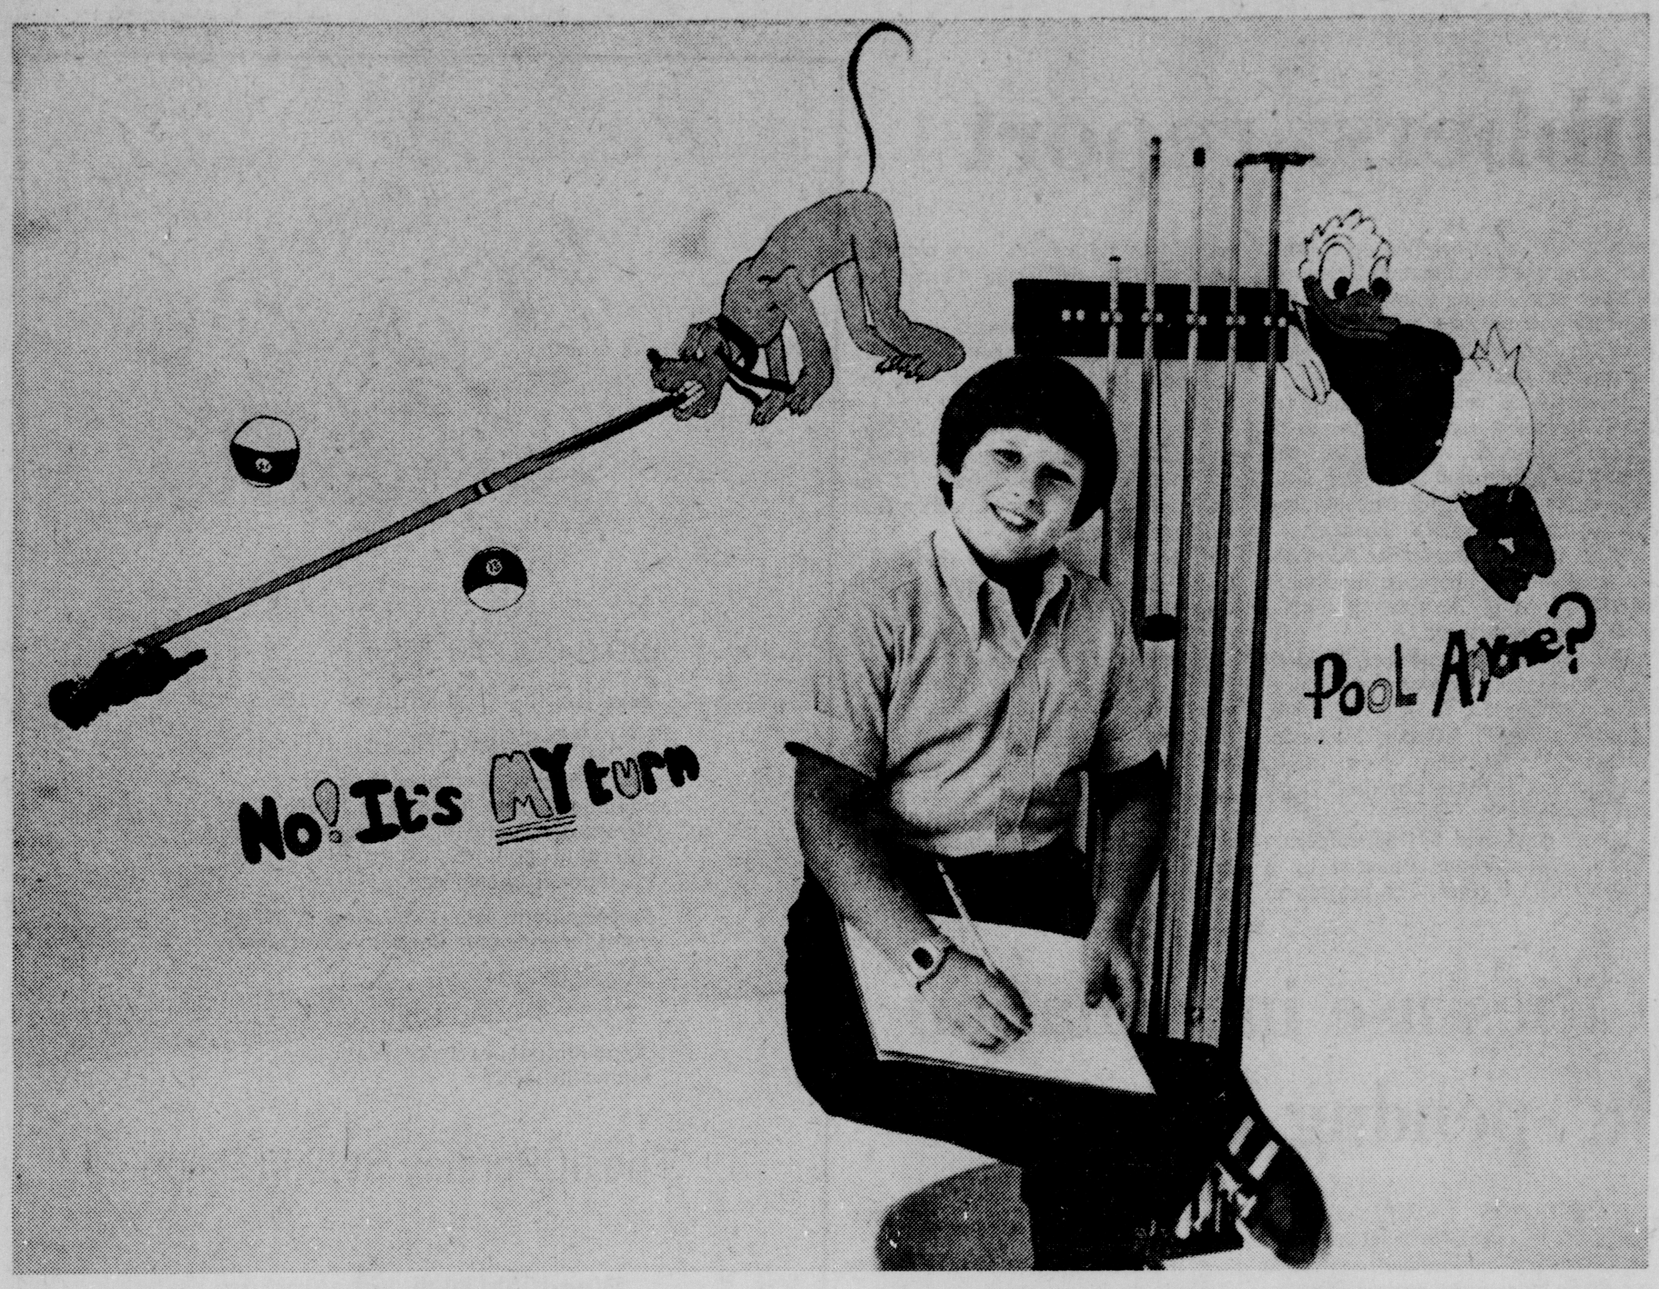
Every day is Ladies Day in the HERALD. Keep up with society and club doings in "Suburban Living", daily woman's coverage especially designed for the family.



NO, HE'S NOT sitting in front of a move screen showing a Walt Disney cartoon. Jeff Troutman, Rolling Meadows, drew Donald Duck and Pluto himself. The 11-year-old artist has never had an art lesson, but he's been decorating his parents' family room this summer.

Budding artist paints family's walls

Most parents probably would scream if their 11-year-old son picked up a pencil and a bucket of paint and took out his artistic urges on the family room walls.

But Jeff Troutman of Rolling Meadows has been working on his family's recreation room walls for about a month now and his parents are delighted. He's solved their interior decorating problem.

"We wanted to do something wild with this room," Judy Troutman said. "So we let him try it."

THE TROUTMANS aren't as brave as they may sound. They knew they weren't going to end up with a finger-painted mess of colors or walls covered with stick figures.

What they did end up with is a room full of characters that look like Walt Disney drew and painted them himself.

Though Jeff has never had an art lesson and knows nothing about interior decorating, his pictures are perfect and they fit in cleverly with the theme of the room.

Above the family piano, a smiling Minnie Mouse plays the violin. A lazy Donald Duck leans up against the pool cue rack. And a vicious-looking Pluto shows his teeth as he fights for a cue stick.

JEFF HAS BEEN drawing since he was a young child and he does it as an important and routine part of his day.

"Even if he's out playing all day, he has to draw before he goes to bed," Mrs. Troutman said.

But he's never undertaken such a big project before with such success.

"He's done lots of things, but most of them have been on paper sacks or cardboard boxes," Mrs. Troutman said.

HIS FATHER suggested he take a crack at the walls. After all, he draws in pencil and his mistakes could be washed off.

"I just tried one and then another and another and it turned out fantastic," Jeff said.

Jeff generally is not so boastful about his talent. He answers most questions about it shyly, with a nod of the head or a shrug of the shoulders.

But he's proud of his walls, and he knows he's good enough to be a professional artist when he grows up.

HE'S BEEN TO the Art Institute in Chicago, but he knows little about different styles or artists. He has no particular favorites.

"I like all kinds of art," he said, "Except modern junk that doesn't look like anything."

Right now he's in the middle of painting Minnie, and he's a little discouraged about how she's working out.

"I'm never happy with them until they're finished," he said.

FEA honors Hersey for energy-saving effort

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI

Despite one of the coldest winters in Chicago's history, Hersey High School in Arlington Heights reduced its total energy consumption by 21.3 per cent and is being recognized for its achievement by the Federal Energy Administration.

The school's reduced usage of fossil fuel and electrical energy lowered its energy costs by 7 per cent and saved High School Dist. 214 $12,552 from May 1976 to April 1977, compared to the same period the year before said Tom Cosgrove, director of the physical plant.

Hersey students didn't have to resort to walking around in jackets and mittens to achieve the savings, but instead relied on Dist. 214's computerized energy conservation system.

OTHER NORTHWEST suburban school districts that do not have such a system reported increases of between 10 and 20 per cent in fuel and electric bills because of the severe winter and the skyrocketing cost of energy.

Housed in the district's central maintenance building, the IBM Systems 7 computer keeps energy consumption and costs down by turning ventilation fans on and off as necessary at Hersey, Rolling Meadows and Buffalo Grove high schools.

The fans are routinely shut down by the computer for 10 to 15 minutes per hour without anyone feeling any discomfort, Cosgrove said.

The computer also is programmed to remember which areas of each school are in use during what hours and to turn ventilation fans off completely when they are not needed. When fans are off for a prolonged period, the computer remembers to allow sufficient warmup time before the fans are needed again.

"PEOPLE TEND TO forget to conserve energy because it's easier not to," Cosgrove said. "What we're doing is offering a mechanical memory."

Dist. 214 first tried to rely on the human memory to conserve energy but found it did not work over the long haul, he said. While school personnel reduced energy consumption during the Arab oil embargo in early 1974, "the retaining of conservatory habits became just too heavy a burden to bear" after the first enthusiastic effort, he said.

With the energy cost forecast for the district's eight schools approaching $1 million, Dist. 214 officials two years ago agreed that something more than manual control of the schools' heating and ventilating equipment was needed, Cosgrove said.

In March 1976, IBM's computerized energy conservation system was hooked up to the district's three centrally air-conditioned schools. The move has already saved the district $126,284, about $29,000 more than the district paid for the system, Cosgrove said. Allowing for increased energy costs, but not for increased fuel consumption necessitated by the severe winter, the estimate is a conservative one, he said.

"PREVIOUSLY, WE could've operated at peak level for 60 days before anyone knew it because it didn't show up until we were billed," Cosgrove said. "Now we know hour by hour and day by day how we're doing on energy usage and where improvements can be made."

While energy consumption at Rolling Meadows and Buffalo Grove high schools dropped by about 14 per cent during the computerized system's first year of operation, the savings at Hersey was much greater. Cosgrove said this is because the school is beter insulated, has less window space and has a heating system which is more conducive to conservation.

In recognition of its leadership in implementing and promoting energy conservation measures, Hersey will receive a plaque from the Federal Energy Administration at Monday night's board of education meeting.

Cosgrove is confident that energy consumption at Rolling Meadows, Buffalo Grove and Hersey high schools can be reduced by another 10 per cent as the district becomes more proficient with the computer system. He is looking toward similar savings at the district's other five schools as they are added to the system in coming years.

VOLVO '73,

Cubs kong Kingman in split

by JEFF NORDLUND

As far as the Cubs were concerned, San Diego's Dave Kingman was crusin' for a bruisin by the time the second game of Sunday's doubleheader split at Wrigley Field rolled around.

After all, the way he was manhandling the Cubs pitching with three home runs and 11 rbi's in the first three games of the series, something had to give.

And it did.

Kingman was hit by a pitch in the second inning of the nightcap and moments later his body-roll into second baseman Mike Kelleher while breaking up a doubleplay ignited a benches-empying brawl.

BUT EVEN THIS time the moody slugger had the upperhand. Though he was ejected unhurt, three Cubs eventually left the game because of the fracas; Kelleher with sore ribs and a sprained neck; Jose Cardenal with a sprained right shoulder; and Steve Ontiveros with a stiff back.

The rhubarb had nothing to do with the game's outcome, the Cubs went on to win 9-4 after dropping the day's first game 8-6.

Kingman, who clubbed a decisive two-run homer in the first game, pleaded innocence on all charges after the game.

"I really didn't do anything," he said. "They hit me with a pitch and then Kelleher jumped on me at second base. I was just trying to break up a doubleplay. I didn't even throw a punch.

"IF I KNEW I was going to be thrown out of the game, I'd have gone right out after Renko," he said.

Kingman's hard, belt-high body-tackle of Kelleher was similar to a play on Opening Day this season when Kingman bowled over Steve Swisher at home plate.

Swisher happened to be behind the plate again in Sunday's nightcap, and he was one of the first Cubs' to give the undersized Kelleher a hand with Kingman.

"The big SOB went in to kill Kelleher," Cub manager Herman Franks said of the incident. "I don't mind a guy going in hard to break up a doubleplay, but that was something else.

"THE LITTLE GUY (Kelleher) did the right thing. Heck, they throw at us all series and we don't do anything. We hit them, and we get an automatic fine. That rule is bull."

The extent of the injuries to Kelleher, Cardenal and Ontiveros were not known immediately after the game, although they were sent for X-rays.

Luckily for the Cubs, Renko steered clear of the ruckus. He went on to post the nearest thing to a strong performance by a Cub pitcher in the series.

Now 2-1, Renko threw seven-strong innings before yielding a pair of homers in the eighth, as the score tightened to 8-4. Dave Guisti, in a Cub uniform for the first time since being purchased from the Oakland A's, came in to put the Padres down in the last two innings.

HOME RUNS by Cardenal and Swisher helped the Cubs to an early 5-0 lead after two innings in the nightcap, and a three-run seventh led by Jerry Morales' triple, Gene Clines' single and Ontiveros' double iced it.

In the first game, the Padres' spotted the Cubs a first-inning, three-run lead on Bobby Murcer's homer before coming back to win its Cubs' starter Mike Krukow, 7-9, was shelled for five runs in his five innings.

Padres' starter Bob Owchinko, 5-7, went seven innings, for the victory. Dan Spillner picked up a save for San Diego by throwing the last three innings and yielding only a ninth inning homer to Bill Buckner.

It was Kingman's two-run homer, his 18th, in the fifth inning which put the Padres ahead for good at 5-4. It also marked the end of Krukow's stint on the mound.

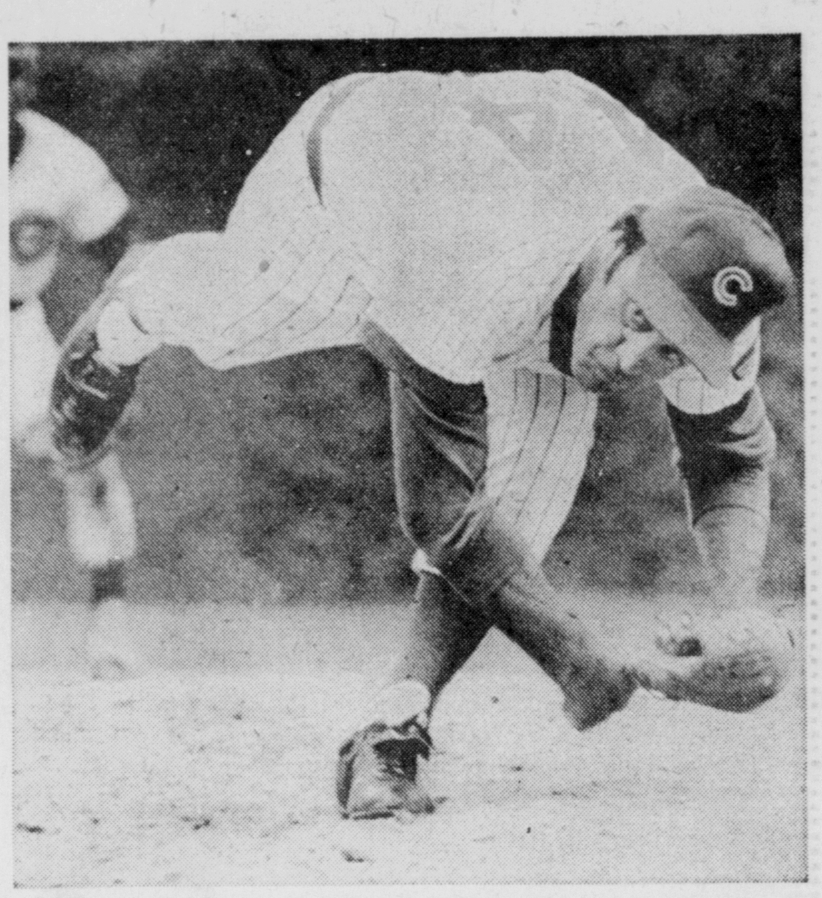
"KINGMAN HAS HIT three homers off me this season," Krukow said afterwards. "Even though the wind was blowing out today that one would have been gone anyway.

"I only made two mistakes out there. I threw a high fastball to Kingman and a hanging curve ball to (Gene) Tenance, and they hit them out of the park.

"I guess I haven't found a way to throw to Kingman yet," Krukow said.

The fight in the second game was not what the Cubs needed since it only added to their growing list of walking wounded. In addition to Kelleher, Cardenal and Ontiveros hurting, the Cubs placed outfielder Joe Wallis on the 15-day disabled list after he broke his finger in a motorcycle accident Saturday.

The concluded series was a disappointment to the Cubs, hoping to gain some ground on the Phillies, who played Los Angeles over the weekend. Instead, Philadelphia swept the Dodgers to push Chicago one game behind and just two ahead of third place Pittsburgh.



WELCOME TO WRIGLEY FIELD. Dave Guisti, acquired Friday by the Cubs, was pressed into action in both games of Sunday's doubleheader against San Diego. The Cubs split with the Padres, dropping the opener, 8-6, but rebounding for a 9-4 triumph in the nightcap.

Percentages fail Sox; lead now ½

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—White Sox manager Bob Lemon opted to play the percentages, rather than go with experience, and ended up paying the price as the Sox lost 3-2 to the Royals here Sunday and saw their division-leading margin shrink to a mere one-half game.

The Royals scored a run in the bottom of the ninth that broke a 2-2 tie and enabled them to sweep the three-game series.

The Sox had tied the game in the top of the ninth on Oscar Gamble's home run off starter and winner Marty Pattin, who dueled young Ken Kravec into the final inning. Kravec opened the Royals' ninth by issuing a walk that brought on reliever Lerrin LaGrow.

LaGROW GOT THE first out of the inning as Al Cowen's sacrificed the runner, Amos Otis, to second. The righthander LaGrow then intentionally walked lefthander John Mayberry, another percentage move that set up a double play possibility.

But Lemon called in rookie lefthander Randy Wiles, just up from Iowa, when the Royals summoned pinch hitter Joe Lahoud, who never got a chance to hit. Kansas City manager Whitey Herzog, who also knows about percentage plays, called in righthanded-hitting John Wathen.

Wiles, replaced an angry Chris Knapp on the roster and hadn't even had time to get his name sewn on the back of his uniform, arriving just before game time Sunday. Knapp, who had won nine games, was sent down after being bombed in the first inning of Friday's loss to the Royals and the promise that he'd be called up by Sept. 1 at the latest didn't appease Knapp at all.

WILES WORKED the count to one and two against Wathen who then ripped a sharp single to Ralph Garr in left as Otis headed for the plate. Whether Garr could have nailed Otis at home became a moot point when Garr bobbled the ball, the winning run coming home unchallenged.

The young lefthander opened the game by giving up a triple to George Brett, then retired the next 11 straight before Cowens blooper one into left field.

THE BALL DROPPED between a seemingly complacent Garr and shortstop Tim Nordbrook, who had the ball blown away from him and towards Garr. The error was charged to Nordbrook, who has committed five errors in the club's last three games. Mayberry followed with a single that gave Kansas City a 1-0 lead.

The Sox tied it in the sixth on Jorge Orta's RBI double that scored Garr all the way from first but then went on to load the bases without scoring another run.

A double by Cowens and single by Joe Zdeb made it 2-1 in the seventh, but Oscar Gamble led off the Sox ninth with his 20th home run of the year to tie it at 2-2.

KRAVEC, WHO TOOK the loss and is 7-3, faced the minimum in five of the eight innings he worked, walking only two and striking out five. But Pattin, now 4-2, was equally impressive, facing the minimum in six of the nine frames he worked, walking two and scattering six hits. The Royals got only four hits off Kravec.

The Sox have now lost six of their last seven since winning an extra-inning thriller against the Royals in the first game of Comiskey Park doubleheader eight days ago. They open a four-game homestand against Seattle and Cleveland tonight.

Lions win, 4-3 in 16th inning

Rico Heredia's two-out double down the right-field line in the bottom of the 16th inning gave the Logan Square Lions a thrilling 4-3 victory over arch-rival Arlington Heights Post 208 in the Cook County American Legion Baseball Tournament at Recreation Park in Arlington Heights Sunday. The victory qualified Logan Square to meet Oak Lawn late Sunday night.

Jim Eaton's rightfield single started the winning Logan Square rally. Mike Ledna then sacrificed him to second base. After Jim Passolt grounded out to Arlington's third pitcher of the day, Dennis Drolet, Heredia hit the first pitch for his game-winning hit, scoring Eaton.

The game, a 4½ hour marathon, started two hours late, because the umpires had to come from Wilmette where they officiated the Oak Lawn-Wilmette contest won by Oak Lawn, 6-2.

Early scoring by both teams created the mistaken impression that the contest might become a slugfest. Except for Logan Square's winning rally, all scoring stopped after the top of the fifth when the Lions tied the score at 3-3.

Arlington, the defending 1976 American Legion national runnerup, jumped on the scoreboard first. In the first inning, Mike Jennings singled, Frank DeSimone sacrificed him to second and Mike Mayerek delivered a fun-scoring single.

Arlington Heights increased their lead to 3-0 in the second. A bases loaded walk to John Mertins produced the second run and Jennings' sacrifice fly created the third.

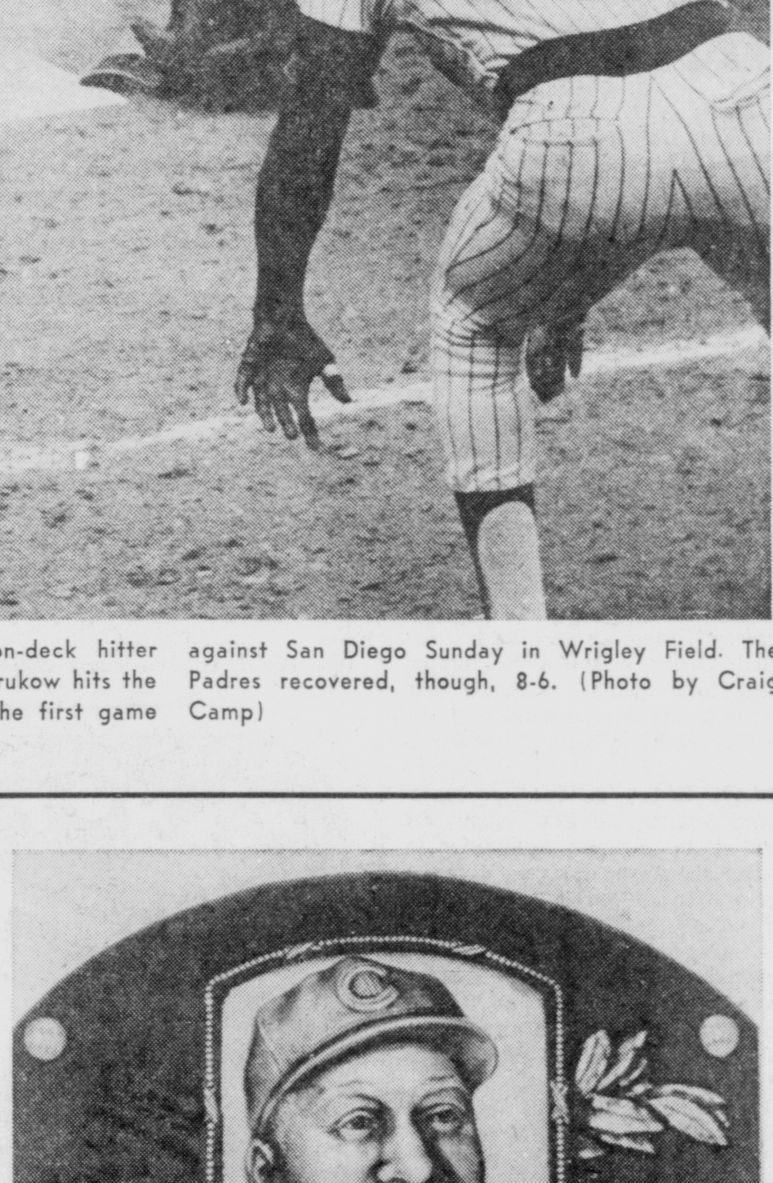
Logan Square fought back, however. The Lions tallied in the second when Tim Prokof's single drove in Mike Marshall.

Poor Arlington fielding then aided Logan Square's second and third runs each.

In the fourth inning, Marshall tripled to rightfield and scored when Arlington second baseman Jennings bobbled Dave Martin's ground ball. The error was Arlington's first of five this day.

Logan Square's tying run in the fifth inning resulted from an Arlington mental, rather than physical error. With two outs and men on first and third, Arlington first baseman Doug Harth fielded Heredia's ground ball. Harth, who could have either thrown home or fired to Jennings covering first, could not make up his mind and just held the ball while Mike Ledna scored from third base.

Arlington now plays Wilmette tomorrow night at Recreation Park. Gametime has not been determined.



Hall of Fame doors open to Banks, Lopez

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — Though it may be blasphemy, it seems only fair to point out that even Hall of Famers have sometimes failed in the pinch.

Even Ernie Banks. (Blasphemy of blasphemies!)

But Banks welcomes the suggestion.

"I've had a lot of bad days," said Mr. Cub. "Bad days tend to get you awfully discouraged. When you strike out with the bases loaded in the last half of the ninth, you really feel down.

"BUT THE PEOPLE at Wrigley Field never allow you to stay down too long," said the eternally smiling Banks. "Cub fans look at the players not only by the way you perform on the field, but they also take an interest in your personal life. They know you are a human being.

"Our fans here are fantastic — they are loyal," Banks added. "Do you know what loyalty is? Do you know what that means to a ballplayer?"

Byline report

Art Mugalian

"When you start to get down on yourself, a fan will say 'stay with them, hang in there, we'll get 'em tomorrow. That's loyalty."

Banks will enter the Hall of Fame today, along with five others including former White Sox manager Al Lopez, in ceremonies here. Banks' baseball credentials are formidable: 512 home runs, 1636 RBIs, 1305 runs scored.

Even more impressive was his total of 19 years with one ball club, 19 years of total dedication to a team that only once made faint designs on first place. Banks

Soto stops Pirates

From Herald Wire Services

Steve Carlton drove in the tie-breaking run with a sacrifice fly Sunday and became the major league's first 16-game winner with a seven-hitter in Helping the Philadelphia Phillies complete a three-game sweep of the Los Angeles Dodgers with a 3-1 triumph.

Carlton, who struck out eight, added two hits to the attack as the Phillies knocked out loser Don Sutton, 10-6, to extend their winning streak to five. The game attracted 40,268 fans to establish a three-game club record of 138,313.

Los Angeles used a walk to Ron Cey, an infield grounder and Glenn Burke's single to take a 1-0 lead in the second, but Garry Maddox got the Phillies even when he lined his 10th home run of the season over the left field wall in the bottom of the inning.

NL baseball

ROOKIE MARIO SOTO hurled a seven-hit shutout and the Cincinnati Reds erupted for five unearned runs in the seventh inning to score a 6-0 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Soto and the Pirates' Jim Rooker were locked in a scoreless duel through the first 6½ innings before the Reds broke the game open with the aid of three costly Pittsburgh errors.

George Foster led off the Reds' seventh with a double and took third on a single by Johnny Bench. Dave Concepcion grounded to Rooker, who threw wildly into center field with Foster and Bench both scoring on the play and Concepcion going all the way to third. Dan Driessen forced Concepcion at the plate and then stole second. Cesar Geronimo walked and both runners advanced on a wild pitch by Rooker.

IN HOUSTON, Ken Reitz had four hits, including a two-run homer, and Ted Simmons also knocked in two runs to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to a 5-2 triumph over the Houston Astros.

Rookie John Urrea struck out four and allowed six hits in seven innings to gain his fourth victory in seven decisions. Reliever Birch Metzger earned his fifth save with two innings of relief.

Gary Alexander drove in four runs with a triple, double, bases-filled walk and a sacrifice fly to lead the San Francisco Giants to a 7-4 victory over the New York Mets. John Montefusco pitched 6 2/3 innings in the rain-interrupted game, winning his fifth game against nine losses and Gary Lavelle pitched hitless relief to earn his 15th save. Montefusco scattered six hits and the only earned run he allowed came on Len Randle's leadoff homer in the first inning.

Dick Ruthven tossed a five-hitter to earn his first victory since April 19 and Rod Gilbreath hit a two-run homer to lead the Atlanta Braves to a 6-2 triumph over the Montreal Expos.

Ruthven, 4-8, had missed two months of the season after suffering a tendon injury in his foot in St. Louis on May 1. Ruthven walked four and struck out three but lost his shut out bid in the seventh inning when Jose Morales hit his first homer of the year.

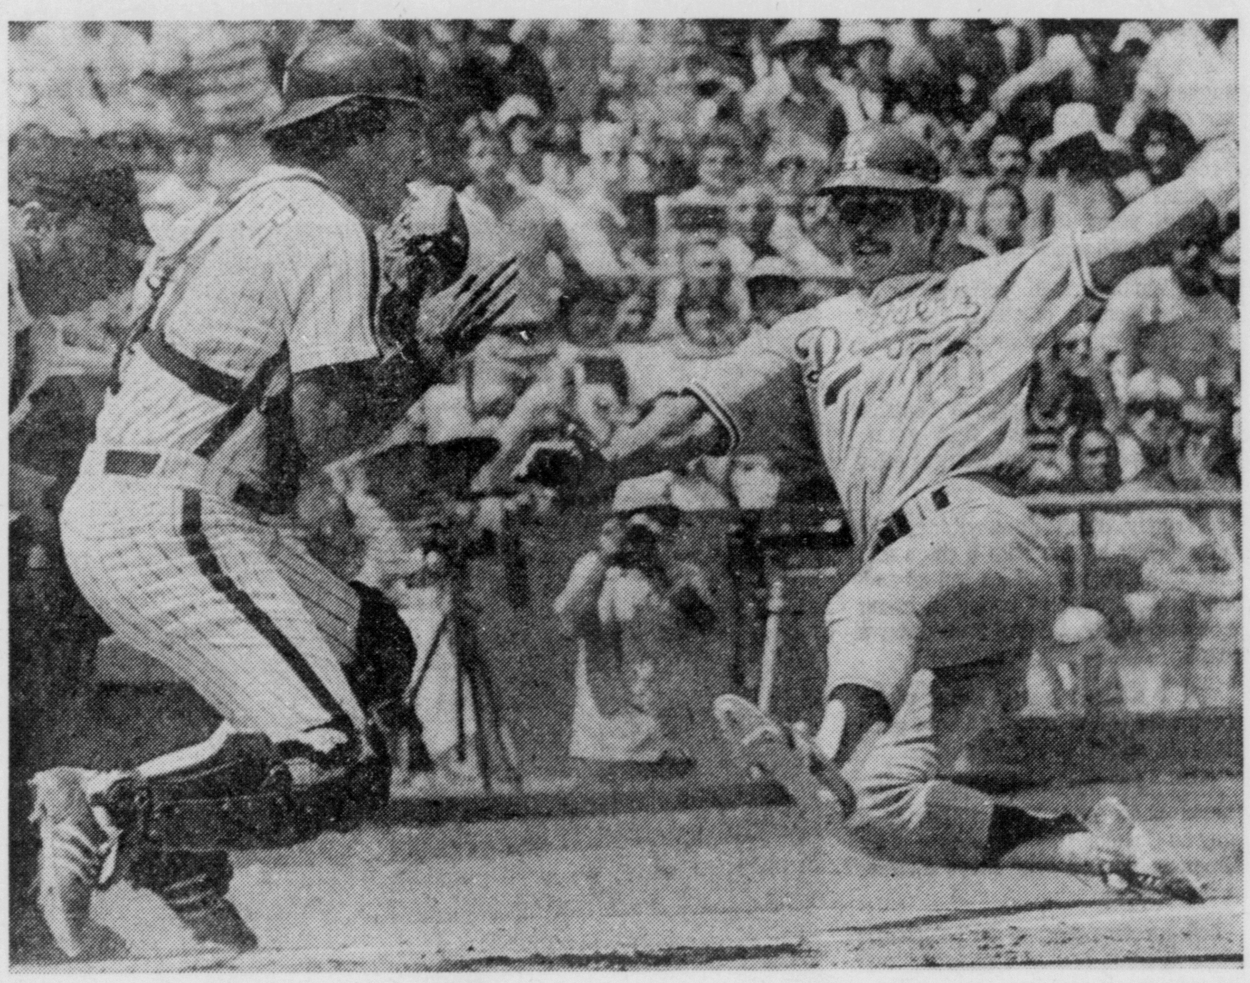
Woodfield splits in regionals

DETROIT — The Woodfield Babe Ruth Cubs are still alive in regional action here after splitting the first two games of the tournament. The Cubs were defeated in the opener, 2-1 by Michigan's state champion, but rebounded against Berkley, Michigan, 4-0 Sunday.

Woodfield, which captured the Illinois state title, will face the Ohio champ in further eliminations tonight at 8:30 p.m. A team must win five regional games to advance to the nationals.

In the opener, Michigan jumped on Woodfield starter Jay Saladino for a single, double and triple for all the runs it needed. Michigan hurler Bill Choks limited Woodfield to just two hits — by Bill Hajek and Pat Griffin — to notch the verdict.

Woodfield's bats came to life in the second game in support of hurler Pat Griffin. Dave Manning, Griffin and Hajek all singled for a pair of runs in the third inning while an error, singles by Tony Stompanato and Dave Grant and Cass Peterson's sacrifice fly produced another pair in the fifth.



MEETING AT HOME. A three-way collision looms at the plate as Dodger Ron Cey appears to have the ball in his hip pocket, but is still not assured of scoring as Phillie catcher Tim McCarver has the base well guarded. Cey did score, but the red hot Phillies triumphed, 3-1.

Minnesota, Texas register victories

From Herald Wire Services

Dave Goltz pitched a five-hitter for his 14th victory while Mike Cubbage stroked a two-run homer and drove in five runs Sunday to pace the Minnesota Twins to an 11-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Goltz, 14-6, struck out seven and hurled his seventh complete game in reaching a career one-season high for victories. His shutout was ruined in the eighth inning on a single by Fred Kendall and Duane Kuiper's run-producing double to left field.

Cubbage's homer, his sixth, came off Cleveland starter and loser Dennis Eckersley to give the Twins a 2-0 lead in the second inning. He added a bases-loaded double in the seventh to increase Minnesota's lead to 9-1.

Rod Carew extended his hitting streak to 10 games, collecting four hits, including three doubles, to boost his league-leading batting average to .387.

DOCK ELLIS survived a bases-loaded jam in the first inning and went on to pitch an eight-hitter in leading the Texas Rangers to a 4-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

The Tigers got their only run in the first inning on a triple by Tito Fuentes and an error by Mike Hargrove. Steve Kemp then singled and Jason Thompson walked to load the bases but Ellis got Ben Oglivie on a pop out and Milt May on a grounder to first.

Back-to-back doubles by Tom Grieve and Jim Sundberg, following an error by Fuentes on Bump Wills' grounder to second, got Texas two runs in the third. Texas scored twice in the eighth on run-scoring singles by Bert Campaneris and Willie Horton.

The victory raised Ellis' record to 6-9 but he is 4-3 since joining Texas on June 15.

AL baseball

BERNIE Carbo hit a ninth inning leadoff homer and Fred Lynn added a three-run insurance shot to give the Boston Red Sox their 10th straight victory, a 5-2 decision over the Oakland A's.

Rick Wise, 8-4, went 8 1/3 innings before Bill Campbell came on to register his 19th save for the Red Sox, who swept their entire nine-game west coast road trip and opened up a 3½-game lead over second place Baltimore in the American League West.

Paul Blair's two-run homer capped a six-run third inning that carried the New York Yankees to a 7-1 victory over the Seattle Mariners behind the six-hit pitching of Mike Torrez.

The Yankees, who lost the first two games of the series to the expansion Mariners, batted around in the third against John Montague and reliever Bill Laxton.

Willie Randolph started the uprising with a double and Roy White, Thurman Munson and Chris Chambliss hit successive singles for the first two runs. After a sacrifice bunt by Lou Piniella, Laxton relieved and gave up a sacrifice fly to Reggie Jackson and a two-run double to Craig Nettles before Blair homered.

BOBBY BONDS slugged a two-run homer, his fifth in as many games, and rookie Rance Milliniks had three singles and drove in two runs to spark the California Angels to a 6-3 triumph over the Baltimore Orioles.

Bonds' 26th homer following a single by Jerry Remy in the seventh came an inning after California had erased a 3-0 Baltimore lead with a four-run rally. Milliniks' third single drove in two runs to cap the sixth inning uprising after Don Baylor had singled home one run and Dave Chalk had doubled in another.

Consecutive doubles by Steve Brye, Jim Wohlford and Lenn Sakata snapped a 2-2 tie in the fifth inning and sent the Milwaukee Brewers to a 7-5 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays and a sweep of their doubleheader.

The Brewers won the opener 6-2 behind the six-hit pitching of Lary Sorensen and Bob McClure.

Bears' loss raises even more questions

by BOB GALLAS

The quarterback derby is more undecided than ever, three cornerbacks are not injured and to top it all off, the Bears lost their preseason home opener to the New Orleans Saints, but still managed to find some good in the whole mess.

Disgusted as they were with dropping a 20-14 decision Saturday to a team that posted only a 4-10 record last season, a beating may have been just what the doctor ordered for a team that may have been reading too many of its own press releases.

"I hate to lose but everybody's been talking about how great we are," observed middlelinebacker Don Rives. "Maybe we just needed someone to knock us off our pedestal."

"WE ALL HAD the attitude we could beat anybody," Rives continued. "But when you know you're good, you have to play that way."

For the second week in a row, the Bears fell victim to a poor start, then came roaring back in the second half, But this week, it just wasn't enough.

Down 20-14, the Bears were on the march in the closing minute before a Bob Avellini pass intended for James Scott was intercepted at the Saints' goal line, sending the fans scurrying for home.

"The Saints played exactly the way I want us to play," said Pardee. "Their line comes off the ball both ways and their backs head up the middle."

PARDEE SAID he was disappointed in his team's performance, but offered no excuses. "We have a long way to go. We've put in a lot of plays. But we're not playing physical, aggressive football."

Saturday's affair did nothing to resolve the battle for quarterback as Avellini and Mike Phipps again split duties, with Phipps opening the first half and Avellini coming in to mop up in the second half.

In the opener against the Jets, Avellini was shut out while the Bears put up 20 points during Phipps' tenure. Saturday, the tale was the same but the cast members were switched. Phipps was blanked in the first half and Avellini was the recipient of 14 points. Neither, however, looked impressive.

Phipps completed four of 11 aerials for 50 yards and was intercepted once. Avellini's performance was somewhat better, nine-for-21 for 93 yards and a touchdown, a 13-yard toss to Steve Schubert in the third quarter.

"I PREFER playing the second half," said Avellini, who prefaced his remarks by saying he'd rather play the whole game. "You can see what's going on out there in the first half and get the jitters out. Avellini, however, is the schuduled starter in Pardee's rotation as the Bears travel to Oakland to meet the Raiders Saturday.

Pardee saw no change in the neck and neck battle for the signalcaller's berth.

"You can't really evaluate things yet," offered Pardee. "Mike (Phipps) was under a lot of duress the first half and had three dropped balls."

There were a few Bears' bright spots Saturday, such as Tommy Reamon's 92-yard runback of a kickoff in the fourth quarter. Reamon showed some of the speed he's noted for on the run, but said it's too early to tell how well he's progressed after off-season knee surgery.

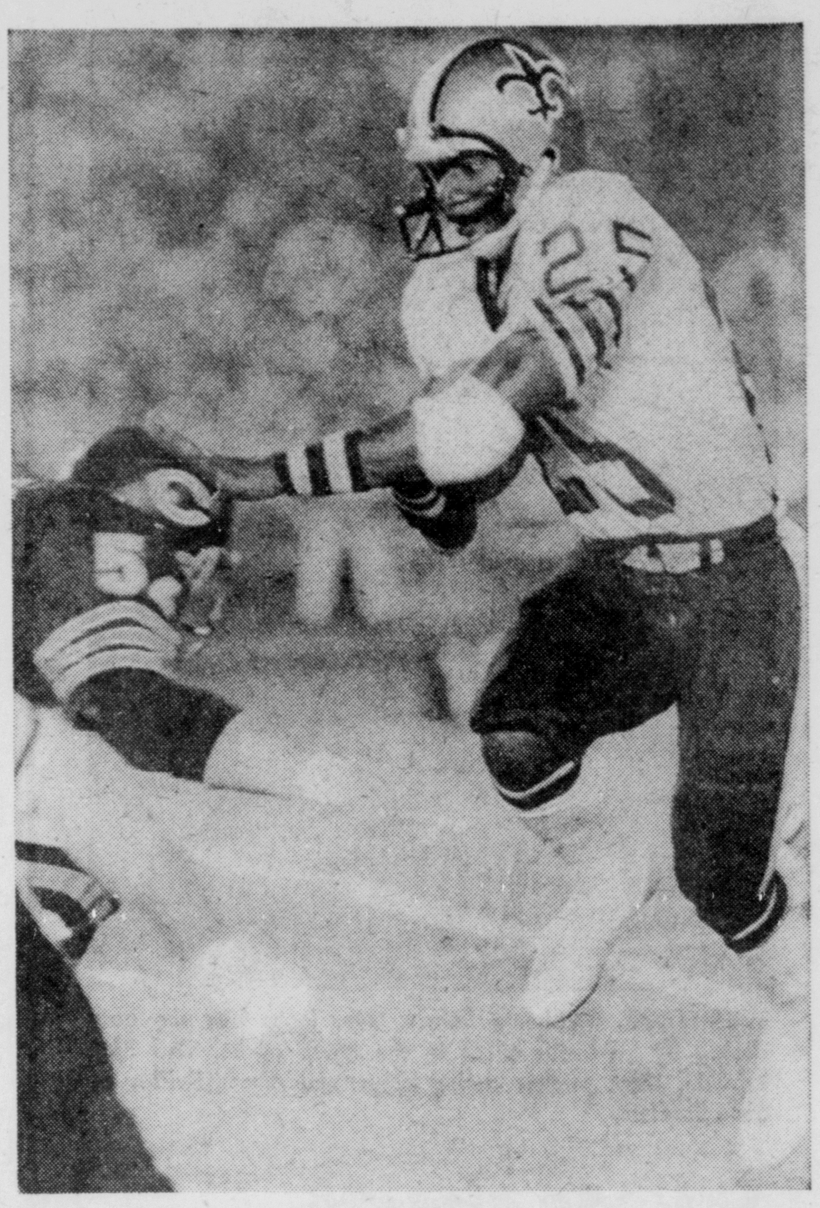
"I ONLY CARRIED the ball three times," Reamon said. "Who can say what kind of a ballplayer I am until I carry the ball more."

Walter Payton saw more action than many expected, carrying 12 times for 45 yards.

But the biggest bright spot, as far as the revitalized Saints of coach Hank Stram are concerned, was the return of quarterback Archie Manning, felled by an arm and shoulder injury late in the 1975 season.

Manning riddled the Bears' secondary, completing nine of 14 attempts during his first half workout for 170 yards, including a 54-yard bomb to Larry Burton.

The Bears suffered some minor injuries in the contest. Cornerbacks Mike Spivey and Terry Irvin came up with minor leg injuries and join Virgil Livers on the injured cornerback squad. Running back Larry Schreiber suffered a pulled hamstring.



SAINT SHUFFLE. New Orleans' Leon McQuay jitterbugs around Bear linebacker Tom Hicks during end-around surprise that caught the Bears napping for a long gain. The Saints defeated the Bears, 20-14 in Soldier Field Saturday night.

never wanted to play anywhere else.

LOYALTY IS A two-way street as far as Mr. Cub is concerned.

Banks joined the Cubs as a scared, 22-year-old rookie shortstop in 1953, his contract having been purchased from the Kansas City Monarchs, the famous Monarchs of the dying Negro leagues.

In 1971, his knees painfully arthritic and his batting eye all but gone, Banks retired to the ranks of first base coach, hitting instructor and finally, manager of groups sales.

His position in group sales allows him to be at Wrigley Field every day, to be with the fans who revere him. He, in turn, draws a sense of joy from them.

For 19 years, Ernie gave the Cubs and their persistent fans the very best of himself. Still, he must have fueled their disappointment more often than anyone would care to remember. He must have struck out with the bases loaded dozens of times, but the fans never booed and Banks never showed a dark side either.

"IF REPORTERS EVER wrote anything bad about me, I didn't say anything," Banks noted. "I figure that if I made a mistake, they were simply pointing it out. They have a right. The way I look at it, everybody has a job to do."

Banks' job has never seemed like a job to him, though.

"Isn't this a great life?" he asked, not expecting more than one possible answer. "Life is beautiful at Wrigley Field. Oh, how I wish I could still play. I really miss it."

Still lean and sinewy, Banks looks like he could put on the uniform and play two today. But at 46, he has no illusions.

"You know you can't play anymore," he lamented. "But you still have that good, youthful feeling that you can. . . ."

BANKS REMEMBERS when his appreciable talents began to fade. "My legs went first," he said. "Then I found that I couldn't concentrate for long periods at a time.

"But, you know, I never thought about making it to the Hall of Fame," he continued. "Now that I'm going in, it's great, really thrilling. I'm excited about it, I really am. And I'm thankful to all the people who helped me get there.

"But all along I kept thinking that I hadn't done enough."

Ernie, you did plenty.

Kratzert withstands charge for golf win

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. — Billy Kratzert, who once quit golf in disgust, overcame a strong challenge from rookie playing partner Curtis Strange Sunday to finish with a final round 3-under-par 69 and a 19-under total 265 to win the Greater Hartford Open by three strokes.

Kratzert earned the $42,000 top prize after a hard fight over the par-71 Wethersfield Country Club course that saw him tied with Strange at 16-under at the turn. Kratzert, the third-round leader, was behind one sroke when he scored a birdie on the par-five 14th hole to tie him with Strange at 18-under.

Strange, a 22-year-old Virginian who has been on the tour only six weeks, missed a shot that cost him $15,000 and sole possession of second place when he double bogied the final hole to put him 15-under. He finished third. Grier Jones and Larry Nelson, who were already in the clubhouse after each had scored 65 to give them 16-under 268 totals, wound up in second place.

SEATTLE—Unlimited hydroplane driver Jerry Bangs was killed Sunday when he was tossed from his speeding boat during the first heat of the $30,000 Seafair Trophy Race.

Race officials said it was not clear whether Bang's boat, The Squire, flipped over completely and landed upright or whether it went through a flat ground roll.

Bangs was rushed by helicopter to Harborview Medical Center but a nurse at the hospital said he never made it to the emergency room.

The accident happened shortly after the third lap of the race with The Squire running in third place. After the mishap, the boat continued to run in slow circles on the course until someone was able to get on board and turn off the engine.

Alexander serves aces for victory

NORTH CONWAY, N.H.—Australian John Alexander won his first tournament in more than two years Sunday with a 2-6, 6-4, 6-4, victory over Manuel Orantes of Spain in the finals of the $125,000 Volvo International tennis tournament.

The 12th-seeded Alexander, whose last win was in Tucson, Ariz., in 1975, earned the victory on the basis of his rocket serve — six aces — which became stronger as the two-hour match wore on.

Alexander earned $20,000, a new car and a moped for is win. Orantes, still seeking his first 1977 tournament win, earned $10,000.

Waltrip drives to win at Talledega

TALLADEGA, Ala. — Darrell Waltrip, driving relief for an exhausted Donnie Allison, cruised to an easy victory Sunday in the $205,000 Talladega 500 stock car race at Alabama International Motor Speedway.

Waltrip crossed the finish line in a Chevrolet under a caution flag after challenger Skip Nanning, last year's rookie of the year, blew an engine in his Chevrolet with six laps to go after a head-to-head duel.

Cale Yarborough finished second in a Chevy that was plagued by gear problems and Manning was third. Ricky Rudd drove his Chevrolet to a fourth place finish, followed by Chevy driver Lennie Pond.

Allison set a blistering pace at an average speed of 178.694 miles per hour, 10 miles an hour over the old record for the 2.6-mile track, until a pair of caution flags slowed the pace beginning at lap 138 after Janet Guthrie's Chevrolet blew an engine.
